NOTIFYING THE CANDIDATES.

Cleveland and Stevenson at Madison Square Garden.

NEW YORK, July 20.—Madison square Garden was packed to its utmost capacity with people to witness the ceremony of notification of Messrs. Cleveland and Stevenson of their nomination. The vast assemblage was assembled soon after the National convention had set between fifteen and twenty thousand people assembled. When the speaker's stand and the platform were occupied the time dragging for Cleveland and Stevenson and cheer for Flower and singing campaign songs.

At 8:30 the notification committee arrived, headed by Perry Belmont, who walked arm in arm with Senator Gorman. As the crowd recognized the Vice-Presidential candidate he broke out with cheers, and a moment later he received a Rainbow greeting. Suddenly the yell went up, "Here comes Cleveland" and this was the signal for a demonstration such as Cleveland has not witnessed since 1884.

When silence was finally restored Chairman Wilson of the notification committee stepped to the platform, and introduced the speaker as follows:

WILSON'S SPEECH.

Mr. Wilson said besides bringing the notification from the Democratic party the committee was also charged with the duty of presenting the platform of principles which it had adopted as its utterance to the people of that one principle which is the development of that one great principle, that whatever governments and laws can and do for people, must be done for all of the people, without precedence of section or grades of citizenship. The Democratic platform demands upon the people that the necessities of the government are the beginning and end of the taxation, and against the tendency of the concentration of political power in the hands of the government and the centralization of wealth in favored classes.

Nothing could evince the alleged and spurious to which we have referred so aptly as the Democratic party, and yet we believe that the test that time has not been made its candidate for the Presidency. He declared that it is precisely the party of Jefferson; that its party principle, that whatever government needs and laws can and do for people, must be done for all of the people
