TRANSPLANTING TOOLS.

Transit and Better Which Take Time In Handling Small Plants.

A Colorado farmer, writing to Rural New Yorker, gives an illustrated description of two home-made tools which he has found very useful. They are designed to save time in transplanting small plants like celery, and they have proved almost indispensable. He says:

The flats which I use are 12 inches wide inside by 2 feet long, with the cross running across. Then with the tramel shown in the first cut I take up a whole row of plants and space them farther apart to allow flats to set in them into cold frames. With celery this will save entirely all hand transplanting except the final field work.

But in order to use this tool successfully the rows must be perfectly straight, and to secure this I use the marker shown in second cut. This spaces the rows three inches apart in each direction, which is right for celery. When the tool is well up, then so as to have 25 or 30 plants in the row. This makes 300 or more plants to the flat. These may be stored off cool or twice before they become "drawn" and then set into cold frames four inches between the rows to grow on. I prepare the rows to receive the plants by opening them with the tramel, then rake the soil up to the plants and press down firmly.

The tramel is made of an extra heavy piece of galvanized iron 11½ inches long and 2½ inches wide and bent at the top of the shaded lines. The handle is extra heavy galvanized strap iron 1 inch wide and 12 inches long. This is fitted with the side together, bolted on both sides of the first piece and riveted or soldered. All may be done with a hammer, cold chisel and punch, if one have the materials. The edge need not be sharp, but may be finished with a file.

The roller is a round stick 1 inch in diameter and 11 inches long. Bore into each end two shallow cuts at right angles, forming a cross, which will cut inside with that of the other end. Then wind a soft copper wire over a hard wood mount through the saw cuts and fasten it; then screw the other way and fasten it, and it will look as in second cut—end view. Drive a wire nail in the center of each end and mount in the handle, of which the ends A A are of thin iron, with holes for the nails in the ends of the roller. Pass through the nail, which should be sifted and smoothed, and it will pack the soil, leaving the marks just right for the smallest seeds.

In cases where seasonal, early diseases, lifting and grayness of the hair appear, do not neglect them, but apply a proper remedy and time has Hall's Hair Renewer.

The great popularity of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral as a cough-cure is easily explained. It is soothing, healing, agreeable to the taste, does not irritate with digestion, and is the most economical of all similar preparations. It is enough to relieve and to cure.

Weary wives, mothers, and daughters—tired nurses, waiters, and helpers—and women of all stamps, should take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It is the kind you need to give pure blood, firm nerve, vigorous spirits, and refreshing sleep. There is no rival equal to Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Having used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in my family and found it to be a first-class article, I take pleasure in recommending it to my friends. J. V. Fuqua, Wenfort, Cal. For sale by druggists.

Some time ago I was taken sick with a cramp in the stomach, followed by diarrhoea. I took a couple of doses of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy and was immediately relieved. I consider it the best medicine in the market for all such complaints. I have sold the remedy to others and every one who uses it speaks highly of it. J. W. Armstrong, Valley Center, Cal. A Remarkable Cure for Rheumatism.

WASHINGTON, Ga., March 21, 1895.—It was my sad lot to awaken one morning, I found that I had rheumatism in my knee so badly that, as I remained to my wife, it would be impossible for me to attend to business that day. Remembering that I had some of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in my store, I sent for a bottle, and rubbed it off good quite thoroughly with it, according to directions, and which, an hour I was completely relieved. One application was all that was needed. It is the best liniment we have handled, and I will do no a positive seller. H. T. HARRIS. For sale by druggists.

Ruined!

You can spoil even Schilling's Best (money-back) tea by boiling it.

Just as the water begins to boil, take it off the stove and put in the tea; let it stand six or eight minutes—no longer; then pour it.

No matter what tea you use, this is the way to make it.
