BOARD OF LADY MANAGERS.

Presidents Appointed For The Various County Associations.

FAIR COMMITTEE SESSION.

Secretary Hellquist Makes a Report of His Recent Visit to Chicago.

There was a meeting of the board of lady managers for Utah last evening at the commission rooms, all the members being present except Mrs. Lyman, who was unavoidably detained. Mrs. Salisbury, Mrs. Whalen and Miss Keogh of the national board were also present.

The following presidents of organizations were appointed: Lucy A. Clark, Farmington, Davis county; Mary Pitchforth, Nephi, Juab county; Sarah Preston, Ephraim, Sanpete county; Sarah H. Crosby, Panguitch, Garfield county; Amy E. Cook, Lakeview, Iron county; Ann C. Woolley, St. George, Washington county; Mary Howard, Huntington, Emery county; Harriet D. Bunting, Kanab, Kane county; Mrs. Ruth Hatch, Heber City, Wasatch county; Rhoda A. Lyman, Tooele, Tooele county; Mrs. E. Crane Watson, Paragonah, Iron county; Delilah K. Olsen, Fillmore, Millard county; Martha T. Hammond, Bluff, San Juan county; Mamie J. Snow, Brigham, Box Elder county; Ann Cluff, Coalville, Summit county; Ellen E. C. Francis, Morgan, Morgan county; Celia E. Dean, Richfield, Sevier county; Sarah M. Dell, Beaver, Beaver county; Sarah Stewart, Moab, Grand county, Mrs. C. C. Bartlett, Vernal, Uintah county; Sarah S. Studeweis, Junction, Piute county; Mrs. Emmeline B. Wells, Salt Lake City, Salt Lake county; Mrs. Thomas Whalen, Ogden, Weber county; Mrs. Marilla Daniels, Provo, Utah county; Mrs. Moses Thatcher, Logan, Cache county.

A meeting was called for the Temple portion for Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock, to organize Salt Lake County.

It was decided to collect funds and make a silk portier for the Woman's building at Chicago, the portier to be made of native silk.

Mrs. Thatcher was appointed a committee of one to make a report on candidates for the floral emblem to be selected for the Territory.

A large amount of routine business was transacted, and the board adjourned subject to call.

The World's Fair commission met last evening in special session at the room of the secretary in the Continental hotel.

The secretary presented his report of his recent visit to Chicago and the business transacted. The report, in brief, stated that in pursuance of instructions this were received up to Monday evening, Aug. 29, when the bids of contractors and the amount of their bids were wired to Executive Commissioner Empey. Harden & Son being the lowest, the contract was awarded to them in pursuance of instructions received by wire and written notice was given Messrs. Harden & Son and the contracts drawn and the bond presented on the 1st of September. The contractors did not wait for the formal contract to be signed by the officials here but commenced work at once.

The action of the secretary was approved, the bond of the contractors approved and the contract properly executed last evening by the commission. The plans for the Utah building have been highly praised by all the officials at Chicago. Chief Burnham spoke in the highest terms regarding them, saying that he considered the building with handsome and appropriate for Utah.

The Utah site is still a matter of contest, some of the other states being anxious to compliment at least temporarily shown Utah. Most of the States occupy practically all of their ground with their buildings, several of them being obliged to cut down their buildings to fit their sites. Utah has ample space on all sides with a beautiful grove of shade trees on the west. Only three of the numerous shade trees have to be cut down to make room for the Utah building.

Several of the States now find that they have put too much money into their buildings and have to cut short on their exhibits in order to build and furnish their buildings.

The reports from the several chiefs of departments indicate that the work of collecting and preparing the Utah exhibit is now well under way.

Home From New Zealand.

Elder John S. Growbom has just returned from a two year's mission in New Zealand. He left his home at Springville, August 18, 1890. He labored first in the Samoan conference. After six months there he was transferred to the Bay of Islands in the north. He reports the mission in the southern part of the island in a flourishing condition, while in the north the natives do not manifest so much interest in the Gospel.

He enjoyed his labors very much, and was blessed with good health all the time. He left Auckland on August 11th, and arrived in San Francisco on the 31 inst.

Columbus Anniversaries.

Just about this time of year, 446 years ago, Christopher Columbus began his wonderful work of destroying ancient superstitions and discovering a new world. He did it well, too, for he sailed on Friday, discovered land on Friday, did several other memorable things on the same day and proved for the second time that the land near the equator was habitable. He had proved it already in his famous discussion with the learned council of Salamanca.

He did not sail Aug. 3, however, or discover land Oct. 12, as all the schoolbooks say, for it was in the Fifteenth century then, and they reckoned by old style, and so nine days must be added to every date to make it square with the times now. "Family Treasuries of Biography and History" of today. President Harrison and the World's Columbian exposition managers have properly recognized this and we shall celebrate accordingly.

Let us say, then, continuing the "styles," that Columbus sailed from the bar of Saltes, port of Palos, Spain, Aug. 3-12, 1492; saw the first Old World land (in the Canary Islands) Sept. 9-19; observed the variation of the needle for the first time in history Sept. 13-25; was discovered by Martin Alonzo Pinzon's claim that he saw land on Sept. 25-Oct. 6; was 707 leagues west of the Canaries on Oct. 1-11; had a row after a mutiny of the sailors on the night of Oct. 10-21 and first saw land at dawn of Oct. 12-23.

On the preceding evening he had seen a light which he judged to be carried by some one on shore, or rising and falling in a fisherman's boat. He consulted on deck Pedro Gutierrez and Rodrigo Sanchez, who saw it, but it was at 2 o'clock next morning that the signal of "Land in sight" was given from the Pinta. The first man to see it was a sailor named Rodrigo de Triana. After two days on the island Columbus started—Oct. 14-27—to explore the vicinity, reached the west island on the 15-28, and after various discoveries landed on the soil of Cuba Oct. 28-Nov. 6.

Incidentally it may be added that balance was discovered about Nov. 4-16; that is, says Columbus, "Certain natives came near carrying a fisherman, and with leaves of a plant which they rolled and putting one end of that roll in the mouth fired the other and pulled a great cloud of strong smelling smoke." Election day will be about the eight anniversary on which to celebrate this event. The same week potatoes were discovered, and in the same fields were maize, sweet pepper and cassava.

Dec. 6-18 Columbus discovered the present Haiti; Jan. 4-16, 1493, he sailed for Spain, having a small garrison at La Navidad; Feb. 15-24 he saw the first Old World bird, and after many mishaps reached Palos once more March 15-24, having been absent seven months and twelve days. He left Cadiz on his second voyage Sept. 25-Oct. 5, 1493. His birth date is unknown, but he died in Valladolid, May 20-28, 1506, being about seventy years old.

The Nicknames of Great Men.

It is a privilege of a great man to be called by a "nickname," or, to be more accurate, society loves to appropriate names to its conspicuous members, either in ridicule or praise. There are characters which lend themselves easily to nicknames, and caricaturists in prose or poetry or pencil can quickly seize upon peculiarities of great men and apply to them names which become historic. Mr. Walter Scott was commonly called "The Wizard of the North," on his native powers of description. Knoblach called Dr. Johnson "The Great Cham of Literature." Louis XII. was always "the Grand Economy" for obvious reasons, and Henry VIII. "The Bluff Monarch." Napoleon's soldiers called him the "Little Corporal" in a sense of his personal appearance and his nerve falling heavily.

The actual source of Cromwell's last was known as "Ironsides," "Old Noll" derived his name in jocularity, and few of the children of the generation knew that his real name was Thomas. Jonathan Jackson, Colonel Thomas H. Benton was known as "Old Bullion" for his advocacy of gold and silver currency. General Andrew Jackson was given the name of "Old Hickory" by his soldiers. "Tough as Old Hickory" was considered high praise. Polkard had no other nickname, but it was always affectionately spoken of "Grover." "The Plumed Knight," "Henry," "Weasy" and "Uncle Jerry."

The phrase, "He died leaving a million dollars," tells its own story. What the man died to life for, strength for, etc., is a less conspicuous fact, and perhaps but one out of ten hundred who read the obituary ever stop to think of it. The average man in the land dies "a millionaire dollar" imagine that there is no Almighty God who determines the destiny of man. There are men, however, who are every millionaire by such a way that some of their business is where "moth and dust do not corrupt." They are the men who think of their fellow men and build hospitals, endow colleges and beautify cities. There are many monuments of that kind to the millionaire.

Some writer has said, apropos of the love of a picnic and the food accompaniment: "Who wishes keep the mosquitoes in the house while the band is playing 'Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay?' Of course not; the will of the present excludes all other wills.

The American boy has peacefully entered Denmark and is now very welcome in nearly all European countries.

The making of Mr. Vanderbilt's yacht.

The making of the steam yacht Alva by the steamship H. F. Dimock in Newark shows what a lot of lazy idleness which are forced to occur occasionally where vessels do at anchor in a factory so narrow and tricky navigated as the one in which the Alva lay. The steamship company to which the H. F. Dimock belongs employs the best navigators between this port and Boston. Often they make the trip from the head of Long Island sound to Boston light in a dense fog without seeing a single point of land or light, running on time and by the sound of lighthouse whistles and lighthouse bells.

The eye and ear of a Long Island sound, Nantucket Shoals and Boston pilot are educated to see the slightest object and hear the least noise at the greatest possible distance. Unless an accident which prevented those on the Dimock from hearing the Alva's bell, we incline to the belief that it was not errors in short intervals enough, and if the captain of the Dimock says he did not hear any bell, those interested can depend upon it that he states the fact, as he is employed to avoid collisions under any and all circumstances.—Marine Journal.

A Conscriptive Coughing.

One of the latest inventions for preventing the spread of consumption is a small pocket spittoon made out of cardboard. They are about the size of an ordinary cigar case and of the same general shape. They can readily be carried in the pocket, and being made of thoroughly tested paper they are perfectly clean and healthy to carry about. One can not have them very readily without displacing these around. When full the cardboard spittoon is intended to be burned so that the germ cannot be thrown aside to poison the air.

Consumptives who are compelled to spit often can carry these pocket spittoons around with them at all times. By visiting them can from the inside out perfect one could expectorate in them without being seen. They are also recommended for others than consumptives who have the habit of spitting continually.—Yankee Blade.

How He Got It.

Abraham—Good Heavens! Isy! How you got the complexion? You look as if you got it on dollar bills.

Isy—Dollar bills? Dat's all it any. Isy yourself! I am on de roof a half an hour at least time every day and two hours on Sundays. Der sun does der rest. And I laf as fine as calling gonghetten at der box, and he put him once as a hundred dollars.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

The Glacial Balance.

The glacial balance is sensitive. A very slight continuous preponderance of supply over wasting might, in a few years, betray itself by readily discernible and altogether irresistible effects. Without any additional degree of cold, it is conceivable that a persistently augmented deposit of snow upon the Gerstenhorner and the Schneestock, although otherwise scarcely perceptible, might enable the Rhone glacier to overwhelm Brieg. But this would be an exceedingly small step toward the restoration of a former state of things, when an ice stream close upon 2.0 miles in length, starting from the same source, crossed the frozen or moonlitness Lake of Geneva, and debouched by Culoz upon Lyons.

Without severe cold, as well as heavy precipitation, ice could not possibly have gained so great an accumulation. And this was no local phenomenon; it was simultaneously prevalent over widely separated tracts of the earth's surface.—Edinburgh Review.

Nearly 10,000 veterans have indicated their intention to attend the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic in Washington in September.
