THE PLAT E HUDDLE

Discussed by the City Council and the Property Owners.

BLOCKS AND STREETS AFFECTED.

Proposed Adjustment of the Difficulty.—A Reserve Asked.—A Committee Appointed.

There was a meeting of the City Council and the residential property owners of Plat E last night. Mayor Parkin occupied the chair. The following councilmen were present: Hardy, Westfall, Lawson, Simons, Bleazby, Woolley, Paul, Hardy, and Richards, Evans, Pollock, Hardy, and Richards.

The call and object of the meeting were read by the deputy recorder, after which made an explanation, in which he said the meeting had been somewhat misunderstood on the part of the residents of plat E, and the intent of the council. There was no intention of making any extensive alterations, and he thought it was best to make the lots conform to the streets. He said land there was so complicated in certain point, and for this reason no two engineers in town could make the same result, and even a man who had made one survey might make a different one the next time, unless he remembered the exact point from which his survey was commenced. In some cases there was a difference of forty feet between the present line of fences and the original plat. On the north side of Ellen street the fences were 33 feet further south than they should be. The fences on the south side of the street had been moved south 33 feet. Almond street was platted as a cartway 33 feet wide, but now it was a straight street 33 feet wide. The inconvenience was so great that some men who owned property in one block had built their houses on another. And there were several other bad discrepancies. What he wanted to know was whether he should accept the lines as they are shown by the present fences or from the original plat. The thing to be desired was to have the trouble common to the inexperienced. When an agreement was reached and monuments placed, they would perpetuate the record for all time. In block 20 there was found 40 feet more ground than belonged to it. In order to make streets of practicable width, in some cases it would be necessary to lay down some houses principally. In block 23 there was an encroachment on Center street of 11 feet.

CONVENTION OF CENTER STREET.

James Solomon said that according to the resolution the previous night the councils had granted persons living on Center street the right to move on their houses.

This statement was corroborated by other property owners who said the ordinance was passed in 1883, which made the street four rods wide from McCombs's house to Pluma street, then from Pluma to Fourth the street was made five rods in width.

Mr. Driggs also corroborated the statement.

The mayor called for further remarks on the subject, saying it was very contradictory that this matter should be adjusted amicably.

ALMOND STREET.

John N. Pike said the crooked street (Almond) as platted, was ordered by the city council to be straightened some years ago. The records of the city council would show this, even if the records of the engineer's office did not. The residents of Almond street had accepted the street and were satisfied with it.

The Mayor—It is a narrow street. Is it wide enough for use?

Mr. Pike—To widen it now would be to lay down a vast number of improvements that had been made in good faith.

The Mayor—To open the street to its full width—would this infringe upon the property rights of anybody?

A voice—No; the moving of the fences would be the only injury.

Engineer Jennings in answer to a question, said the block that would be most largely affected were 17, 20, 21, 22, 13, 14, 5, 8. The fences in block 8 were about five feet over on Center street.

A COMMITTEE.

Councilman Hardy suggested that the citizens present appoint a committee of five from among themselves to meet the city council and the engineer and submit their findings to the citizens interested.

James Solomon thought the body could not resolve private properties.

The Mayor said the council had a perfect right to order the adjustment of the lines, and he thought it should go through the forms. This, however, the council did not propose to—the disputation was to make the best of it.

Hiram Burton said some people seemed to think that greater injury was liable to come from this reservoir. This he did not believe. The lines was merely to find out what the exact lines are; to have permanent monuments placed.

The mayor said the question should be settled once for all.

Westland said he had found it very difficult to get two people to think alike. He thought any committee that could be appointed at the chance would merely waste time. He also was for having a committee appointed to look up all the detail and make an exhaustive report to the City Council upon which that body should act.

Mr. Hansen did not like that idea. He thought the streets should be kept as they are.

The mayor thought Almond street should be opened to its full width, as previously platted.

Mr. Hansen thought the people who lived on that street were perfectly satisfied with it.

The Mayor—Almond street was at first crooked, but in order that it might be made straight the property-owners had deeded to the city such a small strip of property, but the street only occupied half of the ground.

Westland urged the appointment of a committee to look up the entire matter and make an intelligent report. This might mean a good deal of money, probably $1,000.

W. L. Hyde argued that several different propositions had been made, but each time there had been a most pronounced failure. There was no sense land in some block, no matter who is the fence were put.

Fred Bolerski suggested that the men who made the survey was a civil engineer at the time he made the survey, and that was true. He did not see why the parties could not make good the calculations of his employer.

Nick Trewes said he had resided in Plat E some eighteen years, and he was the first house constructed. When the survey was made a number of lots were left out, so we petitioned to move out a few feet south. He thought that a committee should be appointed to consider the matter and take such a report to the council that would settle the matter.

C. C. Walbourne said the people themselves would never come to an amicable arrangement of the difficulty. He favored the appointment of the committee mentioned by Westland. Let the citizens of plat E to give the authority to appoint a committee of three or five, whatever expense being thus incurred to be paid by the city, which had the right to appropriate money for such purposes.

W. S. Stewart favored the idea of Westland.

Alf Howe suggested that a sale be taken upon the city appropriation before the committee.

Westland said the idea was the appointment of a committee of three—one engineer, a man versed in real estate and a citizen—the first two to confirm to the city and the latter to be to account by citizens.

Chas. A. Whitmore thought the committee should consist of five at least.

J. S. Pike suggested that the men who were vitally interested in the matter should have the right to say who the committee should be.

Westland then renewed his motion, allowing the Mayor to appoint a committee of three, on the final the latter to be to account by citizens.

Chas. A. Whitmore thought the committee should consist of five at least.

J. S. Pike suggested that the men who were vitally interested in the matter should have the right to say who the committee should be.

Westland then renewed his motion, allowing the Mayor to appoint a committee of three, on the final the latter to be to account by citizens.

Fullard opposed the motion, because it would only delay the matter. If the wishes of the property-owners were to be consulted, they would have a voice in the appointment of a committee.

Westland said the people could never come to an agreement. The experiment had been tried before and had failed.

Mr. Hansen objected to this statement. The people never had had a chance to meet together before.

Hansen doubted whether the City Council had a right to delegate its power.

Bleazby moved that the committee be composed of three, all to be selected from the citizens.

Fullard seconded this.

Westland then amended his motion so as to allow the citizens to select a committee of three to consult with a like committee to be selected by the mayor.

Hiles wanted to know whether it was intended that the three members of the committee selected by the citizens should also be held for their services.

Westland—No, they will be interested in the matter.

O. M. McAllister said he had built a rock retaining wall in front of his Center street property, on the lines given him by the city surveyor. To move that wall back five feet would cost him $500. He objected to going to such an expense because a city official had made a blunder.

Westland's motion went on the following vote: Yeas—Hardy, Lewis, Lawson, Simons, Westland. Nays—Pollock, Hardy, Moran, Rich.

Motion then carried the point of order that no money must be appropriated for any purpose except by a majority vote of the Council.

The point of order was sustained by the mayor, who read the ordinance upon the subject.

The vote by which the motion was lost was reconsidered, and the matter was left on the table until tonight.

Nick Trewes called the attention of the Council to the fact that a franchise was granted the Salt Lake City Railway company to operate a line on Center street, and he asked to know that it be guaded.

The Council then adjourned.

CONVENTION OF CENTER STREET.

After the adjournment of the City Council, the citizens held a meeting. Col. Nick Trewes being called to the chair and J. S. Peters chosen secretary.

All Rees moved that a committee of one from each block in dispute be appointed, they to examine their respective blocks and make a report as to what the people wanted to do.

C. O. Whitmore suggested a committee of three be added with the committee to be selected by the Council, and offered it as an amendment, which was accepted by Mr. Rees.

J. N. Pike objected to the appointment of a committee of disinterested persons. There were many people interested in the plat who were not present. He was in the line of the meeting appointing a committee to act with the council. He offered an amendment making the committee to ventura and report back to the next meeting.

There was some more desultory discussion when Pike's amendment was defeated and Whitmore's adopted.

The following gentlemen were nominated for the committee: Lewis Bates, L. T. Harmer, J. L. Pelton, John N. Pike and Duncan McAllister were nominated for the committee.

The following gentlemen were elected by ballot: Pelton, Harmer and Pike, and the meeting then adjourned.

The blocks affected by the adjustment are 5, 6, 7, 13, 14, 16, 17, 18, 20, 21, 22, 24, 26, 27 and 29.

Bank of Commerce	5 per cent	$50,000
Bank of Utah	5 per cent	50,000
Lawrence Ross & Co.	5 per cent	50,000
Total		150,000

Your committee recommend the acceptance of the bid of H. H. Rollins & Co., of Boston, for the 150 bonds, and that clerk of this board be authorized to accept the proposition in behalf of this board, and that the bonds be signed by the president and clerk of this board, attested by the president and forwarded to Wells, Fargo & Co., New York City, as soon as they can be prepared. Money to be ready in New York on April 5, 1892.

Respectfully,

WILLIAM NELSON, Chairman.
JOHN R. PIKE,
CHARLES BURTWLE,
HARRY T. DUNN.

A check for $2,000 accompanied the bid of H. H. Rollins & Co. It was returned to the same, which was recommended by the committee to the treasurer of the board on the acceptance of the proposition.

On motion of Mr. Pike the report was unanimously adopted.

THE BID ACCEPTED.

Following was the bid accepted:

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, April 4, 1892.

To the Honorable Board of Education, Salt Lake City:

GENTLEMEN: For the 150 bonds, 5 per cent, twenty-year gold bonds of your city, we make you the following offer: We will take the bonds and pay you therefor par and all the accrued interest, including April 1, 1892, less a commission of $1 per bond. The amount of accrued interest is $2,500. We also will deposit with the treasurer of your city $10,000 in money to be delivered immediately for property of Wells, Fargo & Co. Bank, in New York City, which we have now a multiple share of the product of the Mammoth Gold Mine of Salt Lake City, to be held as security for a cash payment.

Respectfully, H. H. ROLLINS & CO.,
Bankers, Cashier, U. S. Nat. Bank, Utah.

H. H. ROLLINS & CO.,
