FOR THE STOCK RAISER.

AN IMPORTANT PAPER ON EARLY MATURITY OF CATTLE.

Early Maturity the Greatest Advantage to Be Derived from Good Blood—Far Been Shorthorns Still Is the Best—Holstein Beef from Young Animals.

Mr. Mobley, the secretary of our board of agriculture, has from a great number of estimates compiled for Inspector Rosser the cost of the ordinary Kansas fall steer at $27, requiring in addition 100 to eighty bushels of corn to make him marketable at 1,200 to 1,400 pounds, which of course means a heavy loss. It has seemed to me that especially in these times economy as a rule here also gives the right of the value of early maturity, and the greatest value derived from good blood.

Since I have for the last four or five years been forced by the bad weather to give up the ordinary steer feeding I have been trying what a few years of good pasture could be made to do, and as the much cash year has seen the same the facts seem now established. They have been good beef and grade steers by good bulls generally when calves (the winter, January and February) sold usually in December. In five years the calves averaged 400 to 500 pounds at eleven months old, and have brought from $18 to $22. The yearlings, kept for twelve months longer, have averaged from 1,000 to 1,100 pounds, and have sold at the same price. The calves have generally had most of their milk from fall on, at seven months, and have consumed twenty bushels of corn, average price, $1. Long pounds of hay, average price, $5 per ton, and pasture, average price, $2 mid, $10.

In addition to this they had a small amount of pasture and what hay they would eat, which together I assume only supplied water and shelter. The calves have put half the yearlings have fairly held their own, and have taken the place and feed of nearly two calves during the twelve months held over, saying nothing of accident or sickness. I cannot help believing, therefore, that any good 100 acre farm—half in grass and half in grain—can keep twenty-five to thirty good grade cows profitably and, and a good cow shorthorn bull, easily worth $50 to $100, feed the calves from the start and sell at eleven or twelve months old, and make the business pay a decent profit, saying nothing of the hogs as well as keep up the land by a proper saving of the manure, to do which my way is to change my cows about so as to fall all the time, sometimes and litter of every season, so as to bedding in every lot and call, and get it on the land just as fast as possible.

I emphasize the color of the bull in all arrangements, for every year only convinces me more firmly that when it is a question of difficulty in raising early fall and winter, good blood is always a great advantage on the side of the cows. I do not want any one to infer that a good bull will be objectionable, but when the question is one of the greatest gain in the least time and at least cost I indicate on which side the chances are greatest.

The thing indispensable is the breeding of such stock to early maturity, but in the feeding absolute and perfect regularity, watching the appetite and permitting no scouring. Eyes and hearing must work as well as the hands. Early maturity and proper early feeding—to these two considerations bring all the law and the prophets. The long, big framed, rangy, slow maturing animal of any kind—cattle, hog or sheep—is a thing of the past. Small bones, wide chests, short legs, compact build, good coats, and thick, soft hides now rule in the trade of points, and they must be bred and utilized to the fullest extent if we wish to compete with the "rangy," long up the building of the farm and have the best market on the right side.

I have a few old friends who sometimes talk about "straight baby beef," "early," etc. The old cattle, "Do get fitted," etc., of course applies here. All I can say is I have never heard any complaint from butchers or buyers and the best beef I ever ate, making no hungry even in thought for more, was a 14 months old Shorthorn steer kept in this way. From his hocks to his ears it was all perfect beef, fine grained, tender and juicy. The whole family relished his memory.—W. A. Harris in Breeder's Gazette.

The Queen's Heifer.

In the picture below as to a Hereford of Princess Josephine II, the heifer that took the prize at the Birmingham (Eng.) show last week. The princess is a remarkably fine and fat animal, but the peculiarity about her is that she is the property of Queen Victoria.

PRINCESS JOSEPHINE II.

Observe the long, straight back, the deep body and general look of fat beef in the model most producing machine. Queen Victoria is much interested in Irish affairs, and manages as often to carry off agricultural and live stock prizes that some of her doubtful subjects think, considering how rich she is, she should leave some of the prizes to them in the way of premiums. Her animals are generally known, and on the principle that it is good policy to look at the emperor's jokes, the judges send the prizes her way often.

Unfortunately Josephine took cold and died just before she was to be honored, so that after all nobody got a taste of royalty's beef.

The Duke of Bedford had an income of a million dollars a year. But even that could not keep off gout, so the duke of a noble horse killed himself. A horse has, so long as the stomach is full, has more fun than the Duke of Bedford had.

There are too many language in Europe—complaints as American correspondent. Of course there are. Let us sit down upon some pronunciation for signors, every one of them, and make them learn to talk pure Yankee English through their noses.

WHAT BREEDING MEANS.

Things Which Every Stock Raiser Ought to Understand Thoroughly.

What is breeding based on? It is based on heredity. We can accounts, nature or propensity. Mr. Wylie spoke of inheriting as upholding primary. The Jew is the most wonderfully inbred race of all men on earth. He has been inbred from the very day he left the Egyptians. You may breed him with any race on earth, and the child will be a Jew sooner than anything else. Now, I am not prejudiced that apply equal love, but the same with mankind, as with man. What is the reason for that? Because the Jew has established a type so potently and powerfully that he must be the master of his blood, and the secret of color. Hook the Jew current blood possession of the other, and the result is a Jew. Now that is a valuable thing to study up, that is the secret of pedigree.

Some time more of pedigree and say that it is worth nothing. Pedigree has a long manner of expressing the to breed in the long run, and not only a good specimen of the individual, as we know they need a long line of failure and success of the same line characteristics, so that there is a constant approximate approximation to the ideal of the breeding for which the breeding is done. It is a well known fact today that if a Texas steer is given a quarter of a bushel of corn meal on his cronies, and you take a Shorthorn steer and feed him six cows quantity, you will get very different results. What Becomes the power to assimilate food and produce flesh has been lost into the Shorthorn and by a contrast, does process such so.

The Cross river has not been bred for anything except to get near the ground. I have to a cross between a prairie, and it a item to be judged by the antecedents of his following. I was the most popular cock ever seen in Texas. Now, there are certain principles that I want to bring out in order to show that a farmer needs to study them. Why? Because his money and his living and his profits are in these animals, and yet he seems to think that nobody but the breeder ought to study breeding. Why, the farmer is the man that is to make the money out of the cross. It is the man who knows that has to produce the animals of the cross market, and the breeder. Therefore the average farmer should be just as wise in producing a good animal as the breeder. He should be a breeder.

Now, take dogs, for instance. They are a favorite illustration of mine because it is so clear on the question of heredity. Take a setter and a bulldog, both have wonderfully strong, and yet because of your back wise man begins to breed one dog to small birds alone, and the other to small four footed animals alone, and we will have they are, and that the setter may be afraid of a bulldog to say other dog than the scent of the bird.

You do not find dog now acting as a bulldog or pointer. No, not in years and would one undertake to go hunting foxes with a long dog or birds with a bulldog or either with a bulldog. And yet we have thousands and thousands of farmers who are trying to make butter with best animals and trying to make beef with better animals. The average production of our cows is a disgrace. I tell you, my friends, it is not feeding so much today as it is intelligent shaping of these animals for a purpose.

An old man jumped up in an institute and said, "You may talk as much as you have a mind to about it, I say the breed is in the cornstalk," one of those truths that are partly true, and yet not true. I said, "If your words mean anything at all, they mean that you don't pay any attention to breed, but everything to feed." "Yes," he said, "that's right." "Very well," said I, "you are the man I have been looking for for years. You have got a chance to succeed, and I want to get it. It doesn't make any difference what the breed is, it is all in the feed." "That's it," he said. "Very well," said I, "do you remember that razor back hog you had here thirty or forty years ago?" "Oh, yes," he said. "Now," I asked, "how would you feed that hog so as to make a Poland China of him?" He looked a little staggered. I added, "How would you feed a razor back to make a draft horse out of it? How would you feed a Jersey cow to make a Hereford out of it?" "Well," he replied, "you may talk as much as you are a mind to, but I believe just what I said." Now don't you see that too many of us are old fashioned?

Here is a bale of hay. On one side stands a running horse, on the other a draft horse, on this side a dairy cow, and on that side a beef animal. Now there is just exactly one kind of food, yet in one case it produces speed, quick, fast action; in another slow, sluggish action, in another it produces butter, and in another beef. At another bale are three wood sheep and mutton sheep. You see the difference in the breeds. What is it that turns the result off like a switch down these different tracks? What is it that takes the same car and shows it upon one track or another? It is breed.

Now one of these disadvantages that we labor under as farmers is that we are not sufficiently educated up to the idea of a thoroughbred sire. The thoroughbred sire is the sire that has received, like the river, a lot of means from the mountains on either side carrying him him to swell the potency of his blood, and that all in one line. A thoroughbred sire is the bull of potency that to impressive himself upon his progeny. For instance, breed a native cow with a thoroughbred Holstein bull he has had no more of a point of breeding in a distinct line that he invariably turns its calves black and white, and will continue to do so to the end of time.—Governor W. D. Hoard.

In Holland there are some farms on which may be found as many as 400 cows. They are near Amsterdam, and are so luxurious and profitable as a stump tree in Alaska.

A test shows its weight at first when it is put into the stalks to be fattened and stand to feed a month before it starts to decide gain.

The golden feature of the wonderful discovery of Dr. Koch is that the impregnated canals have already taken hold of the bacilli and are beginning to silver the little rice all "jumpin" to a lou nearly defunded world.
