

must not lose your heads but remember that everything is possible in war and that we shall be able with God's help, to cope with the arduous task imposed upon us.

These signals were repeated until 2 o'clock in the morning, but they failed to reach the vessels of the expedition which were swept away by the tempestuous seas, and proceeded separately for the mouth of the harbor. Upon arriving there the Mikawa Maru, one of the merchantmen, saw that the enemy was lying upon the mountain tops of the island. The men on board the Mikawa Maru thought the other steamers had reached the harbor mouth, and they steamed boldly in. She was followed closely by another of the merchantmen, believed to be Sakura Maru. The Russians had fired burning at the mouth of the harbor and they used also many powerful searchlights, the including Japanese vessels. They poured in an incessant fire into the channel.

Lieut. Sosa, who was in command of the Mikawa Maru, unhesitatingly forced his ship into the channel, and reached the center of the inner entrance. Here he anchored his vessel and then blew her up. She sank immediately. Another steamer, then came to anchor near a projecting rock at the mouth of the harbor and sank. Following the Sakura Maru came the Tami Maru, the Yodo Maru, the Otsu Maru, the Sagami Maru, the Aikoku Maru and the Asagawa Maru. These six steamers advanced to the mouth of the harbor.

EFFECTUALLY BLOCKED.
Washington, May 7.—The following telegram dated May 7 was received at the Japanese legation today:

"Admiral Togo reports that the combined fleet effected the third blocking operation on Port Arthur on the third of May. The gunboats Akagi, Chokai, the Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh torpedo boats, together with steamers started on the second of May, but a strong wind soon arising greatly hindered the movement, and therefore the commander ordered to stop the operation, but the order did not reach in time and consequently eight steamers proceeded and dashed into the harbor despite the enemy's searchlights, forcing the other steamers and merchant ships. Five steamers gained the mouth of the harbor, especially Mikawa Maru and Tami Maru breaking boom went further inside.

"The entrance of the harbor is considered effectively blocked at least for cruisers and battleships. Three other steamers sunk before reaching the mouth of the harbor. Our fleet remained until morning and rescued half of the crews of the sunken steamers.

"Torpedo boat No. 67, its steam pipe having burst, it was disabled and towed away by torpedo boat No. 70. The port engine of the torpedo boat Aetaka was damaged but the ship was safe. Casualties of the flotilla, three wounded, two killed but no other damage."

MOFFAT CONTRACTS.
Major Myton Receives a Communication From D. N. & P. R. R. Headquarters.

Major H. P. Myton, formerly Indian agent at White Rock, wrote to A. C. Ridgway, vice president of the Moffat line, asking that Utah people be given an opportunity to contract for the surveys and construction of the road in Utah. He received a reply this morning, in which Mr. Ridgway says:

"We are getting our surveys in such shape that we will be able to let contracts west of the range soon, and when the time comes for asking bids, we will communicate with Utah people, as suggested by you."

Major Myton's letter referred particularly to John McAndrews, of Vernal, who has been in that country for 25 years, and who is looked upon as the best man to select the route across the reservation.

Mr. McAndrews and C. O. Baxter, president of the Glaciete Asphalt company, are in town today.

AFTER McDONALD.
Alma E. Harvey Requests State Board To Revoke His Barber's License.

The state board of examiners of barbers has been requested to revoke the license of J. C. McDonald, permitting him to practise the vocation of barber, on the ground that he has violated the law and is not qualified under the law. The request is made by Alma E. Harvey, who makes affidavit concerning McDonald's unfitness to practise, alleging, on information and belief, that the said McDonald has not studied the occupation of barber for one year as an apprentice under a qualified barber; nor studied the occupation in a barber's school or academy as directed by the law; and that he has not practised the occupation of barber in any other state for at least one year. McDonald is conducting what is known as "The Moler Barber and Hairdressing College" in this city.

SMOOTH GRAFTERS.
Bunch of Hotel Crooks Makes Things Interesting at the Wilson.

Fred Wey, proprietor of the Wilson hotel, acknowledges that he was the victim of one of the shrewdest hotel tricks ever turned in this city. A few days ago a stranger registered as J. G. Emerson of Omaha, and within a few minutes after entering the hotel, exhibited a large roll of greenbacks before the clerks and guests, and wanted it kept in the safe. He counted out $750 in currency and asked that it be placed in the safe. Mr. Wey readily accepted the money.

Yesterday, big bundles of clothing came to the hotel addressed to Emerson, all "C. O. D." and with plenty of the man's money in his possession, the hotel management had no hesitancy in paying for the parcels. The amount was about $25. When Mr. Emerson came in yesterday afternoon, he made himself something of a nuisance by asking, every four or five minutes, for a piece of his money. Mr. Wey suggested that he take the whole sum and get drafts for it, adding that it was dangerous to carry that much cash with him. Emerson accepted the suggestion immediately, took the money and started for the bank. That is the last ever seen of him. This morning the hotel people visited his room, but found absolutely nothing. He had taken clothes, satchel and all, and left, besides his room bill, the bill for money paid out "C. O. D."

Emerson is about 45 years old, 5 feet 9 1/2 inches tall, and weighed 170 pounds. He has dark eyes, his hair is streaked with gray and he wears a stubby, gray moustache. He wears also a Shriners' pin.

Two of the Wilson's cashiers were worked yesterday by different people on the short change racket. Offering a twenty in settlement of a bill, each of them came back and demanded $10 more, claiming they had not received the right change. This circumstance leads Proprietor Wey to believe that there is a gang of hotel crooks operating in town, probably on their way to Los Angeles, where the opportunities afforded by the Methodist convention are great.

MACBETH DID NOT MURDER DUNCAN.

The Jury so Decides at the Termination of a Long Trial.

ATTY. KENNER'S ABLE CHARGE.

The Verdict Was Followed by a Banquet With Toasts, Speeches and Merrymaking.

The trial of Macbeth for the murder of King Duncan, by the third-year class in English at the L. D. S. university, terminated last evening and was followed by a banquet to judge and jury. The final pleas of the opposing counsel were given yesterday afternoon, after which Judge S. A. Kenner charged the jury in part as follows:

"The defendant stands before you charged with murder, the first and worst of crimes. In reaching conclusions, you are admonished to exclude preconceived ideas, personal knowledge, that prejudice or bias which naturally is engendered in the human mind by reason of a person's being once accused of such a crime, and to let your judgment rest upon and be directed by the evidence alone. You are the sole judges of the facts, also of the credibility of the witnesses. It is your province to consider their opportunities for obtaining the information detailed, to regard their manner of testifying, their apparent interest in the outcome one way or another. In doing this, and giving to every detail its full measure of consideration, if your mind is unable to reach a definite conclusion one way or another because of not being altogether satisfied, such mental considerations as to the guilt or innocence of the accused. All people stand on an exact equality before the law until, by their own voluntary act, they deprive themselves of this benefit. The prince and the pauper, the aristocrat and the plebeian, the millionaire and the toiler, each have the same claim to protection by our legal machinery, and the killing of another is a crime to be dealt with in accordance with the circumstances connected with it without reference to personal positions or individual places. You will, therefore, not consider the fact that the deceased in this case was at the head of the nation, but simply consider that he was a member of the commonwealth which extended its protection over him. He seeks at this time to vindicate himself rather than to avenge him, provided guilt be shown.

Supernatural agencies do not figure in the consideration of a case at law, but particularly when life depends upon the issue. The law does not deal with matters beyond those determined by the ordinary senses. It has no reference to things previous to or following life, but only things relating to life itself in its physical aspects and not with the occulted things which belong in the domain of philosophy or religion. However, if you find from the evidence that the accused was a believer in supernatural agencies, that he believed that the old women spoken of in the evidence foretold something relating to his destiny and was actually something that was going to occur, and that his mind was worked upon by reason thereof to the accomplishment of the objects which the women set out, it is a circumstance of which you may take notice, provided, other circumstances more immediately connected with the crime seem to have been connected with the general plan which he sought to work out in accordance with the prophecies made.

The evidence in this case is wholly circumstantial and is therefore to be dealt with in accordance with the foregoing suggestions in their broadest sense. It has, however, been developed as a result of the examination of some of those called for jury duty that there is a feeling against conviction on that kind of evidence alone, and this makes it necessary for the court to instruct you thereon. If it were not for evidence of that kind the power of the law to cope with criminals would be greatly curtailed to a condition of things amounting to anarchy would result. The one who premeditates a crime often than otherwise seeks seclusion and such attendant conditions as make

There are twenty different cinnamon barks, and they cost from 4 to 55c lb. This explains the market, all but one particular. Schilling's Best is the best with the coarser pieces picked-out; not thrown-away; oh no; they go to some less particular grinder.

Moneyback everything.

It is impossible, with himself being privileged from testifying, to fasten guilt upon him. It thus becomes the case that it is necessary to depend upon extraneous evidence having reference to the subject in chief to determine the guilt, if any guilt there be, and such evidence is justly and properly given the weight that witnessing or hearing actual events would have.

In all criminal cases, more particularly in one where life is involved, the accused, which in this case is the state, must make the proofs and establish guilt. It is by no means incumbent upon the defendant to establish innocence. The failure of the state in any material way to establish its charges amounts simply to proof in behalf of the accused, and he must receive the benefit of all such failures. You are, therefore, instructed and charged, that unless the state has presented you with such an array of evidence as convinces you beyond conjecture that first, the deceased did not die a natural death; second, that he was slain without justification, and third, that none other than the accused could have committed the deed, it is your duty to find a verdict of not guilty.

The jury was out for one hour and returned a verdict of "Not guilty."

A banquet was then served by the third year girls to the judge, jury, attorneys, and witnesses. Instructor Evans acted as toastmaster, and responses were made by Students Marchant, Felt, Rogers and Young, by Profs. Mills, Hinckley and Paul, and by Mr. Kenner.

KILLED WHILE SWITCHING.
Indianapolis, Ind., May 3.—The home of Sister Martha King of Evansville has been saddened by the loss of her eldest son, William H. King. He was killed in the Burlington railroad yards in St. Louis, Mo., April 22, while on duty as switchman. Sister King is a firm Latter-day Saint and has been earnest in teaching the Gospel to her children. William had not joined the church, but his last request was that some one should do the work for him. We all extend our sympathies to the bereaved.

POLITICAL STRAWS.
Two candidates have sprung up for the governorship within the past two days. M. Walker has announced himself and down the street who are testing his strength as a candidate for that office on the Republican ticket, although they admit that he has not, as yet, been spoken to regarding it. O. J. Salisbury is not actively engaged in campaigning for Mr. Walker, but he said this morning that he "would support it most heartily," if the known banker desired to run for the office.

Down to date, the only candidate for county attorney on the Republican ticket who has announced himself, is Farley P. Christensen. It looks very much like a nomination by acclamation.

It develops more clearly every day that Hearst has a large following among local Democrats, and the return of Judge Powers with the statement that the newspaper man has gained ground ever since his opponent, Parker, was endorsed by the New York state convention, has had considerable weight with these Democrats. There are many candidates for state offices, but all are holding off until the convention decides for Hearst or Parker.

The Democratic gubernatorial contest seems to have narrowed down to James H. Moyle, Aquila Nebeker and William M. Roylance. They all have friends who are eager to have them make the race.

There will be a hot contest for the city judgeships. It is fairly well understood that H. S. Tanner is out for district judge on the Republican ticket, as the most promising candidates for the city benches Alex. McMaster, Morris Sommer, George Armstrong, J. J. Whitaker, J. N. Thomas and C. B. Diehl.

The contest for the district attorneyship will be interesting. Benner K. Smith, the newest appointee of Gov. Wells, will have a fight with Fred C.

claims he was practically promised the next nomination, long before the death of Dennis C. Eichner, but he will not have an easy time of it now. It looks as though the hottest fight of a real hot convention will occur over this nomination.

Secy. of State Hammond may be a candidate for governor. E. H. Callister is one. But it is said that Gov. Wells, who has had little to say thus far may go after a third term.

The Republicans will hold their primaries on Monday night for electing delegates to the judicial convention. It is generally believed that Judge Morse and Judge Lewis will be renominated while Judge Stewart apparently has a "clinch" on the Democratic nomination. It is conceded that all have made splendid records on the bench.

Nicol Hood has come out with the announcement of his candidacy on the Democratic ticket for county commissioner. He is a resident of Sugar House ward.

Samuel Hamer is a candidate for county recorder on the Democratic ticket.

For the sheriff of Salt Lake county, the Democrats most prominently mentioned are Arthur Cummings and John F. Howells.

IRRIGATORS IN LINE.

Utah & Salt Lake Canal Company Accepts Utah Lake Recommendations.

The stockholders of the Utah & Salt Lake canal company met this noon in the Fourteenth ward schoolhouse, and almost unanimously accepted the recently printed recommendations of the committee on the Utah lake improvement. There was some objection to accepting 60 second feet of water, but that was removed, and a resolution was adopted asking for 120 additional second feet of water, making the entire amount 180 second feet desired.

BOBBY'S MAP WILL GO.
Good Samaritan Gladdens the Heart of Salt Lake Newsboy.

They know him as "Bobby." He is a newsboy. He makes a specialty of selling the Saturday Evening Post, and there are few office men around town who don't know the lad. With his scant income, he supports a mother, a sister, and himself, and goes to school. And he is one of the brightest pupils in his grade.

"Bobby" is the happiest boy in Salt Lake today. He rushed along Second South street this morning, his brain filled with an exhibit he worked out for his school, to be sent to the World's Fair. It was a map of the United States, to be drawn on black paper, and "Bobby" wanted some white ink. He went into a news store and found the ink, but the price was too high.

A half-hour later, the tears streaming down his cheeks, he approached a customer and asked if he had any white ink in the office. "What do you want of white ink?" "I wanted to make a map to send to the World's Fair tonight." "Can't you get it at the store there?" "No, sir; they want fifteen cents for it." "Well, come along," said "Bobby." Leibling, "I'll get the ink." And "Bobby" sends his map to the fair tonight.

UNIVERSITY "FUNNIVAL."

'Varsity Fellars Produce With Gusto A Midsummer Knight's Mare.

The Museum hall at the state university was well filled last evening by students in attendance on "A grand funnival, including 'A Midsummer Knight's Mare'; by a bunch of 'Varsity fellows'—a play with good actors, a dance with good music, and something good to drink, all for two bits." The program was headed:

"Shakespeare ate a wienersurst; And then a bowl of cream And then he tumbled into bed And had a little dream. He dreamed anon, he dreamed erst— While And he dreamed it well, I wis; But, oh, poor Shakespeare never dreamed His dream would come to this!"

The program also included a large cut of the familiar figure of the gentleman wearing the burro's head, sleeping at the foot of a tree with the heads of various performers distributed around in a cloud close by. The moon is sleeping peacefully in the distance. The program states that it is "lauded early, so that the actors (?) will learn something about their parts," and the scenes are termed "Hack I," "Hack II" and "Hack III." There was no curtain or stage exits. When an actor was through with his role, he fell on his stomach and rolled under the side drapery at the head of each act the manager showed up with a card on which was printed the location of the scene.

"The best of the good ones."

The costumes were certainly unique, if not gaudy. Six Hopkins as "Oberon," was arrayed in a stiff white shirt, and a gauze knee skirt. Tomie Thomas as "Bottom," was clad in the style of morning gown commonly worn by laundry girls. Coney Hamity, as "Puck," had arrayed himself in white tights, swallow tail coat and black silk deer, while Marshall, as "Queen of the Fairies," was made up like the orthodox figure of a fairy. "Fucker" was dressed like a Scotch knight, and a group of other performers resembled a parody on the Mexican flag.

The cast of hardy characters was made up as follows:
Lysander Gerlie Strobel
Demetrius "Deep P"
Hermia, in love with Lysander, Forbes
Helena, in love with Demetrius,
Oberon, King of the Fairies, Fuzzy Moore
Titania, Queen of the Fairies, Sis Hopkins
