"KING" AGUINALDO.

Such was the title to which the Filipino rebel aspired.

A gigantic scheme to establish a monarchy laid out by Aguinaldo and his cabinet officers in 1898 is being unearthed. All the memoranda are not translated, but before long a sensation will be sprung on the Filipino people which will open their eyes. The failure of the politicians to secure independence knocked the scheme in the head, or the Filipinos would now be cringing before a native king and a court more tyrannical, probably, than was the rule of the friars.

The examination of the papers of the many insurgent generals and officers has developed the fact that the two best founders of the Filipino republic proposed to form a monarchy as soon as they gained their independence. Aguinaldo was to be the emperor or king, and Emilio was slated for the first duke of the empire. Then there would be created other dukes, counts and so on, and a brilliant court would be established in Manila. Gen. Luna was to be the first duke of the province of Iloilo, and Emilio was to be the duke of the province of Cebu. In the bunch of conspirators, and it is believed that his death may have been the result of his refusal to support the movement.

The insurgent leaders always had their own way about everything. They kept the common people excited over the cry of independence, liberty, etc., while they manipulated the political end. They expected to secure their independence, and they knew that once the future of the country was in their hands, they could establish the kind of government which best suited them. It was a wild oriental dream that died aborning.

The exact disposal of the royal gifts and honors proposed is not known, but Buencamino, Mabini, Paterno, Rosario and other members of the cabinet were to back in the favor of Emperor Emilio and divide up the "swag." Plenty of gold lace and trimmings were to be added to the court, and a complete monopoly of power and glory was to be the portion of those who Filipinos.

Gen. Luna, the warrior, did not take kindly to this idea. He had been approached in a covert manner in reference to the possibility of such a scheme being adopted by the Filipino people. It is said that he snorted like a war horse and an honest man, and gave the member of the cabinet who approached him to understand that he was fighting for the liberty of the people and not for politicians. He expressed himself so emphatically on the subject that the conspirators decided to leave him alone.

The greatest secret was maintained, and it has only been recently that any documents have been developed. The accumulations of papers captured from the insurgent officers, both official and private, have been keeping translators busy and as yet but little impression has been made on the pile of documents. From time to time reference to the monarchy is found, and little by little the fabric of the oriental dream is coming to light.

The authorities refuse to give out anything officially, but it is known that an exposure of the whole matter will one day be made public and the Filipino people will then see the leaders of the insurrection in their true colors.

Paterno had, for years been fishing for honors from the court of Spain, but had failed to make an impression there. After he had managed the Blac-na-bato treaty, he believed that he would at least be made a count. In this he was again doomed to disappointment, and it is understood that he was the prime mover in the scheme and had been named as the first duke of the Filipino empire as a recognition of his ability as a political schemer.

It is also understood that even in the coteries who had the scheme under way there was a counter plot. While Emilio would be chosen as the first king to satisfy the people, he was to be gotten rid of just as soon as the hands of the cabinet were sufficiently strengthened to warrant his removal, and a more cultured Filipino and clever politician would take his place. Who this person for this honor was to be had not been decided upon, but possibly the first duke would have been chosen.

A new American representative called at the residence of Emilio Aguinaldo yesterday afternoon, but that gentleman was not at home.

Emilio Aguinaldo refused to talk on the subject, but did not deny the truth of the story. He seemed embarrassed when the subject was opened and surprised that the secret was out—Manila American.

NAILS and SUNOL.

New York, Nov. 12, 1890.
PUTNAM NAIL CO.
Dear Sirs,—

In reply to your favor I would state that I have used the Putnam Nail for several years, and have advised my friends to use it only.
It is hardly necessary for me to add that I prefer it to all others.

Very truly,
Robert Bonner.

The Putnam Nail enjoys the distinction of being the only Hot-Forged and Hammer-Pointed nail made by machinery, and which imitates the old hand process.

ROBERT BONNER

INSISTS ON ITS USE.

All others are COLD ROLLED and SHEARED, as an examination of their edges near the point will show, and are liable to SPLIT or SLIVER in driving, to injure and perhaps kill the horse.

The above picture, from a photo representing Mr. Bonner in the act of handing his smith a Putnam nail, while superintending the shoeing of Sunol, will be sent in the form of a half tone, size, 5x8, on thick, white paper, with wide margin, on receipt of 2 cent stamp for postage, etc.

BRICK

The Salt Lake Pressed Brick Co.

HAVE LARGE AND EXTENSIVE WORKS situated two miles south of southeastern portion of city limits—their plant consists of 30 acres of clay bed—at works, and a large shale bed in mountains near by. Their machinery is two 4-mold Boyd Brick Presses, with capacity of 20,000 each daily—a wire cut machine of 60,000 capacity daily, an artificial dryer of 40,000 capacity in 24 hours, an arched continuous kiln of 18 chambers, which produces 25,000 burned brick every 24 hours, six Kessler kilns of aggregate capacity of 500,000, which turns out an average of 15,000 daily of the finest pressed brick, ready for the market; also, open-top continuous kilns which hold 8,000,000, the daily output is from 80 to 100,000 brick. Electric power is used for driving all machinery, and arrangements are complete for running at night as well as day when market demands.
Past season has kept them fairly busy. Their product is of the finest and in various colors, and in demand throughout Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Utah.
