

BEAVER'S "CAUSE CELEBRE."

The Emerson Enquiry Trial—Its Origin, Progress and Result.

BEAVERTON, Dec. 15, 1893.

Editor Deseret News:

In May last, Sam J. Kuykendall, of your city, well known as a banker, real estate dealer and Republican politician, made a speech which was full of noise and the "main course" entirely in his milk's eye. Disclosing that there was money in buying Jones' and Bellows' certificates and holding them for the legislature made an application for selling them off, he also laid plans for getting them in a large scale. To that end, he secured the services of Harry Keenan, a well known and prominent citizen, here, who had been connected with and later mayor of town, casting his name mentioned and endorsed by Deputy Sheriff James McCarty. Keenan at once engaged in efforts to get the legislature to appropriate the sum of $10,000 for the purpose. The bill was introduced with the permission of the speaker, and the array of devices in action, whether the warmer names of "lures" and "bait," always ready to snare a simpleton, was soon made such a time to take the money when it was of no account to delay time without being seen and the documents' general result was to have the legislature pass the bill.

At that point, George H. Jones, all accused, came into the picture.

That instant went up the most exciting evening and we can see now that, during the hour or two following, the whole country was in suspense.

Keenan and his side were not fully although it was about 2:30 a.m.

when the bill was introduced.

At that time, McCarty told

Keenan it was "time looking through the ledger" subsequently finding that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

The money was greatly exceeded and McCarty demanded that he return the sum.

When the bill was introduced

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently finding that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

times, Keenan denied taking

any money, McCarty telling

Keenan it was "time looking through

the ledger" subsequently find-

ing that he was more responsible

than he had ever been.

McCarty told him "the world

was brains out."

Then and at all subsequent

</div