

UTAH MAKES GOOD AT BIG EXHIBIT

Council Bluffs Comment on State Products Is Most Complimentary.

GREAT VARIETY IN THE SHOW

From Hard Wheat to Nuts from Dixie The Showing Is a Banner One in Every Line.

That Utah has maintained her record as a prize taker in all lines pertaining to products of the soil has again been exemplified at the great horticultural congress which has just completed its session at the city of Council Bluffs, Iowa. The prizes won by Utah at former great fairs were exhibited in a prominent place together with the prize winning exhibits from this state, and according to information received by D. E. Burley, general passenger agent of the Oregon Short Line railroad, from George W. Westerdaal, of the passenger department of the Union Pacific railroad at Omaha, Utah's exhibit at the horticultural congress was among the foremost of the west. Mr. Westerdaal says in a letter to Mr. Burley: "The State of Utah is certainly well represented, and the genial young men in charge of the same are making friends with every one."

Mr. Westerdaal accompanies his letter with a copy of the Council Bluffs Nonpareil, in which the following complimentary notices of the Utah exhibit are contained:

At the section set apart for the exhibits from the State of Utah is a display of trophies won by that state, which is dazzling. Ten large cups are shown, giving an impressive idea of the possibilities of the state. The largest, known as the Hearst trophy, was won by the state exhibit at Albuquerque. It is about four feet high, made of potted silver, weighs 300 pounds, and is valued at $2,000. The cup is filled with Richmond roses, which blend prettily with color scheme of green and red which is carried out in the Utah exhibit. One little smaller and quite as beautiful in design, was awarded to the state at Sacramento, Cal., at the irrigation congress held there in 1907. It was won by Utah for excellence of fruits and irrigated products. Utah also won at Sacramento a plate and cup given by Harrison Grey Otis for the best display of wine grapes. A gorgeous decorated cup, known as the sugar beet cup, was won by the state exhibit five years ago, lost the succeeding year, won again in 1908 and will now remain in Utah. The Utah exhibit, under the supervision of Mr. J. O. Havemeyer on behalf of the American Sugar Refining company as an award for the best display of sugar beets. A massive silver affair adorned with clusters of grapes was won by the exhibit of canned fruits from a single canner.

The Anheuser Busch trophy was awarded for the best brewing barley. For the best display of products from a single farm irrigated by a pump, the huge cup presented by the Joshua Handy Machine Works of San Francisco was won by W. C. Cresswell of Brigham City.

VALUED AT $10,000. The display of trophies is valued at about $10,000 and occupies a prominent place in the Utah exhibit, which is in charge of J. Edward Taylor, secretary of the state board of horticulture, E. G. Thuesen, horticulturist from the agricultural experiment station, and Robert S. Northrup, horticulturist from the experiment station.

The Utah display is fenced in with massive green pillars connected by gilt chains, with red and green electric globes on each post. A large case of Utah honey is artistically arranged, combs of honey being stacked along the sides of the tall case to give the effect of a border, while in glasses and jars the strained honey is shown.

The different varieties of nuts raised in Utah are arranged in glass jars and bottles, and cases of dried and evaporated fruits are shown in large numbers. Overlooking the entire display, which the exhibit was gotten together, Mr. Northrup stated that the display of apples was limited, only 10 varieties out of the many grown there being shown here. Bananas and figs showing the beehive and done in purple and gold add to the effect of the decorations. Here a register is kept and all visitors to this department are requested to enter their names.

Becoming tired of her residence in the city jail, Ellen Dixon, arrested many times for drunkenness and disturbing the peace, decided to change her place of abode some time yesterday. She quietly walked out of her cell and has gone "wild." Organizations which are expected to have their membership present are the Central Betterment league, juvenile court section of the State Teachers' association, a committee of the Federated Women's clubs, Canyon crest, Lund Home for Boys, and juvenile court workers. As a result of the conference and suggestions are expected as to amendments for the present juvenile court laws.

NO HIGHWAY APPROPRIATION.

In the opinion of Senator Reed Smoot Congress will not, during this session, pass a bill appropriating money for the building of model roads throughout the country. Senator Smoot has written a letter to Gov. Cutler explaining more fully the matter of the nation's opportunity to help Utah in the good roads matter. He states that while Logan Page will attend, that he cannot help Utah except with his knowledge of road building. Secy. Wilson has tried for many years to secure legislation granting money for the building of model highways in the interior, but Senator Smoot writes that he has been informed by Secy. Wilson that all of these bills have been unsuccessful, and that one is at present pending which he does not think will receive consideration this session.

SAYS REMEDY IS VALUABLE.

Nancy Lundberg, by her guardian, has entered suit in the city court to recover the sum of $100 alleged to have been paid to Peter and William Greenhalp on a contract by which defendants guaranteed to cure the girl of fits. The contract price was $125, of which $100 has been paid, and Nancy still suffers from fits the same as before taking the treatment. Plaintiff says she has been advised by reputable physicians that the treatment she has been receiving is valueless for her malady, and the suit is brought to recover the amount paid.

FOUNDRY TAKES APPEAL.

The Utah Foundry and Machine company yesterday filed suit in the Third district court against the Utah Gas & Coke company on appeal from the judgment of Judge J. J. Whitaker in the city court awarding the machine company judgment for $235.99 for a bill of goods furnished to the gas company between December, 1907, and May, 1908. The contention of the gas company is that the machine company was in a conspiracy with W. O. Wright, formerly employed by the gas company, in which an effort was made to cheat the gas company by excessive prices for materials.

SUES COAL COMPANY.

Frank W. Jennings wants $2,000 damages from R. P. Morris and Edward H. O'Brien for the non-fulfillment of a coal contract and filed suit in the Third district court yesterday to recover the amount. Jennings claims that he was employed by the coal firm of Morris & O'Brien to dispose of coal for them in San Francisco on a commission basis, and Jennings alleges that he disposed of 2,000 tons to a firm in the coast town, and the local company refused to fill the order. Plaintiffs ask for 8 per cent interest from Aug. 31, 1907, in addition to judgment for $2,000.

SUES TO RECOVER.

Two suits were brought yesterday in the Third district court to recover amounts from the Star Hotel company, insolvent, by parties who invested money in the corporation. W. M. Beechley asked for $600, which he alleges he paid into the company on a purchase of $1,000 of stock, while Leggett claims he is $1,000 "to the bad" on the same deal. The defendants
