TIRED OF LIFE.

A Young Married Woman Commits Suicide With a Revolver.

A BRIEF BUT PATHETIC NOTE.

"My Heart is Broken—I Am Going to Die—Kiss My Dear Papa and Mamma Good-bye."

A shocking suicide took place about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, at 115 West Ninth Temple street, the victim of her own rash act being a young married woman named Ruby Vivian. The deceased and her husband had been living for a week or so past in a room at the house above mentioned, and which they rented from Mr. J. C. Spaulding, upholsterer, etc. They are described as having apparently led a very quiet life during their occupancy of the apartment there, and the indications to those around were that their relations were of a harmonious character. The husband, Ruby Vivian, however, is said to have spent a good deal of his time, as a dealer in the game of faro, at certain club rooms in this city. At the time named yesterday a pistol shot was heard in the room occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Vivian, and Officer Doggett, who happened to be in the immediate neighborhood, and Officer Hunt entered the apartment a moment or two later, when the unfortunate woman was then lying on the floor by the bedside, and to her feet was a Smoulder Cloth revolver. There was a bullet hole in her left breast, and heart had been pierced, and the ball had gone clean through the body. She was attired in her ordinary house dress, but had on her corset on. Life was extinct. The eyes were partially closed, and the face wore a placid look. He does not remember the time the pistol shot, but the officer was on the scene. Coroner Harris was communicated with, and the body was shortly afterwards removed to the Dinh Undertaking Parlors.

The husband who was present, was arrested and taken to the City Hall, pending the inquest, and was visited by a number of his friends during the evening. They all spoke of him as "a good fellow," and expressed their sympathy with him deeply.

The deceased woman, who is about twenty-one years of age (the husband being ten or eleven years her senior) went to Mr. Spaulding in his room, only a few minutes before the firing of the fatal shot, and requested the loan of a bed sheet, stating that she wanted to write a note. A few minutes later the report of the pistol was heard. She had left behind the following note, written in a tolerably good hand, but the spelling was decidedly bad:

"My Dear Husband—Dear Harry—You think I am worse to you, but I am not. I never live and think that you do too, you one. My heart is broken. I can no longer bear the temptations of writing to you. I am going to die. Kiss my dear pops and mamma good-bye. Your poor wife, Ruby Vivian."

"Harry, you said you wished I was dead. Oh, just imagine my feeling."

The portion was written on the opposite page of the paper.

Alongside the deceased lay another note, written by the husband about five o'clock, which ran:

Ruby, I am going to take a bath at the Warm springs. Will be home in two hours. It is now o'clock. Will be back at 7. Harry.

Vivian made a statement to a police officer substantially as follows:

"I left the house about o'clock in the afternoon, telling my wife I was going to the Warm Springs for a bath, and I did go there. I was there about an hour, and some of the boys asked me to wait until 5:30 so we could all go home together. I came to the city, and turned home about 5 o'clock to get my wife. I found my home in the room, with the door locked and the key in the outside lock. I knocked and I felt the door was not fastened. I pushed it open. I saw my wife on the floor. I ran to her and called her by her name. She was lying on her stomach. I turned her over, but getting blood together somewhere, I started back to the house. I ran around to Spaulding's and have somebody see what happened. I went in with an officer and found she was dead."

To a newspaper reporter, who interviewed him subsequent to the tragedy at the City Hall, the husband said his wife's maiden name was Ruby Gates, and that she formerly resided at Cedar Wood Springs with her parents where he met and married her. They had been married five years, and had never had any trouble, aside from little differences which are liable to occur now and then between married people. He stated, further, however, that his wife was subject to spasms and he thought she had one when he saw her lying on the floor after the shooting. He stated that she had frequently threatened to commit suicide, and on starting "behind that his wife was dead," as she had asserted in the note found lying beside the suicide.

The inquest was held this morning before Coroner Harris, but nothing developed beyond what is stated above. After hearing all the testimony, the jury found that the deceased died from the effects of a pistol shot, inflicted by her own hand, while suffering from mental illness. They fully exonerated the husband from blame. He was at once released from custody.

THE GREAT UNWASHED.

Justice Kesler's Court Parades a Full and Varied Programme.

In the Police court this morning Justice Kesler had rather more work than he could conveniently get through by noon, and this afternoon expected to have another long sitting. Subjoined are the cases who made their bow to his Honor on yesterday:

George Smith, some time on a charge of vagrancy, and was discharged with a caution.

John Wells, a pitiful man, had gone to a charge of speaking at a house of ill fame, and was fined $10.

Ring Sumwally, Sampson and Jim at possible should I work it out, where the Court is by gave him an opportunity of doing.

Charles Hayward, another member of the vagrant band, had a pitiful tale which stated, indeed the Court to know if he was allowed to appeal to parties here, on his own recognizances.

B. H. Bethel, charged with a similar charge, was found guilty, but the Court gave him, and sentence will be pronounced tomorrow morning.

Thomas Wall, "a well-conducted" was the order given in the case of J. H. Gibbs, who had pleaded guilty to impropriety under the case of treasure found in a box consigned to the care of William Gray.

Gus. Armstrong went up for one month's rigid and wound up with the old tramp. He was charged with vagrancy and was required to pay $5, or in default serve out the time.

Mike Carroll, an Irishman of the most pronounced type, pleaded guilty to getting drunk on Saturday night. Sentence was suspended.

Joe Bailey, yet another vagrant of the tar of justice. He is said to be exceptional in the vagrant's art, and fearing that "everything looked against him" he pleaded guilty to the charge. "Come up tomorrow," said the Court, as it was an hour too late to well consider his punishment.

Joe Bailey, yet another "Samuel," who seems to have an distinct idea as to the future course, what he would do if there he be set free. He was discharged after a word of warning. He has undertaken to serve Salt Lake instead him with all speed.

J. J. Dunn, a Saturday night tipsy, pleaded guilty to drunkenness. Evil entrance is come and lesson is he will have time to speculate on profit and loss.

Pat Sullivan pleaded guilty to the same offence last year.

Steve Hendricks, not quite so tipsy, and accordingly at the status of Barrows but otherwise passed his time in disturbing the peace. He made an effort to keep the peace, and sentence will be passed tomorrow morning.

A gentle youth appearing in the dock, charged with Delilah (ostensibly not 1,111 and "year" by a charge of drunkenness. Sentence to morrow morning.

Three Delilahs, not quite so tipsy, and accordingly at the status of Barrows but otherwise passed his time in disturbing the peace. He made an effort to keep the peace, and sentence will be passed tomorrow morning.

Three Delilahs, not quite so tipsy, and accordingly at the status of Barrows but otherwise passed his time in disturbing the peace. He made an effort to keep the peace, and sentence will be passed tomorrow morning.

Three prisoners were dockets to appear in court to be otherwise:

Harry Grill and Tom Doran, charged, B. H. Evans, charging the peace and abusive language; A. Grant, charging Thomas Evans, petit larceny; W. Palmer, drunk; Frank Clayton, Emanuel Palmer, Charles Kaplanke (not Magistry), each handed in for petit larceny.

DEATH OF CHARLES LAMBERT.

The Deposed Veteran Passed Peacefully to Rest.

Elder Charles Lambert died at his farm, in Granger, Salt Lake County, at 2:30 a.m. today, May 2d.

Charles Lambert, son of Charles and Sarah Greater Lambert, was born at Kirk, Deighton, Yorkshire, England, August 30, 1815.

Naturally devout, but rather independent in religious matters, he studied all the religious creeds he had a chance of seeing, acquainted with what a young man, but could not feel satisfied to endorse any of them until the Gospel, as presented by the Latter-day Saints, was presented to him, which he received it gladly and has since gauged his life by it. He was a master builder and stonecutter at that time, with well-filled worldly prospects, which he himself soon after he was baptized, which occurred July 14, 1840, and sailed for America to unite his fortunes with the Saints, arriving at Nauvoo.

A more self-sacrificing, generous man would be hard to find. He never appeared to have a selfish thought. His whole care was for the work of God and the good of others, and he more devoted his whole attention than he bestowed towards the erection of the Nauvoo Temple, and his efforts upon that sacred structure were conspicuous up to the finishing touch, or by his own hand, and the completion of the interior font, the stone carving connected with which was largely his own work.

In November, 1844, he was married in marriage to Mary Ann Cowan, who joined with him the patriarchal ceremony which were the common lot of the Saints living at that period. At the time of his marriage he became the guardian of his wife's brothers, Angus and David, and their sister Lenora, and afterwards proved a faithful and kind father to them. He remained in Nauvoo after the finishing of the Temple and assisted in gathering the Saints, and with the remainder of the Saints, was finally expelled, when he left his property in the hands of the mob and began his journey to the West. He endured untold hardships while laboring in Iowaand Missouri to obtain an outfit for the family's journey to Salt Lake Valley, and succeeded in securing the site of this city in the fall of 1848.

He was ordained a Seventy on the 6th of April, 1845, in Nauvoo, and set apart as one of the presidents of the Twenty-third quorum. He filled two missions to England, and labored with real and success in spreading a knowledge of the truth. He was an industrious, exemplary man, devoted to his family and kind to his neighbors. He was a faithful husband and loving father, and literally wore himself out in the cause of God.

The cause of his death was a stroke, with which he was seriously affected during midwinter, and from which he suffered a relapse last Friday a week ago, the effects of which he never rallied. A few hours of his death, he finally grew easy, and passed away as if he were going to sleep.

A noble, upright, conscientious man than Brother Charles Lambert would be difficult to find. His memory was phenomenal. He whole career showed to his without guile, as he always manifested a firmly repugnance to any anything that savored of deceit. No person could be acquainted with him without entertaining for him a sentiment of unqualified respect.

The funeral service will be held on Wednesday, May 4th, at 11 a.m., in the Seventh Ward assembly room.

Returned from England.

This morning we had the pleasure of meeting Elder George W. Young, of this city, who returned last week from a mission to Great Britain. He left home for that country on March 22nd, and was stationed at Liverpool for one month, and subsequently labored in the Bedfordshire and Wilts conference of the same field. Elder Young was then appointed to labor in the Hyde Park district, which he found very pleasant. He labored in the Hyde Park district, which he found very pleasant.
