SCHOOL BOARD IS REORGANIZED.

W. A. Nelden Succeeds W. F. Colton as President.

NEWMAN IS VICE PRESIDENT

The Newly Chosen Members All in Their Seats—Considerable Business Transacted.

The old board of education met last night and a new one—or rather a reorganized one—took its place. W. A. Nelden was chosen president and W. J. Newman vice president. These were the only officers elected. Mr. Dainberger, who had been mentioned in connection with the presidency, is evidently not a candidate, although he was given a complimentary vote by one of his colleagues. Partisan politics may be said to have been entirely eliminated from the contest, as Mr. Nelden was elected president by a Democratic majority, while he himself is the strongest kind of a Republican. This is the second time in the history of the board that a Republican has thus been honored by the Democratic members, the other case being that of Mr. Colton. The latter is retiring from the board and laying down the responsibilities of the presidency made an eloquent and informing speech, which was a strong plea for manual training for the great army of school children of this city. He spoke substantially as follows:

COLTON'S FAREWELL.

"The time has finally arrived when my term of office has expired. I part with you with sincere feelings of regret and desire to say that I appreciate very much the kind words with which the board received my resignation and the kind manner in which I was treated at the last meeting. I leave it with the best of wishes. I am grateful for the courtesy and consideration given me by individual members of the board and the honors they have exhibited toward me. I believe I have shown. My service in the public schools is revered with a great deal of regret. The work has been congenial to me. I appreciate the necessity of proper education for the young. The training of the youth who are soon to take the place of men and women of today is a most important matter and upon it depends the welfare of our local institutions of our State and country.

"Before taking my departure I desire to leave with you one thought, the need and necessity of which I trust will be made more plain as time goes on. In the strain and stress of modern life and competition we must lend ourselves to the circumstances and conditions by which we are surrounded. Properly educated and developed manhood and womanhood are essential to obtain the ends desired. And in this connection it appears to me that our system of education might be greatly improved. As the years go by the thought is more forcibly impressed on my mind that manual training should have a conspicuous place in our school system in order that the youth may fit themselves to the extent that they will be able to make not only a mere living, but a comfortable competence, a place and a home for themselves. Experience has convinced me that this is true. Farewell."

The members present answering to roll call, in addition to Mr. Colton, were: Critchlow, Wilson, Moyle, Newman, Dainberger and Nelden. Of the new members Messrs. Walker and Young were also in attendance. Mr. Glasgow was absent from the city. Mr. Dooly, who served for two years as member and president for a long period, was an interested spectator.

Mr. Colton was given a round of applause by his colleagues and seated from the chair and called Mr. Newman to it, who with Mr. Critchlow moved that the regular order of business be proceeded with and that a president and vice president be chosen.

ORGANIZATION AND OBJECTION.

Moyle contended that the motion was out of order in that the board already had a vice president in the person of Mr. Newman who was chosen, at the time of his election, to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Colton when the gentleman was promoted to the presidency, and that the term had another year to run. Dainberger contended that one member of the board was absent—Mr. Glasgow—and a vacancy existed in the Fourth which should be filled first. Critchlow, with the consent of the house, modified his motion so as to provide only for the election of a president and that order of business was carried by a vote of all members voting affirmatively with the exception of Messrs. Moyle and Newman.

NEWMAN NOMINATED.

Moyle moved the name of Mr. Newman, saying that he was the oldest member of the board in point of years of service, and that the president and the "legitimate candidate" for it would be an advance from the vice presidency, the duties of which he had conscientiously discharged. He also remembered that a certain member of the board from the city did not care to name, but felt that he deserved the vice promotion. But not at the time Mr. Colton was elevated to the office of president.

Mr. Nelden took the floor and said he certainly was that member in question, but circumstances were now very different from what they were then. At the time the vice president had but a few months more to serve and had previously expressed that he would not be a candidate for reelection to the board; therefore he somewhat contended that it would be "a clear fight" for him to retire with. In this case the vice president who was a candidate for the position had a long period to serve and could well afford to wait.

WANTED A LITTLE MORE TIME.

The Chair—If there are no other candidates you will prepare your ballots and proceed to vote.

Dainberger—But there are other candidates; give us a little more time, please.

Mr. Dainberger then moved a recess of ten minutes and Moyle objected on the ground that it had been determined to proceed to vote. The chair sustained the objection, and all but one of the eight members voted to confirm his ruling. There was no formal recess taken but a lull in the proceedings occurred in which there were whispered consultations covering a greater period of time than contemplated in the motion for recess.

DAINBERGER NAMES NELDEN.

Mr. Dainberger then presented the name of Nelden whom he humorously characterized as a man "not quite so good" as himself but nevertheless a man who would be able to give a very thorough account of himself as president.

Mr. Nelden arose and said that before the voting occurred he desired to express himself. First of all, never by word of mouth or suggestion of any kind had he indicated his desire to be elected. He had not expected the honor in any way. He then detailed there were some things he wanted to say before the honor was given him—the reason why he might change the complexion of the vote. He then dilled with extraordinary emphasis that he would "be president" or all that the term implied, strongly intimating that no other man would in any way "run the office." In conclusion he emphasized the words of an eminent person on a thing—"I would rather be right than the president of this board and I cannot do do what is right at all times without fear or favor."

The ballot that was then taken resulted as follows: Messrs. Walker and Young, acting as tellers:

Newman	1
Dainberger	1
Wilson	1
Moyle	1
Nelden	4
Total	8

As no member had received a majority of the votes cast, a second ballot was taken, with the result that Newman got two votes and Nelden six. The latter was then declared duly elected and assumed the duties of the chair, pro tempore, in his enthusiasm for the honor conferred and expressed his desire to discharge the duties of the office to the best of his ability and that he would do right by the people and by the school system in its entirety. Membership on the board of education alone was a great honor and the presidency of the board was a still greater one.

NEWMAN VICE PRESIDENT.

Moyle now moved that the clerk be instructed to cast the vote of the entire board for Mr. Newman as vice president. There were no objections and Mr. Newman received the unanimous vote.

REGULAR BUSINESS.

The regular business of the board was then proceeded with, the following being a summary of the transactions:

The clerk announced that seven persons had applied for positions as teachers. No two persons in the same state and none of them came from Utah. Committee on teachers and school work.

Thirty-one applicants. It was announced, had applied for the superintendency of schools. Committee on teachers and school work.

Lenora Simpson, teacher in the Fifth district school, said in a communication tendering her resignation to accept a position with training school. Accepted.

Mrs. Alice Merrill Horne, legislative member-elect and teacher at the Weekly school, wrote that she regretted very much that she would be compelled to leave the board because of absence, and an application from her sister, Mary Merrill, to fill her place, was referred to the committee on teachers and school work.

Treasurer Parrott submitted the following report of financial transactions for the month of December:

Received on account of taxes $19,999.60
Miscellaneous receipts..... 44.75
Total receipts..... $19,044.75

DISBURSEMENTS.

Paid clerk's warrants..... $13,508.52
Balance..... $ 6,294.17
Amount due treasurer Dec. 1..$19,089.10
Less credit balance..... 6,294.17
Balance due treasurer Dec. 31..$ 12,775.93

Summarizing, the report showed the receipts for six months, including balance of $7,481.17 on hand June 30, $148,734.81; disbursements $143,376.98; balance due treasurer Dec. 31, 1898, $12,775.93.

The treasurer also reported the receipt of $13,000 more on school tax collections since the first of the year, received from County Treasurer Lynch.

Clerk Morelan presented the following financial estimate for the current school year:

Receipts to Dec. 31, 1898, $140,547.97.

Estimates of receipts to end of school year, June 30, 1899, $175,815.19.

Total estimates of receipts for 1898-99, $316,363.16.

Estimate of finance committee for school year 1898-99, $291,000.

Appropriated to Dec. 31, 1898, $114,221.27.

Estimate to end of present school year, $176,014.96.

Total estimate to end of school year, June 30, 1899, $290,468.17.

Estimate of finance committee for 1898-99, $291,000.

Balance under estimate of finance committee, $531.83.

Balance over estimate of finance committee, $2,531.

Total estimated receipts for the year, $316,363.16.

Total estimated expenditures for the year, $316,468.17.

Estimated balance to be on hand, $1,895.99.

The Fifth ecclesiastical ward, through its bishop, A. M. T. Sudden, offered to lay the old Fifth ward school house property at the corner of Third West and Seventh South streets, for $1,100. Committee on buildings and grounds.

Eighth ward, Bishop Preston, was willing to accept his emeritus salary of $25 for the last quarter, except Brigham, whose stipend only amounted to $15. The entire appropriation aggregated $1,236.08.

FOURTH PRECINCT VACANCY.

On suggestion that the board proceed to fill the vacancy existing in the Fourth precinct school by the resignation of Brigham, Moyle objected, saying that there was no vacancy at all, that the meeting at which he resigned of Mr. Brigham was accepted had not been legally called, Member Mr. Young, the other member from the Fourth, had only been a member of the board for a few minutes and had had no time in which to consider the matter.

Mr. Dainberger suggested that there had been plenty of time to think about the matter; and he preferred that Mr. Brigham be permitted to count for himself. The speaker thought it had been tacitly agreed that Judge H. P. Henderson should succeed Mr. Brigham.

Moyle also contended that the vacancy could not be filled because it did not exist.

Moyle went out of further debate by declaring that he not perfectly willing to postpone action for one week, provided it was agreeable to Mr. Young. Mr. Dainberger assented to this also and as Mr. Young said it would be a pleasant "rest for a week" he was willing. Wilson's idea was adopted and the board adjourned for one week.

FRANCE IN FERMENT.

An Agitation Concerning Public and Private Life.

Despite all that has been said, it is doubtful whether you realize to what extreme fever this country has been for now weeks past. You know, of course, that ministries have been made and overthrown solely with regard to their action in the Dreyfus and Ribbelaine affairs, that the Senate and Chamber have been fought between Dreyfusards and anti-Dreyfusards, that the public has combined for and against revision, frequently and with much passion. But one must be in France to appreciate how entirely the thought of the nation is in the one question, how the agitation pervades every phase of public life and even private life.

As first the people of the provinces were apathetic, but the movement has spread and spread until even the most loyal provincials have taken sides.

And so comes, for one year, think of it, every conceivable thing has devoted the best of its space to the Dreyfus issue; in fact, many of the more sensational papers practically do nothing else. Every day there are two three whole sheets devoted to revision, anti-revisionists, militarism, official corruption, fraudes, or other causes of complaint, and the rest of the space is given over to sports and sensations, sham marriages, parades and petitions.

It has really a glorious fight. Zola, and a mere handful of supporters at first, hooted and stoned by the hired mobs of the government, stood by a faith that can always be depended upon to win with victory. How could they dare to attack the powers that be, entrenched so securely? How could they hope to prime the bourgeois out of his velvet chair and hooted, to enlighten the pasty and impermeable ignorance of the crowd?

They have done it, though! Too are today people in the streets buy three, four, ten papers, seeking eagerly at all hours of the day the opinion of this and the information of that. Too, we have had our fill with "war extras" some time ago. They come in public meetings, where hundreds of thousands make their convictions, and the cafes and street corners are full of propagandists.

Now, I suppose, you think I am exaggerating, that not less than two hundred volumes should have been published on the Dreyfus question since Zola's trial, not to count in odes and miles of newspaper literature, and that all this is being bought and read and pondered.

Do you think that the interest in the prisoner of Devil's Island is sufficient to explain the passion for revision of such magnitude? No, as I said, the question has subsided. Many who never cared a whit about Dreyfus, arguing that his case was not worth of more interest than hundreds of similar ones, are now among his most determined allies because they know, because they have finally been made to see, that the fight for securing the revision of his trial, they will have lost the keystone of a structure of falsehood and shame which it would then be easy to demolish. Alsoplace.

Likewise it is the realization of this danger that makes all those who profit by the present state of things resist revision so desperately.

The dispatches have already told you how this method has resulted in a crime of infamy they have established for themselves precisely, the military authorities are just now trying to perpetrate something more infamous than anything they have done so far.

Colonel Picquart, the chief of the service of secret information, was the man who fastened the famous bordereau on the condemned Major Esterhazy, and who, by his fearless—one may even say heroic—conduct at the Zola trial and since, made victory possible for the friends of fair play.

A member of the High Staff, he testified against his colleagues of High Staff. They can't get over it. It was he who discovered the author of the bordereau the moment Mercier handed it to his rank, and it was he also who first suspected the document fabricated by Henry as a forgery.

The soldiers have never forgiven what they are pleased to call the betrayal of their comrades. The expert de-nouze should, in their opinion, be prosecuted for him from telling the truth. The general staff also thinks that he has endangered the security of France by exposing the "mistakes" of some of the army chiefs. (Charming ethics!)

At any rate, Colonel Picquart has not only been driven from the army, but for months persecuted in the most scoundrelly manner, charged with having forged evidence to convict Esterhazy! You, Esterhazy! you read the right name.—Henri Dumay in Collier's Weekly.

POSITIVELY INSULTING.

The Hint Given to a Seventh Daughter of a Seventh Daughter.

[Chicago Record.]

A lawyer who was engaged in settling the affairs of a deceased estate was somewhat surprised over the receipt of certain letters and papers.

The lawyer had been dead a curious person, and he had omitted several documents that were of importance to his heirs, and he had locked away from this earth on a hasty excursion. He had not given the lawyer any instructions before he died.

The lawyer had a helpful friend who believed in clairvoyance and second sight. The friend suggested that a woman who was the seventh daughter of a seventh daughter, and who could read the stars and tell the future of the lawyer's search for the papers.

The clairvoyant or fortune teller, or whatever she may have been, went to see the lawyer.

The lawyer was skeptical. I really believe he did not believe in second sight. He said he "put on cats to employ people to shell at least endeavor to find them. A few seconds after the cats will for a family on the north side."

"You really think you can find these papers?"

"I am quite sure of it."

"You go about and find them, and I'll pay you liberally."

"But I must receive every assistance from you and the relatives of the deceased. I must be taken to the house and put in sympathy with his home surroundings."

"Well, well, I'll not go to all that trouble. I think you're a fraud."

The woman gave him a story stare and swept out of the office.

About five minutes later she re-entered the office. She appeared to be agitated. Her face was flushed, her breath was quick. "Let me have a small black bag to save? I wouldn't lose it for the world."

"I haven't seen it. You don't remember where you left it?"

"I haven't seen it."

"That hadn't ought to worry you. If you can find papers that have been missing six months, you hadn't ought to have any difficulty in finding a handbag that was lost ten minutes ago."

"You are positively insulting," said the seventh daughter of the seventh daughter, and then she left him forever.
