SEALS AND WAX.

THE REVIVAL OF AN OLD FASHION AND WHAT IT LEADS TO.

"A lively trade in the manufacture of seals has recently been developed," said a prominent stationer. "A complete outfit, such as has been made and offered for sale for two or three months past by local dealers, consists of a silver tray, oxydized or polished, of unique designs, hammered or plain, with a match-box to fit, a little bundle of adamantine tapers two and a half inches in length, half a dozen sticks of wax in as many hues and colors, and a pretty box to hold them and the little silver spirit lamp which liquifies the sealing material. The seal is not included, except in certain complicated bronze or silver patterns, such as lizard or alligator designs. If the material is solid silver the outfit is worth all the way from $20 to $50. A very fashionable and equally ugly plated sort can be purchased for $15. Lately, to meet the demand which has spread to the less fashionable portion of society, a cheap outfit, costing but 72 cents, has been made consisting of a neat pasteboard box containing the same articles.

"The seal most used is a German text initial placed upon a flat field and inclosed in plain concentric curcles or surrounded by a criss-cross tinting. Some ladies exceedingly democratic in their notions use an an English initial. Others have two or three letter monograms. Crests are very fashionable. Mottoes surmounted by the armorial crest of the family are correct in taste, and more extensively ordered now than six months ago. After the circle the shield is the outline most frequently called for. The dealers are often asked to select designs for purchasers. A lady who boasts of a great pedigree recently asked a Chestnut street clerk to assist her. Picking up Burke's 'Heraldry' he turned to the given name and showed his customer a coat-of-arms which he thought fitted her ancestry. Looking at it an instant, she said:

"'I'd like that real well—I believe I'll order one. But can't you put an alligator or easel or something that is all the rage now into that vacant spot in the corner of the shield? It would help fill up, you know!'

"This," continued the stationer, "is a sample of the mushroom element idea of amorial sealing. A lady said recently, in ordering a costly seal:

"'I don't care much what it is, so that it is good-sized and more stylish than Mrs. B.'s'

"The design which was given her was fearfully and wonderfully made. American flags, bold-headed eagles and all the wild animals to be found in the Zoo were chucked in promiscuously and conspicuously. The effect was shoddy and satisfactory, but it looked like a circus poster. There are about twenty different perfumes and colors in wax, and as many as a dozen shades of red, from the deepest Indian red to the bright scarlet."

"Is there any significance in the color empyed to seal the letter?

"There is. Flirtations in sealing wax are the latest racket. The ordinary red wax signifies business, and is supposed to be used only for business letters. Black is, of course, for mourning and condolence. Blue means love, and as we make four or five tints of this color each stage of the tender passion can be accurately portrayed. When pink is used, congratulation is intended. An invitation to a wedding or other festivity is sealed with white wax. Variegated colors are supposed to show conflicting emotions. Do you know that thimbles are being utilized to bear seals? Fact. The designs of that sort are mild just now, but are developing. We'll work the idea up, and think it well become fashionable.

The odors used in the wax are ravishing in their delicacy. The cheaper grades are as bad as the pomatum of a five-cent barber shop. The perfumery is the element of cost in the wax. A Paris firm makes the fidest imported article. The perfume of the burning wax fills an ordinary-sized apartment, and lingers about the envelope for hours'"—Philadelphia Times.

Ox-Horn Chairs.

"You have no idea what a demand there is for this kind of chairs," said a well-known furniture dealer to a reporter, as he proudly pointed at a beautiful specimen, made entirely of horns and exquisitely finished with silk plush and fringe. "No, it is not exactly a new idea," continued the furniture man, "for my firm has been turning them out for nearly a year. This style of horn chairs, finished with silk plush, easily sells for $100, while those finished with leather bring $75."

"How are they manufactured?"

"Well, you see, there are twenty-two horns used in this seat which we are examining. Of course a smaller number could be used; in some styles only eighteen are required, but these do not have as neat an appearance and are much cheaper. The mode of manufacture is quite simple. The horns after being thoroughly cleansed, steamed, and scraped to the proper thickness, are filled or stuffed with sawdust and glue. After being thoroughly dried and polished, the horns are fastened into the proper position with brass rivets and glue. Then follows the upholstering operation, which is very simple, but upon the whole the chairs thus made may be considered very artistic."

"And the demand—is there much call for this style of furniture?"

"Yes, indeed. There are many chairs now in use in several of the Nob-hill residences. We have shipped them to France, the Pacific islands, and many to the eastern and northern States. Orders are constantly coming in, and I may safely say the demand is increasing."

Copper-Greened Pickles.

Five of the wholesale pickle-dealers of Brooklyn, N. Y., admit that they use copper for the purpose of imparting a fresh and inviting appearance to their commodities, and one of them describes the process by which the fictitious coloring is imparted as follows: The pickles are placed in a vat and subjected to a steam heat of 140 to 160 degrees Fahrenheit. In the vat a quantity of alum and copper plates are added and the innocent cucumber or onion is subjected to contact with these harmless ingredients for a term of from three to nine hours. The pickles are then carefully washed, and are ready for the palates of the public.

One dealer said he discountenanced the use of copper plates and said he only used crystal of blue vitriol, a most appetizing adjunct. This highly agreeable method of "greening" the pickles and poisoning the public will not be further premitted by the health officer. He prefers his pickles straight.

Designs for Carpets.

In the school of designs, in south Kensington, there are several quotations which are regarded as axiomatic, and they unquivocally direct the efforts of the pupils. The following is the rule upon carpet designs:

1. The surface of a carpet, serving as a ground to support all objects, should be quiet and negative, without strong contrast of either form or colors.
2. The leading forms should be so disposed as to distribute the pattern over the whole floor, not pronouncing either in the direction of breadth or length, all "up and down" treatments being erroneous.
3. The decorative forms should be flat, without shadow or relief, whether derived from ornament or direct from flowers or foliage.
4. In color the general ground should be negative, low in tone, and inclining to the tertiary hues.

BLACK LEG.—The Reese River (Nev.) Reveille says: We are informed that the genuine black leg has appeared among the cattle of Reese River Valley, and that already a number of young animals have died from it. There seems to be no doubt that it is the regular black leg, while what has appeared here in former years was something else, even though quite as fatal. The black leg only seems to attack young and fat beeves. One afflicted with the disease was cut open in the shoulder which was lame. It was found to be very black and no blood flowed. Both of these are regarded as sure signs of the genuine disease. If it has appeared it should be carefully guarded against. The cattle of this section are now in very fine condition.

It Made a Difference

An Irishman employed adout a shop in Atlanta was one day surprised and delighted at the entrance of an old acquaintance. After ten minutes' gratification the friend left when Pat's employer said to him:

"So, Pat, you knew that chap in your own country, did you!"

"Och, an sure did I, an' it's a lucky day I met with him here. It's a fine boy he is, wid all his family. His grandfather was a general—his father was a general—and he'd been a general bisself if he had not come away.

"But what was he after in your pockets? I thought I saw him put his his fingers there rather silly."

Clapping his hands to his pockets Pat ascertained that both watch and pocket-book were missing.

"Murther!" he cried, gesticulating like a whole with a dozen harpoons in his side. "The spalpeen! the coorse! I know him well, wid all his family. His grandfather was hanged and his father was hanged—and he'd been hanged bisself if he'd not run away.

THE PASSION FLOWER.—The usual belief is that the "passion" flower derived its name because of the resemblance, or fancied resemblance, of the parts of the plant to the instruments of the Savior's "passion" and crucifixion. Thus the three nails through the hands and feet on the cross are represented by the stigmas, five authers represent the five wounds, the rays of glory or (as others say) the crown of thorns are represented by the rays of the corona, the ten parts of the perianth represent ten of the Apostles (Peter, who denied the Savior, and Judas, his betrayer, being absent. The bands of the persecutors are supposed to be indicated by the finger-like leaves of the plant and the "scourges" in the tendrils.

CONSUMPTION OF SUGAR.—we eat a good deal more sugar than we did five yearsago. In 1880 the annual consumption of sugar per head in this country was 41.3 pounds. In 1884 it was 51.8 pounds. At the same time much less molasses is used. Our total consumption of sweets is fifty-six pounds per head. In England it is sixty-seven pounds. We eat more than twice as much as France, three times as much as Germany, and eight times as much as Russia.

ALL SORTS.

The boy, asked what was the longest day in the year, promptly answered, "Sunday."

First farmer: "Do you feed your hogs corn in the ear?" Second farmer: "No; in the mouth."

Which is the stronger, an apple or a pear? An apple; it drew a pair out of the garden of Eden.

How did it happen that a bank cashier left the bank forever, without taking a cent? (He died.)

Washington dudines carry canes. And we don't know but what they are right. A cane in the hand is better than a stick of a lover after it.

"There's the rub," said the young lady, when asked by her lover, a good man, but not rich, if she would be able to do their washing if they were married.

My son is studying law, and I called to see if you know of any opening. Old Lawyer: Yes; the poor-house door is the most promising one for him.

Sammy, you're a naughty boy to call your aunt stupid. Go immediately and tell her you are sorry. (He goes.) "Aunty, I am sorry you are so stupid."

Anxious to please. Master of the house—"If any one calls, tell them I'm not in." Servant of the period—"And what will I tell them if they don't call?"

The man who is in the habit of giving up his seat to ladies in the hourse cars can lay claim to being a man of considerable standing in the community.

Soelety people wishing to appear wise get to talking history. Miss Parvenue: "Can you tell me, Mr. Q., what are the Knightsof the Bath?" Mr. Q.: "Saturday nights, I suppose."

A clergyman who married four couples in one hour the other evening remarked to a friend that it was "pretty fast work." "Not very," responded the friend, "only four knots an hour."

Miss Cleveland is becoming quite famous for her bon mots. In reply to a Western gentleman who asked her if she hailed from Buffalo she said: "Yes, we hail from Buffalo and we reign here."

The young lady having asked her S. S. class what lesson was taught us by the parable of the wise and foolish virgins, one of the smallest girls answered: That we should always be on the lookoutfor a bridegroom.

Farmer, to editor: I was surprised to see that fine obituary notice of Smith in your paper. I thought you were bitter enemies. Editor: well you know death softens asperities. And besides, I got 25 cents a line for it

"Oh, mamma," said a little girl who had stopped in front of a glass case containing dentists' samples, "here is just what you want." "I have all the teeth I require," replied the mother. "But you haven't a thing fit to crimp pies with, have you?"

Queer things happen at masquerade balls sometimes. One of them happened at Watch Hill the other night. Says a correspondent: "One young lady and her father were horrified to find that they had been making violent love to each other for half an hour and mutually agreed to keep the little episode a secret."

"Don't you think this bonnet is a little too young for me?" inquired Mrs. Shuttle of Job, as she was doing her final "prinking" at the glass before going out, "Never mind if it is. You won't have worn it more than six weeks befor it will be 'too old' and you will want a new one."

Johnny—"Teacher, what is an orchid?" Teacher—"An orchid is a queer little plant with a funny flower that does not look like a flower." "Oh, I'd like to see one, I never did." "Why, yes, Johnny, you've seen one. A ladys slipper, you know." "Oh, yes."

"Pa," said little Eddie McDonald, early this morning, "the storm signal is up."

"Is it, my son?"

"Oh, yes. Ma says she found a toothpick in the front door lock this morning and your shoe on top of the bureau, and she says it's going to be a cold day."

Mr. McDonald went down town without waiting for breakfast."

A very pretty little girl, only three years old, attracted the attention of passengers in a New York train for this city the other day, and finally one gentleman succeeded in getting her upon his knees. "Where are you going, sissy?" he inquired. "I'm doin' to Hartford," said the child, adding, eagerly, "I've got a new pair of flannel drawers! Did you ever have a pair of hannel drawers?" Further inquiries were smothered in the laughter of everybody within hearing.

A week ago a young miss, not a thousand miles from Kingstone City, received an offer of marreage from a suitor who did not stand high in the eyes of her father. The proposal was laid before the parents, who, without hesitation, offered his daughter an elegant sealskin sacque if she would return a negative reply to the young man's request. The second bid was accepted, and yesterday she appeared on the street in the much-coveted sealskin. The young man has received many congratulations on his narrow escape from a dreadful fate.

He—That lady yon mother? you're joking, surely. She is too young to have such a daughter.

He—mother—What did you observe, Mr. Smith!

He—(somewhat flustered)—Miss Jones was saying that you were her mother. I couldn't believe it, she looks so very young, you know.

"Oh, I see; you thought I might be her grandmother. Very natural mistake, Mr. Smith, very natural mistake." Smith goes out with an insane desire to kick himself, and Mrs. Jones and her daughter are severally mad as hops.

Why is a room full of married people empty? There is not a single person in it.

An exchange says that a woman who eats onions will keep a secret. She will also keep a man at a distance.

Every one has a cure for sore throat but simple remedies appear to be most effectual. Salt and water is used by many as a gargle, but a little alum and honey dissolved in sage tea is better. An application of cloth wrung out of hot wrter and applied to the neck, changing as often as they begin to cool, has the most potency for removing inflammation of anything we ever tried. It should be kept up for a number of hours; during the evening is the usually most convenient time for applying this remedy.
