

nesday, coming direct from the coast in a special car.

He is accompanied by a party consisting of Mrs. Jackson, two daughters, Miss Elizabeth and Miss Louise, his son, William H. Jackson, Mrs. Nathaniel Baxter, Miss Baxter and Dr. J. P. Drake. During their stay in Salt Lake the distinguished party are the guests of Judge Judd, who is an old time friend of Judge Jackson. They were to go out to Saltair on the 4:10 train this afternoon. "I have," said Judge Judd, "known Judge Jackson for more than thirty years. He is one of the very best lawyers in the United States and no mistake was made in naming him for the exalted position he occupies. There is not a man on the Supreme bench who is his superior. Not more than one or two are his equals."

The judge is traveling for his health during the summer vacation and is, unfortunately, considerably indisposed at present. Tomorrow forenoon, according to present arrangements, he will call on the First Presidency and visit the Tabernacle and grounds. He will probably remain here about three days. Judge Judd is arranging a reception in his honor so that he can be met by members of the bar before taking his departure for the East.

Judge Jackson is a native Tennessean, and sixty-two years of age. From his early manhood he has been prominent in the public affairs of the South, and was elected to the legislature of his own state, served two terms on the Supreme Bench of Tennessee, and was United States senator from 1881 to 1887.

The trapping of bears in Logan canyon is becoming quite a business. The trappers spoken of last week as having caught seven have since added two skins to their pile. Some sheepherders have also been trapping near the head of Spring Hollow in the upper part of the canyon, and have caught several. One of the herders is a boy about fifteen years of age, who felt a great deal of curiosity about bears, never having had the privilege of inspecting one at close range. A few mornings since his yearnings in this direction were fully satisfied. On going to the traps he found that they had captured a large female cinnamon, which was accompanied by two cubs. The boy knew the length of the chain by which the trap was fastened, and without fear walked up quite close. The animal growled at him but he stepped up still closer. It happened that the trap had not caught her by the foot, but that the teeth in the jaws had penetrated the skin on her belly. When she became thoroughly enraged she darted at the boy and the skin gave way. In a few bounds she caught him and struck him one blow on the thick part of the thigh that knocked him about fifteen feet, and into an almost ice cold stream of water from a near-by spring. The boy dared not move for fear of another attack, so was compelled to nearly freeze. One of his companions witnessed the occurrence from a distance and hastened to the rescue; but it was some time before he could get a good shot without having the boy in direct line with the course of the bullet. As the man approached bruin raised up on her hind quarters, and he lodged a bullet in her brain the first shot. Between fear and the chills caused by his cold bath the boy was laid up for one day, but strangely, the blow struck him by the bear caused him but little inconvenience. An immense grizzly, judging from his track, walked off with a very heavy trap belonging to Mack Warrum and F. Crookston the other night. A large log was attached.

More than two weeks have elapsed since the county board of equalization reached the end of its labors, and from that time until late last evening County Clerk Meloy had kept a couple of clerks busily employed upon the lists, totalling the corrected valuations. Mr. Meloy certified the results to the Territorial board of equalization today. By the corrected total the entire valuations are shown to be:

THE EXACT DATE AND PLACE.

Mrs. Mary S. Scholes Blackmore writes to the News as follows: "I saw in Saturday's paper in the list of the names of Pioneers, a mistake as to the date and place of the death of my husband, George Scholes. It should have stated that he died August 14th, 1857, at Big Cottonwood. Please correct and oblige the writer."

The News gladly makes the correction referred to and extends thanks to the lady for calling attention to the error. It is essential that all such data be absolutely correct.

Judge Heed, postmaster at Oakley, Idaho, is reported $2,800 short in his accounts and his bondsmen are being pressed to make the sum good to the government. Mr. Heed was well known about Boise City, Atlanta, Challis and other places in Idaho where he lived, and he was also a resident of Brigham City. He is quite old and was one of the pioneers of Idaho.

Dillon (Mont.) Tribune: The chief of police had some difficulty in arresting a hobo one day last week, and had not Sheriff Hamilton gone to his rescue he would have been badly used. As it was both Haggerty and Hamilton were more or less bruised and scarred up. The brute kicked and struck even after he had the handcuffs on and gave the sheriff a swipe on the head that might have proven serious had it not been a glancing blow. After the fellow was lodged in jail he stripped all his clothes off and gathering all the rags he could find about the place, set fire to them. The fire did no damage other than depriving the hobo of clothing. He was locked in a cell naked and there he stays. He is trying to make out that he is crazy, but it will not work.
