THAT MACHINE.

Paul Bene had been under police surveillance for some time, though he was unaware of the fact. Finnan, whose duties were now and again set against some visit of denunciation, yet he itself knew Count Gondrecourt.

"One day he turned into the police depot in a new suit of clothes.

"Look, M. Finnan, I'm a gentleman!" he cried, as soon as he saw his friend. "Yes! Bene is caught at last."

He held an opened letter upon the officer's table.

The letter ran as follows:

"I suppose it is its way through the post. Bene. It is addressed to Paul Bene. I repeat it. A man is whatever he pays for his thoughts and some thousand ... dollars too. Monsieur, if you decide to be stand the letter, it necessarily is expensive. I have not injured the envelope. Make ... which we leave the business. What do you say?

"Good. I think you have done a smart piece of work. What does the letter say?"

"The commissary adjusted his pince nez and read:

"That infernal machine you sent me last week threatens to do some mischief or any one's mortal injury. It is all out of gear. Come down at once and remove it. It is in a dangerous condition. It is especially dangerous and extremely impossible for me to bring it to you.

"Bene was frightened.

"Read the signature, monsieur," he said impatiently.

"The signature!"

"Is the name not known to you?"

"Henry Vrent! I don't call it to mind."

"Not Mlle. Vrent, Yvonette Vrent?"

"Paul Bene's sweetheart?"

"The same. Bene is her brother."

"Yes! He supplies his sister's family with bombs, does he? A pretty warm nest of anarchists, by monsieur! M. Finnan! It should gain you promotion."

The detective's oily looking eyes ran more liquid.

"And not without trouble and work," he replied. "I have watched Bene's residence, off and on, for the past six months. He has no sympathies. Oh, no! Gomez and gang of evil."

"I shall arrest the whole bunch," said Finnan.

"They will get word of you and escape."

"Escape! I'll take them directly after the ceremony. . . . . .

. . . . . .

When Paul Bene received Henri Vrent's letter, he had no suspicion that Finnan and the police officer had already perused it, nor did he, when he perceived to Modon, where his bureau desk, notice that the detective shadowed his movements.

But the contents of the bag which Bene carried with him, excited the detective's curiosity to such a pitch that it was only by dwelling constantly upon the order to be obtained from a whole-some sense of ignominious fear he prevented himself from keeping off the tailing object.

It is an ill passion that never renders a good service unconsciously.

So Finnan waited outside the Bitte house until Bene, as the latter knew very well, had repaired the dastardly bombs which had got out of working gear, and until Yvonette thought well to let her Easter depart. The moon shone when Bene sought the station, defective at beds.

A week later a merry party assembled at the office of the —th arrondissement, where Bene and Yvonette signed away their bonds.

Finnan was there too, but single handed.

His mien—for it was not to be supposed he would attack such an undertaking alone—were awaiting him as directed in the neighborhood of the Cafe Gruner in the Boul St. Denis.

The unity of that proceeding was palpable soon after when the whole wedding party drove off to the cafe for dejeuner.

Finnan would have made an excellent inquisitor. He hovered around the cafe as a hawk over the pee he has disabled.

The joy of anticipation shone in his shady, liquid eyes. When he felt the absolute point of activity, he swooped down upon his unsuspecting victims and startled them with a sentence.

"Madame and monsieur, it is my duty to arrest you, every one."

His motions seemed sinuous, enfolding the party.

Bene paused, his glass to his lips.

"I have not the pleasure of your acquaintance, monsieur," he said. "Tell me, whether you are an officer of the law or not you are knowing under a delusion. I will ask you to withdraw, with an apology."

"M. Bene," returned Finnan, "I have the advantage of you.

Bene jumped to his feet.

"Finnan! who are you and what is your business?" he cried impatiently.

"Fraud, the detective. My business, to arrest you and your confederates."

"The charge?"

"Of being anarchists of evil intent, dangerous to society. M. Bene, in addition, of being the manufacturer and distributor of explosive bombs."

"Good heavens!" shouted Bene certainly. "This is mad. Where is the proof, the witness? Morbleu! I hold you responsible!"

Proud brusquely drew a letter from his pocket. The act was unwitting, not of plan, but the force of habitual passport him to avoid it about.

"Leave," he said.

"The infernal machine you sent me last week threatens to do some mischief or any one's mortal injury. It is all out of gear. Come down at once and remove it. It is in a dangerous condition. It is especially dangerous and it is extremely impossible for me to bring it to you."

"The letter is addressed," added Finnan, "to Henri Vrent. Yvonette, Bene, received a copy of it. Bene is the accused."

Silence followed. Finnan glanced.

"AH," said the officer, "Vrent! What are you to him, MM. Vrent and Bene?"

Bene's hands shook longer.

"Mon ami and brother," he said, while his white cheek mantled. "An inventor of the European aspection. If Finnan, not responsible for behalf the world the sense of a secret, which has been a secret, are sacrifice to the law of which my friend Henri is addicted."

"The what about the machine?" interrupted Finnan.

"A bomb."

"And its cracks?"

"A secret! I have the honor of being my secretary of the year's legale. It would give me pleasure, monsieur, to explain, you are the officer—at the Bureau aquatic?"—Kilkenny.

AFTER SAVING VIS.

Down the lake lake which lies from the park to the hills buried a young girl with flaxen tresses. Not till she had crossed the gushing lake, which is perceived to Modon, where his bureau desk, notice that the detective shadowed his movements.

But the contents of the bag which Bene carried with him, excited the detective's curiosity to such a pitch that it was only by dwelling constantly upon the order to be obtained from a whole-some sense of ignominious fear he prevented himself from keeping off the tailing object.

It is an ill passion that never renders a good service unconsciously.

So Finnan waited outside the Bitte house until Bene, as the latter knew very well, had repaired the dastardly bombs which had got out of working gear, and until Yvonette thought well to let her Easter depart. The moon shone when Bene sought the station, defective at beds.

A week later a merry party assembled at the office of the —th arrondissement, where Bene and Yvonette signed away their bonds.

Finnan was there too, but single handed.

His mien—for it was not to be supposed he would attack such an undertaking alone—were awaiting him as directed in the neighborhood of the Cafe Gruner in the Boul St. Denis.

The unity of that proceeding was palpable soon after when the whole wedding party drove off to the cafe for dejeuner.

Finnan would have made an excellent inquisitor. He hovered around the cafe as a hawk over the pee he has disabled.

The joy of anticipation shone in his shady, liquid eyes. When he felt the absolute point of activity, he swooped down upon his unsuspecting victims and startled them with a sentence.

"Madame and monsieur, it is my duty to arrest you, every one."

His motions seemed sinuous, enfolding the party.

Bene paused, his glass to his lips.

"I have not the pleasure of your acquaintance, monsieur," he said. "Tell me, whether you are an officer of the law or not you are knowing under a delusion. I will ask you to withdraw, with an apology."

"M. Bene," returned Finnan, "I have the advantage of you.

Bene jumped to his feet.

"Finnan! who are you and what is your business?" he cried impatiently.

"Fraud, the detective. My business, to arrest you and your confederates."

"The charge?"

"Of being anarchists of evil intent, dangerous to society. M. Bene, in addition, of being the manufacturer and distributor of explosive bombs."

"Good heavens!" shouted Bene certainly. "This is mad. Where is the proof, the witness? Morbleu! I hold you responsible!"

Proud brusquely drew a letter from his pocket. The act was unwitting, not of plan, but the force of habitual passport him to avoid it about.

"Leave," he said.

"The infernal machine you sent me last week threatens to do some mischief or any one's mortal injury. It is all out of gear. Come down at once and remove it. It is in a dangerous condition. It is especially dangerous and it is extremely impossible for me to bring it to you."

"The letter is addressed," added Finnan, "to Henri Vrent. Yvonette, Bene, received a copy of it. Bene is the accused."

Silence followed. Finnan glanced.

"AH," said the officer, "Vrent! What are you to him, MM. Vrent and Bene?"

Bene's hands shook longer.

"Mon ami and brother," he said, while his white cheek mantled. "An inventor of the European aspection. If Finnan, not responsible for behalf the world the sense of a secret, which has been a secret, are sacrifice to the law of which my friend Henri is addicted."

"The what about the machine?" interrupted Finnan.

"A bomb."

"And its cracks?"

"A secret! I have the honor of being my secretary of the year's legale. It would give me pleasure, monsieur, to explain, you are the officer—at the Bureau aquatic?"—Kilkenny.

AFTER SAVING VIS.

Down the lake lake which lies from the park to the hills buried a young girl with flaxen tresses. Not till she had crossed the gushing lake, which is perceived to Modon, where his bureau desk, notice that the detective shadowed his movements.

But the contents of the bag which Bene carried with him, excited the detective's curiosity to such a pitch that it was only by dwelling constantly upon the order to be obtained from a whole-some sense of ignominious fear he prevented himself from keeping off the tailing object.

It is an ill passion that never renders a good service unconsciously.

So Finnan waited outside the Bitte house until Bene, as the latter knew very well, had repaired the dastardly bombs which had got out of working gear, and until Yvonette thought well to let her Easter depart. The moon shone when Bene sought the station, defective at beds.

A week later a merry party assembled at the office of the —th arrondissement, where Bene and Yvonette signed away their bonds.

Finnan was there too, but single handed.

His mien—for it was not to be supposed he would attack such an undertaking alone—were awaiting him as directed in the neighborhood of the Cafe Gruner in the Boul St. Denis.

The unity of that proceeding was palpable soon after when the whole wedding party drove off to the cafe for dejeuner.

Finnan would have made an excellent inquisitor. He hovered around the cafe as a hawk over the pee he has disabled.

The joy of anticipation shone in his shady, liquid eyes. When he felt the absolute point of activity, he swooped down upon his unsuspecting victims and startled them with a sentence.

"Madame and monsieur, it is my duty to arrest you, every one."

His motions seemed sinuous, enfolding the party.

Bene paused, his glass to his lips.

"I have not the pleasure of your acquaintance, monsieur," he said. "Tell me, whether you are an officer of the law or not you are knowing under a delusion. I will ask you to withdraw, with an apology."

"M. Bene," returned Finnan, "I have the advantage of you.

Bene jumped to his feet.

"Finnan! who are you and what is your business?" he cried impatiently.

"Fraud, the detective. My business, to arrest you and your confederates."

"The charge?"

"Of being anarchists of evil intent, dangerous to society. M. Bene, in addition, of being the manufacturer and distributor of explosive bombs."

"Good heavens!" shouted Bene certainly. "This is mad. Where is the proof, the witness? Morbleu! I hold you responsible!"

Proud brusquely drew a letter from his pocket. The act was unwitting, not of plan, but the force of habitual passport him to avoid it about.

"Leave," he said.

"The infernal machine you sent me last week threatens to do some mischief or any one's mortal injury. It is all out of gear. Come down at once and remove it. It is in a dangerous condition. It is especially dangerous and it is extremely impossible for me to bring it to you."

"The letter is addressed," added Finnan, "to Henri Vrent. Yvonette, Bene, received a copy of it. Bene is the accused."

Silence followed. Finnan glanced.

"AH," said the officer, "Vrent! What are you to him, MM. Vrent and Bene?"

Bene's hands shook longer.

"Mon ami and brother," he said, while his white cheek mantled. "An inventor of the European aspection. If Finnan, not responsible for behalf the world the sense of a secret, which has been a secret, are sacrifice to the law of which my friend Henri is addicted."

"The what about the machine?" interrupted Finnan.

"A bomb."

"And its cracks?"

"A secret! I have the honor of being my secretary of the year's legale. It would give me pleasure, monsieur, to explain, you are the officer—at the Bureau aquatic?"—Kilkenny.

ATTER SAVING VIS.

Down the lake lake which lies from the park to the hills buried a young girl with flaxen tresses. Not till she had crossed the gushing lake, which is perceived to Modon, where his bureau desk, notice that the detective shadowed his movements.

But the contents of the bag which Bene carried with him, excited the detective's curiosity to such a pitch that it was only by dwelling constantly upon the order to be obtained from a whole-some sense of ignominious fear he prevented himself from keeping off the tailing object.

It is an ill passion that never renders a good service unconsciously.

So Finnan waited outside the Bitte house until Bene, as the latter knew very well, had repaired the dastardly bombs which had got out of working gear, and until Yvonette thought well to let her Easter depart. The moon shone when Bene sought the station, defective at beds.

A week later a merry party assembled at the office of the —th arrondissement, where Bene and Yvonette signed away their bonds.

Finnan was there too, but single handed.

His mien—for it was not to be supposed he would attack such an undertaking alone—were awaiting him as directed in the neighborhood of the Cafe Gruner in the Boul St. Denis.

The unity of that proceeding was palpable soon after when the whole wedding party drove off to the cafe for dejeuner.

Finnan would have made an excellent inquisitor. He hovered around the cafe as a hawk over the pee he has disabled.

The joy of anticipation shone in his shady, liquid eyes. When he felt the absolute point of activity, he swooped down upon his unsuspecting victims and startled them with a sentence.

"Madame and monsieur, it is my duty to arrest you, every one."

His motions seemed sinuous, enfolding the party.

Bene paused, his glass to his lips.

"I have not the pleasure of your acquaintance, monsieur," he said. "Tell me, whether you are an officer of the law or not you are knowing under a delusion. I will ask you to withdraw, with an apology."

"M. Bene," returned Finnan, "I have the advantage of you.

Bene jumped to his feet.

"Finnan! who are you and what is your business?" he cried impatiently.

"Fraud, the detective. My business, to arrest you and your confederates."

"The charge?"

"Of being anarchists of evil intent, dangerous to society. M. Bene, in addition, of being the manufacturer and distributor of explosive bombs."

"Good heavens!" shouted Bene certainly. "This is mad. Where is the proof, the witness? Morbleu! I hold you responsible!"

Proud brusquely drew a letter from his pocket. The act was unwitting, not of plan, but the force of habitual passport him to avoid it about.

"Leave," he said.

"The infernal machine you sent me last week threatens to do some mischief or any one's mortal injury. It is all out of gear. Come down at once and remove it. It is in a dangerous condition. It is especially dangerous and it is extremely impossible for me to bring it to you."

"The letter is addressed," added Finnan, "to Henri Vrent. Yvonette, Bene, received a copy of it. Bene is the accused."

Silence followed. Finnan glanced.

"AH," said the officer, "Vrent! What are you to him, MM. Vrent and Bene?"

Bene's hands shook longer.

"Mon ami and brother," he said, while his white cheek mantled. "An inventor of the European aspection. If Finnan, not responsible for behalf the world the sense of a secret, which has been a secret, are sacrifice to the law of which my friend Henri is addicted."

"The what about the machine?" interrupted Finnan.

"A bomb."

"And its cracks?"

"A secret! I have the honor of being my secretary of the year's legale. It would give me pleasure, monsieur, to explain, you are the officer—at the Bureau aquatic?"—Kilkenny.

ATTER SAVING VIS.

Down the lake lake which lies from the park to the hills buried a young girl with flaxen tresses. Not till she had crossed the gushing lake, which is perceived to Modon, where his bureau desk, notice that the detective shadowed his movements.

But the contents of the bag which Bene carried with him, excited the detective's curiosity to such a pitch that it was only by dwelling constantly upon the order to be obtained from a whole-some sense of ignominious fear he prevented himself from keeping off the tailing object.

It is an ill passion that never renders a good service unconsciously.

So Finnan waited outside the Bitte house until Bene, as the latter knew very well, had repaired the dastardly bombs which had got out of working gear, and until Yvonette thought well to let her Easter depart. The moon shone when Bene sought the station, defective at beds.

A week later a merry party assembled at the office of the —th arrondissement, where Bene and Yvonette signed away their bonds.

Finnan was there too, but single handed.

His mien—for it was not to be supposed he would attack such an undertaking alone—were awaiting him as directed in the neighborhood of the Cafe Gruner in the Boul St. Denis.

The unity of that proceeding was palpable soon after when the whole wedding party drove off to the cafe for dejeuner.

Finnan would have made an excellent inquisitor. He hovered around the cafe as a hawk over the pee he has disabled.

The joy of anticipation shone in his shady, liquid eyes. When he felt the absolute point of activity, he swooped down upon his unsuspecting victims and startled them with a sentence.

"Madame and monsieur, it is my duty to arrest you, every one."

His motions seemed sinuous, enfolding the party.

Bene paused, his glass to his lips.

"I have not the pleasure of your acquaintance, monsieur," he said. "Tell me, whether you are an officer of the law or not you are knowing under a delusion. I will ask you to withdraw, with an apology."

"M. Bene," returned Finnan, "I have the advantage of you.

Bene jumped to his feet.

"Finnan! who are you and what is your business?" he cried impatiently.

"Fraud, the detective. My business, to arrest you and your confederates."

"The charge?"

"Of being anarchists of evil intent, dangerous to society. M. Bene, in addition, of being the manufacturer and distributor of explosive bombs."

"Good heavens!" shouted Bene certainly. "This is mad. Where is the proof, the witness? Morbleu! I hold you responsible!"

Proud brusquely drew a letter from his pocket. The act was unwitting, not of plan, but the force of habitual passport him to avoid it about.

"Leave," he said.

"The infernal machine you sent me last week threatens to do some mischief or any one's mortal injury. It is all out of gear. Come down at once and remove it. It is in a dangerous condition. It is especially dangerous and it is extremely impossible for me to bring it to you."

"The letter is addressed," added Finnan, "to Henri Vrent. Yvonette, Bene, received a copy of it. Bene is the accused."

Silence followed. Finnan glanced.

"AH," said the officer, "Vrent! What are you to him, MM. Vrent and Bene?"

Bene's hands shook longer.

"Mon ami and brother," he said, while his white cheek mantled. "An inventor of the European aspection. If Finnan, not responsible for behalf the world the sense of a secret, which has been a secret, are sacrifice to the law of which my friend Henri is addicted."

"The what about the machine?" interrupted Finnan.

"A bomb."

"And its cracks?"

"A secret! I have the honor of being my secretary of the year's legale. It would give me pleasure, monsieur, to explain, you are the officer—at the Bureau aquatic?"—Kilkenny.

RUSSIA'S RULER'S RICHES.

"Garfield Among European Sovereigns is the Czar.

The Emperor Paul, who one year was actually not one of the most brilliant, was yet the son of the greatest monarch of the dynasty. He not only will be the son of his father, but he will pursue such laws, but also endeavor his popularity with the material means of maintaining the prestige of the Romanoff family. Paul I. was a man of great personal courage, and retaining family in Europe as well yet—yet. Paul I. set aside a vast amount of landed property, under the name of the imperial family estate, and he made it a law of all good dukes and grand dukes was not to be the direct line of succession, while the sovereign and the heir apparent. Together with this law, he made it a law that no to be supposed out of the funds of the state.

Here appeared of the Romanoffs large real landed estate, and the imperial family was in different services of Russia of all, and so were, in count of, and large by the Czar, from the whole of "Sol" land. The total land of the imperial family amounts to 3,500,000 hectares, or more than 8,500,000 acres, and with no fewer than 10 members of the imperial family to whom it belongs, the average of each member is now pretty average of over 850,000 acres. In 1881 it was over 1,000,000 acres. The adjacent Russian estate appears and distinct from extensive private property, and from the revenue state domains, administered by the Minister of agriculture and the Ministry of Finance, and from the real estate of the imperial court, amounting, in fact, as far as ascertained, to about 3,000,000 acres, and from the forests be imperial grand dukes. In the ownership of the state the appanages possessed over 500,000 peasants, which probably in land and pay for the benefit of the imperial family now for the benefit of the imperial family now

In 5,000,000 rubles and lasting to years up to their liberation, altogether 11,000,000 rubles, or $12,500,000. The department of imperial appanages has since the time became hundred proprietors, the largest agriculturist, and the largest wine producer in the empire. Its imperial enterprises in timber, sugar, cotton and other products are rapidly developing on a proportionately large scale. During a century of existence it has furnished the cultural branches of the imperial house with altogether 35,000,000 rubles, and the revenue of the property amounts to 20,000,000 rubles. A large reserve fund is employed in preparing to meet their ever growing demands.—London Times.

Muskets.

While the introduction of portable firearms into Europe is of comparatively recent date, the use of firearms in the Mohammedan of eastern Asia is a very early period. In Bronjiuses, who made a pilgrimage to Jerusalem in the year 1483, mentions the use of firearms, and also that the Mohammedans carried only the ammunition and the pots, and bags, leaving the muskets, followed after, like oddities in a sad procession.

Loading these cumbersome arms was a slow operation. They were clumsy and awkward to handle, the ball and powder were carried separately, and the adjustment and adjustment of the match took a long time.

Gradual long, however, improvements began to be made. The guns became lighter in construction, and the soldiers carried their ammunition in bags slung over their shoulder belts. Instead of the bags, they carried a number of little leather covered wooden cases, each of which held a charge of powder. A punch, in which the bullets were carried loose, and a priming horn hung at the side of the soldier.

As late as the time of Charles I muskets were not so well in use, and it was not until the beginning of the eighteenth century that flintlocks were successfully employed.—Harper's Round Table.

The Big Brother.

Children early learn to adapt the manners and the speech of the elder brother; the small boy is dictated by the one who is at college or in business much more than by his governess or his tutor. Still a wise governess once: "If only you can get your chest on well started, if he is manly, truthful and of high principles, the others in the family follow right on in the same direction. The little brother will take great pains with his elder boy."

In a neighborhood or a school the large boy influences social opinion, and set the fashion for the rest. Always there is some larger boy whom the little lad greatly admires, who is his model, whose smile or whose frown makes or breaks his happiness. The big brother does not know it, but he is in this changeful world the one personage whose angles never bruises, whose judgments are wise and will never pass out of fashion.

To his sisters he has the opportunity of showing chivalry, kindness and the deference of the stronger to the weaker. To the baby of the household he is little short of a king. The big brother, bless his heart, when he is a fine fellow, is the noblest and generous fellow, is as important a member of society as any one who can be mentioned.

If, as sometimes happens, he is either a bully or a coward, then he is more complicate that he would be if he had been born in a Christian family. He is hardly, for he has, so to speak, broken faith with all that was expected of him.—Harper's Bazar.

What is a Gentleman?

The old story about the French marquis who replied that the Almighty would think twice before damning a gentleman of quality, doubtless finds an echo in all genuinely "gentlemanly" minds, but there is another tale in Evelyn's diary which puts what I believe to be the Christian position as pointedly as the other does that, the pagan position: "March 16, 1652—V. told a friend of mine who accompanied him to the gallows and gave him some consolation, that it was a thing of a rush and hoped and believed God would deal with him like a gentleman"—i. e., with courtesy and consideration. Everybody would admit that breaking has not a little to do with gentle instincts, but these gentlemen may be trusted to do so much as 80.—Cornhill Magazine.

Dr. McCosh's Experience.

The late Dr. McCosh first arrived in Princeton, he was sadly afflicted with a bilious condition, and on his way to the college stopped at the inn and took refreshment. When he was received by the faculty, one of them expressed regret that the day was so uncomfortable. "Yes," said the doctor as he removed the pepper-sauce bottle from his pocket, "it is hot as Cayenne hot—and the whisky at the public house is very hot."—San Francisco Argonaut.

SUMMONS.

In the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the State of Utah, County of Salt Lake.

Caleb J. Clark, plaintiff, vs. William H. Platts, defendant. Summons.

The state of Utah sends greeting to William H. Platts, defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED TO APPEAR in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff in the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the State of Utah and to answer the complaint filed in said action, which is on file in the office of the clerk of said court, a copy of which is served on you with this summons, and to answer the complaint filed in said action within twenty days after the service of this summons on you, if served within this county, or within forty days if served out of this county, or in the district, within twenty days, otherwise within forty days, excluding the day of service, and if you fail to answer the complaint within the time aforesaid, the plaintiff will take judgment against you according to the prayer of said complaint.

The nature of the claim of the plaintiff is for a decree of the Court decreeing the bonds of matrimony existing between the plaintiff and defendant, and the custody of the minor child mentioned in the complaint, and for such other and further relief as may be deemed just and equitable in the premises.

Given under my hand and seal of said Court, this 8th day of September, A. D. 1897.

DAVID C. DUNCAN, Clerk.

By M. H. Hodgs, Deputy Clerk.

S. W. Lewis, Attorney, 10 Main St.

ESTRAY POUND NOTICE.

ONE THIN GRAY HORSE, ABOUT 8 years old; mane, tail and legs dark; no left brand.

One sorrel horse, about 7 years old. Fair size; no brands.

If the above described animals are not claimed and taken away on or before October 1st, 1897, they will be sold at Public Pound at 2 p. m. on that day.

JOHN G. BATTIS, Poundmaster.

ESTRAY POUND NOTICE.

ONE ROAN MARE, ABOUT 9 YEARS old; star in forehead; hind feet white. Was at pound.

If the above described animal is not claimed and taken away on or before October 1st, 1897, it will be sold at Public Pound at 2 p. m. on that day.

JOHN G. BATTIS, Poundmaster.

NOTICE OF COURTESY'S SALE.

WHEREAS GILBERT AMOS COURTESY, a resident of Salt Lake City, Utah, Salt Lake County, Utah Territory, on the 6th day of September, A. D. 1897, executed and delivered to the undersigned, Trustee, a certain chattel mortgage, which said mortgage was duly filed in the recorder's office in and for said Salt Lake County, Utah Territory, on the 6th day of September, A. D. 1897, at 10 o'clock a. m., and duly recorded in said office in Book 1 of Mortgages, page 1, to secure the payment of a certain promissory note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1897, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1898, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1899, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1900, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1901, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1902, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1903, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1904, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1905, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1906, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1907, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1908, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1909, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1910, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1911, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1912, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1913, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1914, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1915, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1916, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1917, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1918, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1919, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1920, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1921, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1922, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1923, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1924, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1925, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1926, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1927, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1928, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1929, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1930, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1931, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1932, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1933, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1934, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1935, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1936, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1937, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1938, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1939, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1940, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1941, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1942, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1943, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1944, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1945, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1946, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1947, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1948, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1949, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1950, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1951, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1952, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1953, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1954, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1955, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1956, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1957, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1958, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with said mortgage, for the sum of $1,000 payable on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1959, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said date, payable monthly, and a certain other note of said mortgagor, of even date with