SUNDAY SERVICES.

Religious services were held at the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday, October 25, 1891, commencing at 2 p. m., President Angus M. Cannon presiding.

The choir and congregation sang the hymn commencing:

The spirit first taught the fire to burning,
The last the glory begins to come forth.

Prayer was offered by Counselor Joseph J. Taylor.

The choir sang:

Condescend Lord, descend and dwell
Spirit and love, in every breast.

The Sacrament of the Fourth Ward officiated in the administration of the Sacrament.

ELDER JAMES H. TALMAGE

was called upon to address the congregation.

He said he found himself suddenly and unexpectedly placed before the people to discharge one of the duties belonging to an Elder in the Church as Kingdom of God. He would by undertake to comply with the request to address the audience He did not feel that the Latter-day Saints were exercising their faith and prayers in behalf of those called upon to address them. He had long ago given up the idea that a speaker ought to be given an opportunity to prepare a address beforehand. The speaker relied on the inspiration from God, the more humble he would be, the more likely to please our heavenly Father and benefit his brethren and sisters as well as himself. We get have faith in God in order to receive His gifts and blessings.

The term "faith" is frequently used among us. The word is almost as very day word. We have been taught that faith is the first principle of revealed religion. It is the chief cornerstone of the superstructure of the Gospel. Without it, it is impossible to please God. It is, therefore, well worth while to inquire into the full meaning of that word. Faith is older than the human race, yet many may not have comprehended its real significance.

Considering the word itself, it may be observed that it signifies almost the same as the word "belief." Faith is a species of belief. But setting philological considerations aside, for the time being, it may be said, that faith in God is implicit confidence in Him, a means whereby we may know Him, recognize Him as the Father of our spirits and the author of the whole universe, without which knowledge we cannot worship Him acceptably or intelligently.

It is true, we cannot fully comprehend all the powers and attributes of God, for man is capable of understanding only those attributes of which he can form his ideas by means of comparison. This is recognized as a true philosophic principle. For instance, to form a correct idea of the length of ten yards, is necessary to know the real length of the unit, one yard; any one who has this can easily, by comparison, comprehend the longer measure. In the same way we obtain knowledge of abstract things by comparing them to concrete, of unseen things by comparing them to that which is seen.

Thus we are enabled to understand, to some extent, the attributes of God. For He has been pleased to allow us to compare some of them to attributes of which we have already formed an idea. We have been told to call Him Father. Everybody understands what that means. It is a name familiar and dear to all of us. We know Him to be an individual with all the attributes which we have, though in higher perfection. He is living, He is just. This we can perceive both from His words and His actions. And as we obtain such knowledge, we can exercise faith in Him. Those who had erected an altar to an unknown God, thereby declared that they could have no faith, for we can place no confidence in a being whom we do not know.

Being that faith is absolute confidence in God, we may ask the question, How can we learn to exercise faith? Holy writ abounds in instances setting forth the results obtained by placing implicit confidence in God. These can be studied to great advantage. It is always good to study the biography of good men and to imitate their example.

Abraham is an illustrious instance. That man with whom God delighted to walk was called to leave his native land and go to a country he knew not, that he trusted in God and obeyed the call and went, guided by the Lord.

The speaker here dwelt at length upon the remarkable history of that great patriarch, showing how he was tried but that he, in the most severe trials, placed implicit confidence in his God, a faith that was rewarded with an abundance of the choicest blessings.

Referring to the command of the Lord to Abraham, to sacrifice his only child—a test which must have touched his heart strings to their utmost tension—the speaker remarked that many have thought it unfair of God to command Abraham to do such an act. It has been held up as an instance of God demanding a servant of His to violate the laws of the land in which he lived, and infidels have said, it is impossible to have confidence in a God who can command such violation of law and of nature. But we must consider the circumstances under which Abraham lived. The government at that time was patriarchal. The head of the family was not merely the owner of his property, but of his household too, and his and death of the children were in a large extent confided into his hands. During the journey in the wilderness, the Lord sometimes called upon the heads of the families to exercise the power, in order to exterminate blasphemer and other sinners from among the people. Such was the law at that remote time, and the Lord's command was no violation of any existing law. The first instance of the Lord requiring His servants to obey the laws of any land, remains yet to be found. Revelations, both ancient and modern, have always been in conflicts with the just laws of the country. The Lord never called upon His people to set such laws at defiance. Abraham, in this great trial, no doubt felt like Job—the Lord gave and the Lord had a right to take that back which He had given.

When one power implicit confidence in the Lord, the result cannot be but beneficent to man. We must not judge the Almighty according to ourselves. He who holds, subject to Him, wind, the flash of the lightning, and to whom time and space are no obstacles; He who controls even the hearts of men and can change them to conform to His plans and purposes—His promises can never fail. He will fulfil them in His own time and in His own way.

It has been observed that to know some men is in itself a good education, and there is a great deal of truth in that. But if this is so, what is it to know the Lord. It is indeed life eternal. And the more we know of Him, the more faith, the more confidence we can place in Him.

Faith is the great principle by which all things in the universe are operated Paul says the worlds were made by faith. The Father and the Son, who organized these worlds, had to exercise their faith in order to accomplish this great work. Yes, for God never asked us to do anything which he would not do Himself. Christ always told His disciples to follow Him. When He preached the necessity of baptism, He proved it by going down into the water Himself, and it is therefore but reasonable to suppose that God, our Father, and His Son exercise faith, once we are required to do so. The Lord exercises faith in the principles and laws where by He operates. He spoke to one He had confidence in the power He possessed, and creation was organized. He may speak again to us, and the power of regeneration may be stayed. His power, His faith are now the same as they were before.

If we are His children we may expect to find in us, to a certain extent, some of the attributes belonging to Him. Think of the mechanic who has invented, as it were, his own genius into the work he has completed. He spoke, because he knows the exact nature of his work and the laws governing it he has faith in it, and at his commanding word the machine moves. We obey the Gospel command the work He has made.

A man who doubts is not perfect. But he who has absolute faith can exclaim, "Though He slay me, yet will I serve Him." It is not always easy to trust in the Lord, for sometimes He tries His children, but in trials it must be remembered, that God often turns the greatest difficulties into blessings.

Faith is a gift of God. Reason, then, accompanied by our exercising faith? The Son of God has said that pearls should not be cast before swine. He does not bestow His gifts on those who do not appreciate them, but those who open their hearts shall have them filled with this heavenly gift, and God is no respecter of persons. The centurion, Cornelius, and many others had no rights to the blessings of God by means of their connection with the chosen seed, yet when they prepared themselves for the acceptance of faith, they received it. Their prayers were answered. Even a heathen, who will live up to the light he has, will receive faith, while a saint who does not live according to his light, will lose it. Everybody will be held accountable for what light and other spiritual gifts have been bestowed upon him. Hence, even the heathen, who is earnest in his worship, will be rewarded at least for his earnestness. But if there be one who has received faith and light, he must exercise that faith, or he will stand condemned. Some people think their individual efforts are lost in the multitude with which they mingle. They feel as if it were useless to continue the struggle. The speaker remembered a man who had once entered a place of worship as the choir was singing a sacred hymn. Their voices, however, mingled in the most fearful discord he had ever heard, and this he in particularly grateful to him, as thought of either shutting his ears or leaving the place. But as he feared to show any discourtesy to those whose guest he was, for the time being, he remained, and presently he heard a remarkably sweet soprano, not very loud, but in perfect harmony with the instrument. And by and by, one after the other of the singers unconsciously fell in with the sweet singer, till, finally, the whole choir was in harmony. What a lesson is this! We should not stop our efforts because of the discords that surround us. We are tempted, sometimes, to let the discords have their own way. But that is entirely wrong. What is the use of a man, if the harmony of the great song of life is not perfect, so long as you do not swerve from the part assigned to you by the great Compeer. Keep on faithfully, and you will soon find that those associated with you will fall in with you, and when this time has passed, a universal repertoire of peace will begin in the millennial reign of peace. This we can hasten on by faithfully performing each our own part.

The great Being, although incomprehensible in His majesty, is susceptible to the influences which you can exercise. He can smile with pleasure or weep with sorrow. Should we not then endeavor to please Him by placing absolute faith in Him? May God bless us, and may our testimonies increase, till we shall join the heavenly choir above.

The choir sang the anthem:

Father, let Thy blessings, as parting, be upon us.

Benediction was pronounced by Elder William B. Dougall.

Mineral Resin in Provo.

A startling piece of news came to light yesterday. A piece of ore from a new location adjoining Hopkinsbrook's property was assayed yesterday, and the result clearly astonished the owners, Messrs. Milner & Ferry. It goes $60 ounce to the ton. This assay was made in Provo and has been verified by a Salt Lake assay.—Provo Dispatch.

OGDEN HOT SPRINGS SOLD.

W. A. Paxton, of Omaha, Takes the Property for $57,000.

The Hot Springs south of Ogden, with all the belongings, were sold yesterday at auction on a mortgage foreclosure by the Manhattan Trust Company. When the motor line was extended from Five Points to the Springs, the Manhattan Trust Company bought a large portion of the bonds. When the interest could not be paid the Trust Company foreclosed and got judgment for $180,000, Sept. 20. The receiver was empowered to sell all the property of the Ogden and Hot Springs Railway and Health Resort Company, taking in the lands, buildings, railway tracks and all.

There were three bidders—W. A. Paxton of Omaha, James H. Breen, representing the Jarvis-Conklin people, and Dr. Brown, of San Francisco. The latter bid as high as $56,000, when Mr. Paxton raised the bid to $57,000. No one bid over the sum and the great and valuable property was sold free and clear of the judgment of lien against it.

Mr. Paxton says that he shall make some extensive improvements in the spring.

Why He Changed.

Condemn U. of our early days, were church member with a reputation of being good teacher and of good standing in all. He's changed in appearance since Kennedy's trip. Our train had just started from Ft.—station when we saw some distance off an old woman of the colored persuasion and of 300 pounds weight, shiny and nervous, with carpetbag and umbrella swinging with the energy of her great exertion to catch the train.

His heart was touched and he pulled the cord for "down brakes." At this unusual signal every window was pushed up and an eager head thrust out of each. The conductor smilingly encouraged the world be passenger, and the others showed her as she hobbled along in a full dark gallop. Two lady friends of hers demonstrated most upon the platform of the car and fearfully beckoned her approach. When at last she was landed by the brake, and was helped on by the conductor, three brakemen and a boy, she greeted her two friends with several affectionate "smacks" and a "goodby, children," then rolling back again to the ground she turned to our yellow conductor and said, "Thank you, boss," and waddled away.

That train was started as by one in a trance, and the solitary member of the following evening a prayer request from the wife of a backsliding conductor.—Troy Telegram.

A Wonderful Mineral Substance.

A new mineral substance, resembling asphalt, has been discovered in Texas, which promises to be a great boon to the scientific and industrial world. It is unaffected by heat, acid or alkalies, and is said to be the most perfect insulator yet discovered. It may be used for paint and is a perfect covering for wood or iron, resisting all the influences which destroy ordinary paints. As a varnish it retains its character under all conditions. It may be rolled into a thread and used for waterproof boots, clothing, etc; it makes leather impervious to water and prevents iron and steel from rusting.

Professor Hendlen, of the Western Electric company, says that when covered with this substance offer wrapped the resistance offered by other wires, and the results of its use in electrical engineering are likely to be very marked. The material is found in large quantities, from two to forty feet below the surface, and if it proves as useful as it promises will be a new source of wealth to Texas.—Boston Transcript.

Why People Go to Europe.

The high fares on American railroads result in sending people to Europe. All of New England and the Middle states are full of people who have visited Niagara, Niagara River, boulevards of Paris, been all over the United Kingdom and seen the midnight sun on the coast of Norway, and yet who have never been west of Chicago. They tour of the beauties of the Pacific coast, they read about the glories of the Yosemite valley and they want to go and see them, but when they learn what it will cost they think they cannot afford to go farther than Niagara Falls. After that they go to Europe, and so year by year the Atlantic passenger lists have been swelling rapidly until now they are something stupendous to contemplate.—Bangor (Me.) News.

Boys Growing Older So Was Thirty-Six.

Oak Cliff has a citizen who is now a robust old gentleman of the purest and is descended from a very long lived ancestry, their ages running to ninety-six, ninety-eight, one hundred and six, and up to one hundred and twelve years. He has all his teeth except two which were knocked out by an accident, and they are as sound as a dollar, although he is now seventy years old. He has grown three inches taller of an inch in height since he was thirty-five years old, and he wears a size larger hat now than he wore then. From that age up to forty-one or forty-two years his weight remained at 180 pounds, but at forty-two years and ten years, his mental faculties, he says, are brighter than ever before.—Dallas (Tex.) News.

Arrested for Selling Stunded Peaches.

A peculiar case of innocent violation of the revenue laws has developed in Decatur. F. S. Fox bought a quantity of imported brandied peaches. He took them to Otto Goeble and sold them at his restaurant. Jacob Leslie's boy became interested on the peaches, and this started quite a run on the peaches. Fox had to order a fresh supply. Mr. Leslie had Fox arrested for violation of the liquor law, and the trial will take place at Cerro Gordo. A Decatur chemist analyzed the peaches, and found that each bottle contained 14 per cent. of alcohol.—Cor. Chicago Tribune.

Metal Chew Gum.

A man from Oxford county had a railroad coupon ticket to the city, and inquired at the ticket office if one had been found. One had been found, but now were they to know that it was his. He asked to look at it and it was shown to him. He asked, "Is this the coupon I gave you?" Sir, the face of it is torn off. Look here," and he opened his vest pocket and showed a heavy end of gum and the face of a railroad coupon sticking to it. The two matched, and the ticket was passed over to him.—Lewiston Journal.

Made a Fortune Easily.

Captain D. S. Goodell, a retired sea captain, of Stonington, Me., raised money to enable James Rankin, of Troy, N. Y., to prosecute a suit for an infringement upon his fire engine valve patent, on condition that he should have a certain percentage of the damages recovered, if any. Captain Goodell's share of the winnings thus far foots up $750,000.—Bangor Letter.

Appearances Are Deceitful.

While riding down Washington street the other afternoon the rear bottle was occupied by a poorly dressed, ignorant looking man, with the unkempt, dirty locks of a coal heaver. Yet he was reading, with apparently latent interest, a well thumbed copy of Herodotus in the original Greek.—Boston News.

A Favorite Remedy.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a favorite during the winter months on account of its great success in the cure of colds. There is nothing that will loosen a severe cold so quickly, or so promptly relieve the croup. Then it counteracts any tendency towards pneumonia. It is pleasant and safe to take, and is fully worthy of its popularity. For sale by Z. C. M. I. Drug Store. d

I had a severe attack of catarrh and became so deaf I could not hear common conversation. I suffered horribly from coughing in my bed. I procured a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm, and in three weeks could hear as well as ever I could, and now I say to all who are afflicted with the worst of diseases, catarrh, take Ely's Cream Balm and be cured. It is worth $1,000 to any man, woman or child suffering from catarrh.—A. E. Newman, Graphic, Mich.

Specimen Cures.

S. H. Clifford, New Canal, Wis., was troubled with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, his Stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Hartsburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and the leg is sound and well. John Speeler, Catawba, O., had five large Fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by A. C. Smith & Co's Drug Store. 3-4
