POLITICAL PIE.

There is no doubt but that primaries in politics are powerful and popular factors for the accomplishment of great good if rightly controlled. If they are not properly conducted they become the convenient and likewise powerful medium for thwarting the public will, a smoother machine for carrying out the nefarious schemes of the ever plotting office-seeker and cheap ward politician.

Salt Lake readers of the Chicago papers at this particular time are reasonably sure to be impressed with the idea that the city of wind, water and big ambitions and wonderful enterprises has its McCarthys and its Gallagers and the there, so here, the democrats get the votes in the primaries and in the elections. On the last net, the Cook county democracy hung out a flag of defiance at a meeting of disorganizers who had secreted in effect that peace should not be the lot of the city and intimes who put their faith in the free-for-all primaries.

Chairman Hunt in his opening speech said in the primaries white should be an expression of the people's will they were confronted with something more serious than the opposition of the Republicans; they had men within their own ranks protesting primaries in the most incredible manner. The best men in the party were being robbed and trampled, ignored, insulted and downtrodden. To complete the several primaries had been planned in a way which left no chance for a fair contest. Rifle-shot instructions had been received from the manipulators and they would be followed to a cowardly as to make the primaries worse than a farce.

That there is a great deal of truth in the above no one will dispute. That the same methods have obtained to this city to a disgusting degree cannot be denied. But as to the cause. That is another thing. Many of the best men in the community are indirectly responsible for it in that they remain away from the primaries. They are fair weather politicians, or rather they are not politicians at all. They remain at home on the velvet, protest and allow the lobo element to capture and run the meeting, nominate men of their own kind and effect their own best. Then when the ticket is made and when recklessness and extravagance run rampant they howl about bad government. Oftentimes, such conditions are frequently your own fault.

Once let the best men of a city come out to force and show by their action that they mean business and the till will keep in the rear. But when the men of property interests, intellect and ability wilfully stay at home they cannot but expect to hear with no uncertain sound that a clique or combination of cliques with private ends to serve have planted the plums from the primary tree and know that they will eat the fruit at their leisure in the sweet by and by. And as to combinations, every intelligent voter knows of them. We have heard a great deal about trading strength, of "you pollite me and I'll pull for you." The extent to which this swapping is carried is really alarming. For instance in a straight Democratic primary in the Third precinct on Saturday night last that president of big tax collectors, Samuel Gallagher, a federal Republican of the darkest hue actually secured six votes for councilmen. Now the question arises: To whom will he give aid later on for this support and why did he receive it?

Continuing further on the question of primaries I am reminded that the Liberal Club has issued a call for such gatherings throughout the various municipal wards of the city to be held on the 12th inst. There are men in that party today who are quaking with fear caused by a lurking suspicion that the awful Americans will be in the ascendancy and that they will do things pretty much to suit themselves. That this will be the result is not at all unlikely though does anti-Catholic war wagers are not nearly as numerous as is believed in some quarters. Yet the fact remains that they are of a class who keep their eyes and their ears open and who will work like the proverbial beaver to accomplish their designs. Even now they are laying their plans and laying them well. Not a move is made in Liberal headquarters, not a whisper is heard but what reaches the ears of the American spy and is soon conveyed into his own camp. This is accounted for by the fact that the Americans are supposed to have at least two members on the city committee. Doubtless anti-Mormon exists everywhere and what the end will be no man can tell at this stage of the game.

COLONEL ADAMS.

Scandinavian Concert.

The Scandinavian concert in Odd Fellows' Hall last night was well attended and the exercises were rendered in good style.

Mrs. Agnes Olsen Thomas received the gold ring as the most popular lady present. Other prizes were distributed as follows: The best lady and gentleman waltzers, over 50 years of age, Charles Pearson and Mrs. Paulsen; the best lady and gentleman waltzers dancers, any age, Carl Christensen, aged threescore, largest lady, Mrs. O. P. Olsen; the oldest widower, Theodore Parsons; the most popular politician, regardless of party, O. J. Anderson; oldest married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Ole Larsen; best gentleman dancer, Captain Lund; best waltzers, Mrs. Bonnie Cannon and Anton Pedersen.

A "HERALD" LIBEL SUIT.

Mr. William Cottam, of Sanpete, Brings Suit for $10,000 Damages.

William Cottam, of Sanpete, Sanpete county, last evening, in the Third district court, filed a damage suit in the sum of $10,000 against the Salt Lake Herald Publishing company, on account of a communication published in the semi-weekly issue of August 29th, 1893, alleged to have reflected upon the character of the plaintiff. Mr. Cottam, who is a merchant, states that he has always been a good citizen and that the publication of the article in question has injured his reputation and business.

The paragraph to which exception is taken runs thus: "The party contesting is like many to be found today throughout the country, doing everything they can to break up social settlements and families, and has recently been cut off from the church. He has had so unchristianly that we deem it not right to enter into, as he has exhibited it himself during the people he was fighting on behalf of the people when there is not a person in the world who would or could have any skin in him or hair on his head whatever. Very respectfully, with best wishes,

ANDREW GOODSON."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(Special Correspondence.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 1.—The unconditional repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman law is now regarded by experienced people as a dead issue, because of the continued inability to bring the Vorhees bill to a vote in the Senate. The silver senators remember their power and are now determined as to be considerable amendment that they will accept than they have been at any time since the debate began, and although the Democrats favor the adoption of the compromise there is a possibility that through their obstinacy nothing will be done, the Vorhees bill being merely left on the calendar to die. The compromise that has been endorsed by the largest number of senators who would vote for unconditional repeal if they could, provides for the suspension of the purchases of silver until all the silver currency reaches $500,000,000, also that $250,000,000 of bonds shall be at once issued to increase the gold reserve fund of the treasury. The silver men do not like the idea of a new bond issue, but that will be needed soon by the repealers. It is not probable that any definite action will be taken until next week, but so certain are many senators and representatives that next week will end the long struggle in some way that they are preparing to visit the World's Fair, is being expected that Congress will take a two weeks' recess as soon as the matter is settled.

Representative Cooper, of Texas, is responsible for a unique proposition for a settlement of the silver question. He has introduced a bill requesting the governors of all the states to call a special election of the people in November to vote upon the question of free coinage of silver, the election to be conducted in the manner of elections to select members of the legislature, and the result to be officially certified to Congress by the governors. That would show unquestionably what a majority of the people wish Congress to do, and the majority is at least supposed to govern in this country.

Whether President Cleveland really intended to slap the senators who have refused to do his bidding, in voting for the repeal bill, when he made that speech at the Capital centennial, is more than your correspondent would undertake to say positively, but it is certain that his remarks were so taken by the members, and equally certain that the slaps have been returned with more than interest by senators of his own party. Senator Morgan, while not once mentioning unpatriotic, made his meaning plain in all. He said: "No man in office, however high, no monopolist in credit with power, however supreme and extensive, no man, whatever his powers may be, can silence or intimidate me from the discharge of my duty to grant the people all of their constitutional rights, and no man crowd me into silence when I choose to speak. This is an alien in which I have the honor to be one of the representatives of a sovereign state, whose suffrages shall not be taken from her without her consent, and where I have got the right of full and free speech. And although it may make the ears of aristocracy sore to listen to me, although my words may burn them like cinders, yet it is my duty here in the presence of God and in this august presence—it is my duty in the state whose representative I am—that I hold to stand here and defend the constitutional rights of my constituents as long as, in my judgment, the defense is appropriate, requisite and necessary. Nobody need be astonished at the singleness of the remarks, or any part of it, nor suppose that because we may think we ought to have great influence I would thereupon consecrate myself into a cringer of a mouse and run into a hole to conceal myself. The last man in Alabama, the smallest nigger in Alabama, is entitled to the constitutional rights at my hands as much as the President of the United States is, and he will have it if I know how to give it."

The debate in the House on the bill for the repeal of the Federal election laws, which will continue another week before a vote is taken, has been as a rule unusually tame, instead of exciting as it was expected to be. This is largely owing to the determination of the Republican leaders not to allow members of their party to make "bloody shirt" speeches against the bill. If it be deed politics not to do what your opponents want you to do this was good politics, for the Democrats made no secret of their desire to stir up a row but partisan row, it may come yet. A week is a long time, and man's temper mighty uncertain.

The nomination of Mr. Van Alen to be ambassador to Italy, which has been created upon honors of the charge that he contributed $50,000 toward the election of President Cleveland with the understanding that he was to have that office, is still much gossiped about. The Senate committee to investigate the charge, and consideration of political pressure is being brought to bear to secure the confirmation. The politicians would be sorry to see the nomination rejected.
