GEORGE Q. CANNON.

FOR RENT.

A NEW [illegible] HOUSE, SITUATED [illegible] West Temple Street. [illegible]

The Judgment of Solomon.

Little boys who are foolish enough to steal pears that are unripe will do well to avoid orchards that are under the magisterial jurisdiction of the West London police court. Probably by this time George Webbing and John Sullivan have rued the day when they trespassed on the grounds of Mr. [illegible] and Hyde, a Hammersmith solicitor, for the purpose of robbing the [illegible] [illegible] —London Telegraph.

Rome's Water Supply.

Imperial Rome sets an example that throws New York utterly into the shade. One of the earliest built aqueducts for that city was sixty-three miles long. In the reign of the Emperor Nerva Rome was supplied by nine different aqueducts, with 170,000,000 gallons of pure water daily. Later the number of aqueducts rose to twenty-four and the supply to nearly double the quantity just mentioned. It has been calculated that for an estimated population of 1,000,000 there were 312 gallons per head of pure water daily.

Character in a Chosen Phrase.

You see, my friends, what immense [illegible] —Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Body Painting.

Body painting is the most individual of all the modifications we are to consider. [illegible] —Popular Science Monthly.

Gangrene and Its Results.

The local inflammation from which the exemperor of Brazil has been suffering was not actually gangrenous, but threatened to become so. [illegible] Louis XIV, who also played a good knife and fork until his last illness, was carried off by a gangrenous affection, and so was Henry VIII. [illegible] —London Truth.

Dr. Collins' Bad and Good Luck.

Dr. S. A. Collins, a Connecticut physician, [illegible] —Cor. Chicago Tribune.

Engineer Story Strangely Hurt.

William H. Story, engineer of the fast express [illegible] —Philadelphia Telegraph.

Bullets Went Throu Men at a Time.

Army and navy officers have been [illegible] —Washington Cor. Boston Journal.

A Table with Growing Legs.

I had presented to me on the 3d of May last a small fancy table as a birthday present, painted black, varnished and gilded. [illegible] —Boston Cor. Hartford Witness.

A Lively Buzzard.

Harry Walter and Benjamin Talbot, of Morgantown, caught a large turkey buzzard in a steel trap. [illegible] —Harleysville (Pa.) News.

More Stamps to Collect.

Philatelists should note that at last the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg can boast stamps of its own. [illegible] —London Star.

An amusing story is told of Sir William Thompson, the great physician, [illegible]

A Calf with Eight Feet.

Uncle Peter Lohbeger, colored, who lives in the Fifth district, had a calf born on his place Friday with eight feet—two on each leg. [illegible] —Lynchburg (Tenn.) State Gazette.

A Petrified Horse Found.

There was recently taken from a small creek near Springtown, I. T., a genuine curiosity in the shape of a petrified horse, [illegible]

He Couldn't Recognize French Money.

It requires very elastic credulity to accept in these days of universal commerce [illegible] "Where did you get those notes?" he demanded. "Father gave them to me." "What for?" "To play with." "Very well; I shall take charge of them." [illegible] "Here, take this, you old fool, and if you didn't know before what it was, you will know in the future."
