WAKEMAN'S WANDERINGS

MORE OLD CHELSEA PENSIONERS.

Interior Views of British Army Veterans Inside the Museum—Pensioners' Daily Experiences in Ward Rooms, Chapel and Hall—Interesting Traditions and Reminiscences.

(Copyright, 1892, by Edgar L. Wakeman.)

LONDON, ENGLAND, Aug. 1.—In which the Enlisted and Commissioned Pensioners of the British Army Wandered from their quarters and spoke their minds to me, and how I found the Museum of Relics of Chelsea Pensioners, and what I saw and heard and felt and thought for myself, and what I gathered from others, and what I read in the newspapers and books, and what I saw in the Museum of Relics, and what I saw in the museum of relics, and what I saw in the museum of relics, and what I saw in the museum of