"HOW MOTHER DID IT."

If we were to suggest one which above all other things combined would most contribute to the happiness of the young housekeeper, it would be to learn how to cook as a husband's mother cooked. Mother used to make coffee so and so; mother used to have such waffles; and mother just knew how thick, or how thin, to make a squash pie; and oh! if I only could taste of mother's biscuit. Such are the comments of the husband and of too many meal tables. It would only be a little more cruel for the husband to throw his fork across the table, or to dash the contents of his tea-cup in his wife's face. The experience of a contrite husband is good reading for those men whose daily sauce is "how mother did it." He says:

I found fault some time ago with Maria Ann's custard pie, and tried to tell her how my mother made custard pie. Maria made the pie after my receipt. It lasted longer than any pie we ever had. Maria set it on the table every day for dinner, and you see I could not eat it because I forgot to tell her to put in any eggs, or shortening. It was economical, but in a fit of generosity I stole it from the pantry and gave it to a poor little boy in the neighborhood. The boy's funeral was largely attended by his former playmates. I did not go myself.

Then there was the buckwheat cakes. I told Mary Ann any fool could beat her making those cakes, and she said I had better try it. So I did. I emptied the batter all out of the pitcher one evening and set the cakes myself. I got the flour and the salt and water, and warned by the past, put in a liberal quantity of eggs and shortening. I shortened with tallow from roast beef because I could not find any lard. The batter did not look quite right, and I lit my pipe and pondered yeast—yeast, to be sure. I had forgotten the yeast. I went and woke up the baker and got six cents' worth of yeast. I set the pitcher behind the sitting-room stove and went to bed. In the morning I got up early and prepared to enjoy my triumph, but I didn't. That yeast was strong enough to raise the dead, and the batter was running all over the carpet. I scraped it up and put it into another dish. Then I got a fire in the kitchen and put on the griddle. The first lot of cake stuck to the griddle. The second ditted, only more. Maria came down and asked what was burning. She advised me to grease the griddle. I did it. One end of the griddle got too hot and I dropped the thing on my tenderest corn, while trying to turn it around. Finally the cakes were ready for breakfast, and Maria got the other things ready. We sat down. My cakes did not have exactly the right flavor. I took one mouthful and it satisfied me. I lost my appetite at once. Maria would not let me put one on her plate. I think those cakes may be reckoned a dead loss. The cat would not eat them. The dog ran off and stayed three days after one was offered him. The hens won't go within ten feet of them. I threw them into the back yard and there has not been a pig on the premises since. I eat what is put before me now, and do not allude to my mother's system of cooking.

THE PROFESSOR'S DOCTRINE.—The Oakland Transcript says—

"Holy writ inculcates the constant observance of the law of love, and all mortals who live up to the letter of the Divine injunction to 'love one another,' are pretty sure to revel in clover here below."

That is the substance of Professor Fowler's lecture last night.

OF TWO EVILS CHOOSE NEITHER.—Such seems to be the thought of the Kansas Magazine in regard to the judiciary, appointive or elective, judging by the following—

"One gets a good deal of experience in Kansas with both an appointed and an elected judiciary; too much to form any conclusions in favor of either."

In the Territories people are not permitted to have much experience with elective judges, but as to the appointed judges, why, generally speaking, the less one knows about them the better. Favorable conclusions concerning most of them are impossible.

BOAH.—This is the kind of stuff that is sent over the wires westward from this city—

"There are rumors that Bates has been caught by the Mormons."

"Rumors" of the above kind can be manufactured by the cord, for outside effect. There are a few characters here who are both able and willing to do any dirty work of that kind.
