THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The city is visited by a number of delegates to the Sunday School convention that is held here today and tomorrow, Nov. 28 and 29. It is an important gathering and we believe the results of it will be beneficial to the Sunday schools of the Church. These schools have grown up with the Church and have already attained a high degree of perfection, but there is yet much to be done before the best results can be obtained. Progress is infinite. It is sincerely hoped that the visit of the Sunday school delegates may be pleasant and profitable and that the results of the convention may go beyond the hopes of the friends and promoters of the welfare of the children of the Latter-day Saints.

THE TREATY SIGNED.

At 7 o'clock this afternoon the map of the earth figuratively underwent a most important change, it being the immediate precursor of a real one.

The land of Castile, Aragon and other proud principalities has shrunk into the boundaries which are defined by its martial lines, and will no more be known as the ruler and possessor of colonial territory in other parts of the world. A scattering patch of lonely soil or pile of rocks here and there in the east expanse of the ocean may attest as a memory more than anything else be looked upon as Spanish, because not wanted by others, and containing nothing that is worth having; but of populous outposts, commercially valuable and strategically of great consequence, with government machinery and organized society, Spain has nothing left outside of Spain. Her colonial sway has passed into history.

It has taken something over four centuries to complete the Spanish cycle. Toward the beginning of this period the nation was well nigh the ruler of the seas, the terror of the earth. Her dominion expanded as rapidly and as greatly that it might have seemed as though what would be left to other powers after Spanish rapacity was satisfied would be exactly what is now left to her, with no sense of security regarding even that. But there came a turn in the tide of destiny. When what seemed to be real greatness was put to the test of splendour and defending itself, there was a failure. The Spaniards could not hold their own on land or sea. The mystery was a mystery no longer. Their prowess vanished like mists before the morning sun when confronting any other people than Moors and semi-savages who had not of the arts of war and were destitute of any means of coping with weapons which and gunpowder. With the assistance of the Venetians, Spain achieved a victory over Turkey early in the period named, and that was the last one of any consequence resulted in her favor. Later by little the aborigines of South and Central America acquired the use of improved weapons, and in a corresponding ratio the dominion of the foreign oppressor was shaken off. The process of liberation went silently on, and by the opening of this century all the continental possessions of Spain consisted of narrow strips along the coast, which themselves were not long in being absorbed by their surroundings, who was then left with two comparatively small islands on the northern border of the Caribbean sea, the native population of which, all but a scanty remnant, had been annihilated by Spanish oppression, cruelty and crime. Now these are gone, and her once great produce of wealth and the most populous and extensive of her remaining colonies, the Philippines, by the act of today, have completed the story of a nation's fall, by becoming the property of the United States. It is a great and a wonderful story, more to than anything in the annals of nations, and it points a moral so grand, so enlarging, that the races of mankind now and hereafter will never be able to efface it.

It has remained for the younger of the nations to give the object lesson, striking as it is contrary and disposition of people not to care by accomplished extinction or the of contemporary. While the now far-reaching processes of the centuries has been tending to such a consummation, it had still, strange as it may appear, been the means of finally strengthening the hands of the oppressor for the last struggle. Web by generations so complicated he was able to concentrate more physical power upon what remained and hold it with a more tenacious grasp. But for more than a quarter of a century the writing has appeared on the wall warning as plainly as mute characters could that the liberator who was to guard foul across the little strip of water to the north and whose forces were being arrayed for the final contest would come in good time and drive the despot into the sea. He came at last and the despot is gone. Not only from American soil, from Asiatic waters, wherever he had a hold outside of his lands, he has been compelled to yield and he now returns to where he began, humiliated and with his ill-gotten gains all taken away.

It is a great day, a great situation, greater than a merely superficial view makes it out. The reign of tyranny that which subsist the people secure in over on this side of the Atlantic and in northern seas of land and enlightened government has been so forced to the other side of the Pacific. It must go and on until it encircles the whole earth. The darkness which here and there perhaps must give way to the light which is now being diffused by the simple of liberty to the people. Those who have been held in the grip so long and into which yet prepared for the brighter day about to dawn may be made ready, not by premature risings, but by the gradual extension, yet by more working and persistent example, not by "Romans to the right as God gives us to see the light," by education and by the force of that superior method of existence which has not yet been which them.

The work is far from being finished, but a great spirit to go forward much has resulted in the emancipation of peoples today.

PEACE NOW ASSURED.

The announcement that Spain has accepted the American terms of peace as regards the Philippine islands, though late in coming, is satisfactory to the American people. Peace and tranquility are now assured and the work of reconstruction can go on unimpeded in earnest. It will be a long and tedious work to undo what is left after centuries of misrule in the Spanish colonies, but the result will justify the valor and the labor of the American nation.

In Europe, it seems, the greatest importance is attached to the announcement that the Philippine islands are to be opened for the free commerce of the world. It is believed this policy was adopted in order to disarm European hostility, but the result of it may be a better understanding between France and Italy as an offset to Anglo-Saxon free trade arrangements. In France it is being recognized that the trouble with Great Britain originated in a desire to shut out from the French colonies all foreign powers and it is supposed the open-door policy in the Philippines may necessitate a change of front on the part of France.

These are speculations, though. The main fact is that the war is over and that the object for which it was commenced has been gained. The result is of the most remarkable character in the history of wars have been carried by double almost as remarkably successful as the battles preceding it. Spanish rule is ended in this hemisphere and the people so long under the iron heel of oppression are free to work out their own salvation.

C. W. COULDOCK.

In all the long list of temporary appointees in our body who have pleased while present and left pleasant memories after they had gone, no name figures more conspicuously than that of Charles W. Couldock. He was one of the first of the noted historians of the day to visit us, which was some time before railway communication, and his coming was hailed with many manifestations of approval. He was accompanied by his daughter, whose mental remains now repose in our cemetery. Their acting was characterized by a naturalness which might properly be described as transplanted domesticity, and their Salt Lake engagement added something to what was previously a world-wide reputation. It was followed by other visits, and during one of these the daughter took ill and passed away. It was a sad shock to the father, but the stage had become his field of action so irresistibly that he kept on playing and it may be said that he died in the harness.

Mr. Couldock was born at Long Acre, London, on the 20th of April, 1815. He played on the provincial and occasionally the metropolitan stages of Great Britain until 1853, when he came to this country with Charlotte Cushman's company, and here he remained. He died in New York November 26th (Monday). He was, D. T. Couldock, alone survives him.

THE REAL ISSUE.

According to the Providence Bulletin of Nov. 16, Rev. T. C. Iliff, too, has joined the army of crusaders against the Mormon people. The renowned preacher is reported to have entertained an audience in the city of Providence, Rhode Island, with a lecture on "Twenty-five Years of Mormonism." After reciting the glorious work in Utah of the Methodist Episcopal church such the object in view of laying "the foundations for a true evangelical church," "pure morals" and "true American schools," and also "the place of country above everything else in political or national affairs," he proceeded to unbottle his bearers on the alleged atrocities of the Mormons. According to the report, he asserted that polygamy is being practiced and that the Church "has sought to influence ruling the people in this matter as in others, by improper means."

Rev. Iliff is once in a while given to fanciful word pictures. Many years ago he traveled in Germany and spoke on Mormonism. At the time he was reported as saying that the Mormon worship Joseph Smith as the fourth person in the Godhead and Brigham Young as the Holy. He also had other tales of horror with which to edify his hearers.

In the Providence speech on data were given with which to substantiate the charges made by the Methodist Episcopal Presbyterian. Many years there were quoted instead of goods. It is generally supposed that a fabulous effect repeated finally impresses itself on the mind of the public as a truth, and it is a remark trick of some ministers to resort to that procedure in a bad cause. It is to be hoped that the gifted preacher does not seem to believe in smearing that kind of machinery. It is to not blind to the fundamental of the State in which he has spent so many years with perfect freedom to teach and preach and practice, he seems that the prosecution of Christian polygamy and Church politics lack every element of truth.

But Dr. Iliff is far before was from on one point. He will the people the reason why the religious world is up in arms. He said:

"For a I want to tell you that 2,000 Mormon leaders are pouring out over this country and Europe. Perhaps they have even reached your Rhode Island. I want you to warn against these wily leaders, who get into your Sunday schools and homes to mislead your children and young men."

That is the secret of it. It has pleased the Lord to allow greatly the humble efforts of Mormon missionaries, and some short-sighted Christian ministers have become alarmed. They ask the old question: "What do we? for this man doth many miracles; if we let Him alone all men will believe on Him." It is the old scientific: "Did we not command you that ye should not teach in this name? and behold ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine." The real secret of opposition is the faithful testimony to the world that the Gospel of Jesus is true. Dead issues, if seems, must be brought forth from the grave in order to give the world some excuse for rejecting the Gospel.

We take the liberty of recommending to the earnest consideration of Dr. Iliff the wise counsel of Gamaliel, the Pharisee: "Refrain from these men, and let them alone: for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought: but if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it." Methodists, if anyone, should be on the side of religious toleration.

THE SILVER OUTLOOK.

The Eastern papers are showing by their own utterances if not to that of the people of the West that the silver issue, if not laid to rest finally, will be suppressed for at least six years. This is demonstrated, as they show, by the late elections and what must follow as to that time. The next House of Representatives will contain a Republican majority of thirteen and perhaps an anti-silver majority somewhat larger, but opinions could not well be based upon it as it changes every two years and no one can prognosticate how the membership will stand next time. The Senate, only one-third of which changes with each succeeding Congress, furnishes a more reliable exponent for the predication of future results, as with a firmly in the ranks of the gold adventurers it would not in the least matter if the House were unanimously for silver.

After the fourth of next March there will be fifty gold Republican members of the Senate, and it is claimed that six more who have previously acted with the silverites will hereafter vote differently; these, with the gold Democrats—Caffery of Louisiana and Lindsay of Kentucky—make an opposition membership of fifty-eight, a majority over the accredited silver element of twenty-six, a figure exactly equal to the Democratic strength in the next Senate.

It is claimed by the World, one of the most uncompromising of the gold standard advocates, that in the Presidential election of 1900 of the thirty senatorial seats at stake there will be from the Republican list of Rhode-Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Jersey, West Virginia, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Wyoming, South Dakota, Colorado, Montana, Idaho, Oregon—18. In view of the results of the free-silver campaigns of 1896, 1897 and 1898, it asks, is there any free-silverite, even the most hopeful, who can see the remotest possibility of the return of twelve free-silver senators from the above list of states? "Do not all the possibilities of practical politics point to the return of at least fourteen sound-money senators from those states, and probably fifteen?" It is then pointed out that the sound-money Republicans could lose six of the eighteen and, making no gains elsewhere, would still have a majority against free silver.

This is rather a gloomy sort of prospect for those who pin their faith to the proposition that the people generally will carry disaster that what seemed to prosperity we may have without a return to bimetallism must be transitory and superficial. These can hardly be expected to forego their views just yet, on the contrary, if sentiments are correct, they are already lining up for the great battle of the years hence. Besides, it will not be overlooked that through the states above enumerated, all silver be certainly relied on to go as they are not down.

AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE.

Considerable interest centers in the forthcoming message of President next month. It is expected the President will outline the policy of the government regarding the former Spanish colonies, a matter of vital importance to the nation.

There will be a difference of opinion with with regard to Cuba and the Philippines. At present there is a strong sentiment in favor of the establishment of an independent Cuban republic. That would probably lead to ultimate annexation to the United States, just as the consummation of a Hawaiian republic led to the new Union republic would soon have to face Hawaiian and other problems which would be entirely new to our statesmen and generals. And such union would take place without doubt, for the Cuban people would soon learn that as a state of the great American Republic, Cuba would realize her sovereignty and not be subject to annexation.

The Philippine question is perhaps more difficult. The problem is to find a suitable form of colonial government consistent with the powers conferred by the Constitution and at the same time calculated to educate the inhabitants of the islands for self-government. Possibly the President is not yet prepared to enunciate the details of a plan for the government of the archipelago. Then there are the Hawaiian and Porto Rican questions to attract the attention of the country.

It is not expected that Congress during the short session will be called upon to consider all the questions referred to. It is not expected the President will announce the policy of the administration and therefore the message is looked forward with intense interest.
