OBITUARY NOTES.

Ogden, Feb. 19, 1894.—Two more aged women in the Gospel have passed to the great beyond, to see more their labors in a higher sphere among their kindred who have preceded them in the spirit world. Thus our ranks are being thinned out and the generation now growing up will soon know them only as belonging to the historic past. The date of their deaths is

FATHER WILLIAM SMITH.

He was born about 1810, at Hucklebridge, Leicestershire, England. The month and day of his birth I have not been able to ascertain. When grown to manhood he removed to the old manor house in Whitwick, Leicestershire, where, over forty years since, he heard the Gospel in its fulness preached by the Elders of Israel. He received their testimony, and cast in his lot with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and continued faithful to his convictions to the end of his mortality.

While in his native land he labored faithfully testifying of the great things God has done for him, and that He has revealed the true plan of salvation, and has again offered the Jews (which he was a great lover of) the privilege of coming to Christ and receiving of the Holy Ghost. He was kind and generous to the Elders and assisted them to the better fulfilling of his calling.

In 1851 he emigrated to Utah, and finally settled in Ogden, where he became known and respected by all wherever he was known. On February 11th, after a long, lingering illness, during which he was a great, but patient sufferer, he breathed his last.

The funeral was held on the 15th inst. and was numerously attended. The speakers on the occasion bore testimony to his worth and family so adapted to God hath been and is his native land. He peacefully slumbered of twelve children and six grandchildren, who are still borrowing.

The next one of whom I have to speak is a sister lady who has been much private, and has for many years been a faithful and constant worker in the female institutions of the Church.

SISTER ALICE HILL

Departed this life February 12, 1894. She was the daughter of James Melior and Mary Hardman. She was born at Oakham, Leicestershire, England, April 27, 1814. Her family and herself were formerly members of the old Wesleyan body of religious worshippers for many years. In the year 1845, she was baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. In 1846 she was married to John Woodmansee, by whom she had three sons and one daughter. In 1851 her husband died, leaving her with three small children to provide for.

In 1852 she married the second time, her husband being named George Hindle. The same year they took passage on the ship Margaret and sailed for the United States.

The voyage was long, exceedingly rough, and they suffered much for the lack of food and fresh water. They landed at St. Louis, Mo., in Feb. 1856. The issue of this marriage was one daughter who survives her parents. During the summer of 1856, her second husband was prostrated by a sunstroke which proved fatal. He survived the shock but a very short time. Alice Hindle was thus again deprived of her natural protector, and was also for the second time left a widow, to toil for her children's subsistence in a strange land among strangers. She toiled in food and believed that He would provide for her and she was not disappointed.

On November 5, 1856, she was united in a third bonds, Thomas Hill. They were married in St. Louis, Mo. By this husband she had three children, all daughters. She survived her last husband seven years.

On May 2, 1862, the family left St. Louis per steamboat for Kanesville, which place they reached in due time. After being detained one month in consequence of high water they commenced their overland journey for Utah, in Captain Hoops Cheesman's company. They reached Salt Lake City September 20th. They remained in the capital till 1864, then moved to Kay's Ward, Davis county, and the following year came to Ogden which place they made their permanent home. Here they shared the poverty of the land winter and subsequent seasons. They polled up stakes and "moved south" with the body of the Church in the second year of 1866. On their return they united with their co-religionists to build up the Junction city in this inter-mountain region.

As soon as the people had moved a mile from their tarrarement, Sister Alice Hill joined with a number of others and commenced her mission as sister of mercy, ministering to the wants of the needy. She never tired of doing good. Night and day she was always on hand to respond to calls of this kind. Many a day, and all day long, nothing passed the military hall of summer, or assuming the chilling blasts of the winter winds, she cheerfully responded those labors of love in connection with sisters Mary Ann Ellis and Eliza Davies—the latter now dead. The surgery, too naked, the sick and the dying experienced the benefits that were administered by these angelic ministers. This was not the work of a few days or a month, but it continued for nearly a decade and a half.

For over thirteen years Sister Hill was first counselor to Sister Ellis, president of the Second Ward Relief Society. She was constant in the discharge of her duties. She was an able counselor, a sister and wise sister and always had a kind word for those in her sphere who were disconsolate from any cause. Her sympathies always experienced pleasure in her society, and strength from her conversations. She was beloved by all who knew her.

The funeral services were held on the 15th inst., in the Second Ward meeting house, Bishop Robert Morgan presided. The attendance was very large. A new feature was introduced at the services, thus in addition to the Elders who spoke on the occasion, the case assembly was addressed by four sisters, viz., the president of the Relief Society of the Weber stake, Sister Mary Ann Ellis, president of the Second Ward society, and Sister Maria L. Newman, a sister lady with them. These ladies, who had for many years been intimately acquainted with the deceased, spoke from the fulness of their hearts of the life and labors of their beloved friend. There was nothing formal in the commendations and high eulogies paid by them to her memory.

The remains were interred in the Ogden cemetery.

Sister Hill has had eight children, fifty-seven grandchildren and twenty-nine great-grandchildren, many of whom survive her. Yours truly,

JOSEPH HALL.

A well-known railroad man told the following story the other day—at least the Arkansaw Idiot, Mondord states it—"When I was at Moulds, N. D., we had a man whose memory of car numbers was really remarkable. When a train wrecked into the yard he would step to the telephone and, without a book or pencil, would stand and watch the cars go by. If any one was moving fast he would converse upon whatever subject occurred, and when the conversation was ended he would step into his office and make a complete and accurate record of the train, beginning at the first car and ending with the caboose. Sometimes, just to test him, we would get him to begin at the caboose and write out numbers the other way, or else begin in the middle of the train and work both ways. He never made a mistake that I remember. Just another, the names of the roads to which they belonged and their relative position in the train would all be recorded accurately. He was the most remarkable memory that I ever knew of."
