ANOTHER DIAMOND!

Justice Harvey Entrusts Lafayette's Jewelry to the Sheriff,

IN THE SUIT OF P. J. DALY.

Lafayette Tried On a Settlement Outside, But It Didn't Work At All.

New papers, etc., having been filed in the case of P. J. Daly, the attorney, vs S. Lafayette, the bow and arrow man, reported in these columns yesterday, the matter was again brought before Justice of the Peace Harvey this morning. His honor now directed that the jewelry—a gold watch and chain and diamond pin—in the keeping of Chief Pratt, be turned over to Sheriff McQueen in satisfaction of the judgment previously taken by Daly for $130, to be held by him pending the hearing, some day next week, on Lafayette's motion to set aside that judgment.

But the sheriff is determined that there shall be no "passe" this time. He instructed Deputy Sheriff Montgomery to make application for the jewelry, in accordance with the court's order, but before actually receiving it over to take it to the jewelry establishment of Joslin and Park, accompanied by a diamond expert named Marks, in order to have the diamond examined and passed upon.

Lafayette made certain overtures to Attorney Daly this morning in the direction of a compromise. Daly's "bill" for legal services, and on which he obtained judgment, amounted to $130. Lafayette wanted him to accept $50 in full settlement and at once surrender the jewelry, but this Daly most positively refused to do. Lafayette further promised that if his offer was accepted he would "get out of the town right away." Daly's rejoinder was that he could please himself on that score—that his action in that regard was perfectly immaterial to him. So Lafayette gave in and went away.

As to the glass substitute in the stud about which so much has already been said in connection with the case in Justice Loofbourow's court, no "report" has been yet made by Detective Sheets, to whom the mystery was entrusted for a fathom; at all events nothing is publicly known of it.

Rufus C. Allen's Testimony.

ST. GEORGE,
August 29, 1894.

Editor Deseret News.

In the SEMI-WEEKLY NEWS, 16th inst., appear the names of the Pioneers of 1847—and one of the names is Rufus Allen, of Washington county. My uncle, Rufus Allen, was with the Pioneers. He lived near Ogden City, and died there about five or six years since, true and faithful. Myself and my uncle have been taken for the same person a great many times and my name appears in history as Rufus Allen instead of Rufus Chester Allen or Rufus C. Allen, and the question is frequently asked me which one of us it was that was with the Mormon Battalion; which one was with Apostle P. P. Pratt at Valparaiso in Chili; also on the plains in the year 1848 as far as 120 miles below Fort Laramie to assist the emigration; again in 1849 below Independence Rock for the same purpose.

In the spring of 1854 I was called on an Indian mission to southern Utah, with others, and was released in September, 1932, to return north in time to spend a good share of my time during the fall and winter of 1857 and '58 in the mountains, inasmuch as Johnston's army had to be looked after. Then I came south to settle in Dixie in 1861. Again in 1866 I was called on to go across the plains to Wyoming, Missouri river, to assist the emigration driving an ox team from Virgen City on the Virgen river to Wyoming and back the same season, 2,600 miles. My uncle, Rufus Allen, was not with us on either of those trips on missions. If you deem the foregoing worthy of room in your valuable paper, all right.

RUFUS C. ALLEN.

AMUSEMENTS.

HARRIGAN CLOSES TONIGHT—The Theater had a third fair sized audience last evening when Mr. Harrigan gave Cordelia's Aspirations; it was announced on the program that Saturday night had been cancelled to allow the company to reach Denver earlier, and that the play of Reilly and the 400, by all odds the best of Harrigan's dramatic efforts, would close the engagement tonight. This announcement ought to fill the house. Cordelia's Aspirations provoked a good deal of laughter, though unlike Harrigan's other plays, it gave few opportunities to anyone except the star himself. As the henpecked husband Harrigan was in one of his best veins.

A GREAT RACE PROBABLE.

Directum and Alix to be Pitted Against Each Other.

Those Great Flyers Stand a Fair Chance of Cutting Down Nancy Hanks's Record.

Nancy Hanks now stands at the head of the world's trotters, with a record of 2:04 made last year. The California mare Alix has made a record—the fastest this year—on the same track of 2:05¼. Last year she was beaten by Directum, who made a record of 2:05¼. The mare having come up to this point, arrangements are in progress to pit Alix and Directum in a great race, and in all probability this will come off soon. Orrin Hickok, who had charge of Directum since this spring, has challenged Monroe Salisbury, half owner of Alix, to a match race any way from $2,500 to $10,000. It is very likely that Salisbury will accept Hickok's challenge, says the San Francisco Chronicle, and then the sporting fraternity will be able to decide as to the relative merits of each animal.

Directum, as well as Alix, has a third heat record of 2:05¼. Last year these two formidable rivals met in a match race at Fleetwood Driving park, New York, on November 7th. Directum won in three straight heats. Time, 2:11¼—2:10¾—2:07. Monroe Salisbury had Directum for two seasons and he should have a good line on him. Directum is owned by John Green, of Dublin, California, a place about six miles from Salisbury's stock farm.

Failing to make satisfactory arrangements with the owner of Directum for this season, Salisbury had his eyes open looking for a good free-for-all campaigner, so in June of the present year he took a trip to see Mr. Jones, the owner of Alix, and finally they made a deal by whom the fleet-footed daughter of Patronage passed into Salisbury's hands. It was freely stated that the ex-owner of Director had purchased a half interest in her.

Alix has been trotting some this season. Morris Jones drove her a public mile in 2:11¾ at Council Bluffs in June. Those who witnessed this performance say it was as easy as riding a mile in three minutes in a buggy. On July 4 at the same place she beat Robbie P. (who is now in Montana) in a match race, journeyed east, and Monroe Salisbury took her in his stable. At Saginaw, Mich., on July 14th, she defeated Hamlin's Nightingale in straight heats, the fastest heat being 2:09¾ and the average for the three heats 2:11¼. At Detroit, Mich., the next week, she was third to Lord Clinton and Pixley. The fastest heat in this race was 2:10 4-5.

The next starting place for the queen of the turf this year was at Cleveland. She won a race there with the remarkable average of a shade better than 2:09 3-5, which was the average record then. She never did seem to like the track at Buffalo, New York. It was there that Pamlico made it interesting for the little mare. Alix won the race, two of the heats being better than 2:10. The four heats averaged 2:09 4-5.

The Terre Haute track, where Nancy Hanks trotted her unprecedented mile of 2:04, furnished the climax. It was there that Ryland T., Pixley and Walter E. went down before the Patronage mare. She trotted the three greatest heats ever trotted or paced. She was never headed in 2:06, 2:06½, 2:05¼. By the latter heat she equaled the third-heat record made by Directum last year.

It is very true that Alix did not beat the third heat record, for Directum trotted last October at Nashville in the same time, 2:05¼. But the two races compared show that the mare very distinctly outclasses the stallion. He had only two entries to compete with, viz., Nightingale and Hazel Wilkes, while Alix had four entries to beat. Directum also had two easy heats in 2:11¼ and 2:14. Then he was out lone and had a runner at the half to bring him home. On the contrary the mare's first heat was in 2:06, her second in 2:06½. Then when she stepped home the third heat in 2:05¼ it was on her own courage and without a pacemaker to help her. Directum came the last half in 1:01¼ with his pacemaker, while Alix came home in 1:01¼ alone. In Nancy Hanks's mile of 2:04, made at Terre Haute, Ind., she came home in 1:01¼, but she trotted the third quarter in 0:29¼. Taking everything into consideration, if Directum and Alix meet it will be the greatest and fastest race ever trotted in the world.

WHEN BISMARCK WORE A WIG.

IT WAS A PALPABLE FRAUD AND HE DISCARDED IT SUMMARILY.

[Berliner Brief.]

Prince Bismarck expressed himself in very forcible terms on the subject of baldness. "Mollie," he said, "wears a wig which deceives nobody. If I I wore a wig I should given vent to all my humors, and wear wigs of all kinds—long, short and middle-sized; fair and brown. In my eyes a wig legitimately a hood of hair, instead of wool, silk or cotton, I should, therefore, wear my wig as a hood, and there are hoods of different kinds, some warmer and some lighter. There was a time when I made up my mind to wear a wig, when I was in St. Petersburg. My excuse was the cold.

"At a review at Warsaw before the Czar Alexander II and the Prince Regent of Prussia, afterward the Emperor William I, I had to ride and wear a military uniform. A helmet is a bad protection against both heat and cold, so I resolved to put on my wig. We were galloping in the retinue of the princes when a general beside me looked at me and said, half chaffingly: 'What, do you wear a wig?' 'Is it to be seen?' I replied. 'Yes, devilish distinctly. It's slipping down on one side.' It was the fact. The carriage in which I was to drive home was standing at some distance. I left the general staff where it was. My general accompanied me, and we spurred our horses. I stopped my horse at the carriage—not an easy matter, for it was a thoroughbred—and there and then, in the presence of the czar, the princes, the general staff and the army, I took off my helmet, tore off my wig and threw it into the carriage. The prince regent, who attached great importance to forms, afterward said to me rather testily, 'What a diabolical maneuver you executed with that wig of yours.'"
