PROF. STEWART'S LECTURE.

A Large Audience Listens to His Address on Conduct—Right and Wrong.

A large and appreciative audience assembled last evening in the art room of the University to listen to an address by Prof. W. M. Stewart, on the subject, "Conduct—Right and Wrong."

The speaker said in substance: There are two theories of education, the theory of concentration and excentration. The world has largely followed the latter theory. Man's interests have been considered as centrifugal to his fellows. Religious conduct has been considered a distinct form of human conduct, moral conduct another form, intellectual another, and so forth, when in fact there is a phase of all these elements of conduct in each. There can be no arbitrary division. This holds true as well in all subjects of study. The disregard of this unity of truth is responsible for much of the evil in this world. Through it, men have learned to hate their fellow-men, and seek their own interests at the expense of their neighbors. The theory of concentration recognizes this principle of universal relation in education as well as in conduct. Concentration as applied to education would place the child as the center of the educational universe, to be developed as a unit through his environments. The universe of matter acts upon him through physical and chemical forces. The subjects of study of the first eight grades are to be taught in a correlated manner, and the child led to express himself through the forms of gesture, music, modeling, painting, modeling, drawing, speech and writing, as means of development.

The unfolding of mind follows as a unit every phase of mental activity manifested in each specific mental act. At the beginning is consciousness awakening into perception, then memory, imagination and thinking.

The same theory of relation holds true in all conduct. God is the embodiment of all truth. His truth is manifested by law through matter, and law is made known to us in consciousness, through the universe of matter. Self is the individual consciousness, the individual truth, the individual intelligence and the individual personality. God is the universal embodiment of all these. Conduct becomes differentiated as sensuous, intellectual, aesthetic, moral and religious. In each is a common relation; that is, in intellectual conduct, is every other form of conduct. The conformity to law makes right conduct and secures to the self, happiness. Wrong conduct is a violation of law, and its ultimate result is unhappiness.

Sympathy is the law that connects self with truth, and results in the highest realization. Antipathy is the law of the decay or non-realization of self.

Deduced from the discussion of the theory of concentration in conduct are the following truths.

1. There is unity and harmony in all truth.
2. The world is a universe of order.
3. All facts are related in knowledge.
4. Mind acts as a unit.
5. Conduct is a unit, and all facts are related.
6. Moral conduct is differentiated from other conduct because of its importance to the welfare of others and of self.
7. The realization of self by conformity to law, in truth, constitutes right conduct.
8. The non-conformity to law in realization of self in truth is wrong conduct.
9. The knowledge of law forms the basis of conduct; in other words, it furnishes the means of right living.
10. Heredity and environment furnish all the conditions of conduct.
11. Right conduct gets inspiration from all sources of knowledge, and builds upon the rock of sympathy.
12. Wrong conduct is a process of self destruction—a process of decay, and its product is antipathy, or hate.
13. Truth unifies every act, is affected by every other act, good done is never lost; the happiness of one is wrapped up in the happiness of all.

Bad Ice Cannot be Used.

The city council committee on sanitary rules met last night and decided to stand by the board of health in its effort to secure a pure ice supply for the city. This action is a supplementary move to that mentioned in the News a few nights ago, and is specially directed to the Wasatch and White Lake ice companies whose sources of supply are said to be unsanitary and unwholesome. The council will probably consider the matter Tuesday night next.

Annual Excursion North.

The annual Union Pacific excursion to Brigham City, Logan, Preston, Oxford, Pocatello, Idaho Falls, Market Lake, Beaver canyon, Soda Springs, Montpelier, Shoshone and other points will leave Salt Lake on August 15. To the nearer towns tickets will be good for fifteen days and to those remotely located thirty days. A rate considerably less than half fare for the round trip is announced.

FROM FRIENDLY ISLANDS.

Elder Kinghorn and Others Return from Mission.

Elder James Kinghorn of Lewiseville, Idaho, called at the News today, having returned yesterday from a mission to the Friendly Islands. He left home November 3, 1891, and was assigned to labor on the island of Tongatabu, where he engaged in the duty of his calling for a year and half. He was then transferred to the island of Haapai, where he remained until released. Elder Alva A. Butler, who resides in the same town with Elder Kinghorn, and went and returned with him, was engaged on Tongatabu the whole time of his mission.

Elder Kinghorn states that the natives of the Friendly Islands do not take much interest in religious matters, and their morality is not of a high order. There are, however, many good people among them. Quite a number have been converted to the truth, but do not embrace it because they say that to abrogate their national religion would be regarded as an act of disloyalty to the king. The national church accepts generally the doctrines of Wesleyan Methodism. As a rule the natives are not hospitably inclined, though the Elders met with many generous friends.

Elder Kinghorn's health was quite poor during the first two years of his mission, though not sufficient to incapacitate him for his labors. The return trip was made to Apia, Samoa, on an island sailing steamer, and from there on the Mariposa, which had on board some missionaries returning from New Zealand and some Mormon saints. The latter were Hinto Whanga, a Maori chief of influence who received the Gospel, and his wife and sister-in-law and five children. The party was detained ten days in San Francisco by the strike.

Notaries Public.

Commissions as notaries public have been issued by Acting Governor Roberts to H. A. Lemmon, D. J. Frew and George D. Pyne, all of this city.

In the European Mission.

(Millennial Star, July 7.)

ARRIVALS.—Elder Nels Forsberg arrived from Salt Lake City, Utah, June 27, 1894, per Anchor steamer Anchoria, via Glasgow. He left the same day for Copenhagen, having been assigned to the Scandinavian mission.

RELEASE.—Owing to business complications at home, Elder E. M. Pugmire has been honorably released and left Southampton, on the American line steamer Chester, Monday, June 18, 1894.

Land Office.

The filings in the local land office under date of July 20 were as follows:

John E. Davis, of Annabella, Davis county, desert land entry of the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of section 20, township 24 south, range 3 west.

Martin Johnson, of Ferron, Emery county, homestead entry of the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter and the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 27, and the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of section 26, township 20 south, range 7 east.

James M. Allred, of Sanpete county, coal declaratory statement for coal entry of the east half of the northeast quarter and the east half of the southeast quarter of section 8, township 13 south, range 8 east.

Political Pointers.

The Woodruff Democratic Society, of the Third precinct, will meet in the old Sixteenth Ward school house tomorrow (Saturday) evening at 8 o'clock, on special call of Mr. D. T. Lloyd, president of the association.

The executive committee of the Grandview Democratic society will meet at the office of P. W. Madsen this evening to act on the resignation of C. M. Nielson, president of the organization.

THE "DEAD" LANGUAGES.

They Formed an Interesting Topic for Prof. Cummings's Afternoon Talk.

Prof. Cummings gave a very interesting talk before the summer school today upon the subject, "The so-called Dead Languages." The speaker said in substance:

What, in brief, is the object of an education? For what should you and I strive as we, from day to day, pursue our course on this sphere? Our chief aim should be to make the most possible of ourselves, to reach the highest development of which we are capable; and this, I take it, consists of a ready mind, a sympathetic understanding of our fellow men, and a love for the divine.

How these results can best be attained deserves our most careful consideration. In this western country we often hear men speak in derision of the study of Latin and Greek as something of no real interest—something fit for monks and hermits ("grinds" we call them in these modern days), something without practical value. Greek is not dead. It is as much alive today in Athens as it ever was. There is now published in New York a newspaper in the modern Grecian language, the perusal of which presents very few difficulties to the classical Greek student. Modern Italian is only a modified form of classic Latin, the result of the change and growth of years; and Latin need not be a dead language in the class room.

No subject is dead in the hands of a live teacher; and any subject may lose its life in the hands of a dead leader.

The study of these languages not only enables us to understand the principles underlying the grammar of our own language, gives us an enlarged vocabulary, and helps us to understand the different shades of meaning of our derivation and compound words, but also furnishes an excellent opportunity for training in quick perception and prompt and careful judgment. It further introduces us to the most civilized, the most liberty-loving and the most powerful nations of the past. We see the foundations of what we have today in philosophy, in law, in morals, and in literature.

We learn to appreciate them, to sympathize with them, and live honestly among them, as we study and understand; and what better opportunity can be found than in the perusal of Plato, of Xenophon and of Cicero. If we would grow and advance, we must avoid the mistakes of the past; and this past is inscribed on the pages of literature and history. Greece and Rome can today teach us more lessons that it is well worth our time to learn. The greatest liberty compatible with the rights of man was what the noblest Greeks and Romans were seeking; and that is what we now and women of America desire. Let us study Greece and Rome, see wherein they failed, and steer clear of the shoals on which they were stranded.

Personal.

Prof. Appelt left for Logan today, having been called there to meet with the board of examiners, of which he is a member. Mr. Appelt, who has been in the city during the week, did accompany him.

The "Shirt American."

FATAL ACCIDENT.

Awful Death of a Little Child from Concentrated Lye.

Eugene Walters, the 3-year-old son of J. L. and Mary I. Walters, died at the family residence in East Waterloo last night after hours of the most excruciating agony, caused by a half box of concentrated lye falling into the eyes and mouth of the little one.

It appears that the child went in the pantry while at play alone and with a stool succeeded handily knocking the box containing the lye from a shelf. Unfortunately the little fellow was looking up at the time and caught the burning liquid squarely in the eyes and mouth.

The poor mother was almost crazed with grief when she discovered what had occurred. Dr. Fluckiger was hastily summoned and did all in his power to save the little boy but in vain. Mr. Walters is away from home somewhere in the mining regions of the north, and his wife is compelled to bear her sorrow without comfort of consolation from him, at least for the present.

Lower Than Ever.

Potatoes have never been known heretofore to be so low at this season of the year as they are now. In the retail stores they are listed at 25 cents a bushel, while stores have purchased them at 15 cents, and in some cases as low as two bushels for 25 cents.

OGDEN.

OGDEN, UTAH, JULY 20, 1894.

MURDEROUS ASSAULT.

Two Bullies Attack and Shoot a Soldier at Ogden.

An assault which shows the feeling of the strikers was that with intent to kill a soldier, John Klinder, made by two strikers last night. The circumstances are as follows: About 10 o'clock last night one of the soldiers stepped about 200 yards away from camp to an outhouse and when he was returning he was approached by two men and called behind the outhouse. When there he was asked if he would shoot a striker, to which he replied he would, should the order be given. He was then asked if he would shoot to kill, to which he said "yes." At this the two men he tempted to beat him and told him to keep still or they would shoot his head off, at the same time drawing a six-shooter and aiming straight at his head. He threw up his arm to protect himself, he being unarmed, and was shot through the wrist. The men ran and are still at large. The wound is very painful, but not serious. The wounded member was dressed by the R. R. doctor and the soldier went to Salt Lake this morning.

Railroad Traffic Resuming.

Business and traffic on all railroad lines running in and out of Ogden are rapidly assuming their old form and it is expected that in a few days freight as well as passenger trains will be coming from all points on the system. The section on the R. G. W., the Union Pacific and even the S. P. is gradually increasing. Seven trains have arrived from the West during the past sixty hours. Two trains arrived yesterday; the one coming in from the east brought the school teachers who have been in California on a pleasure out and who were detained some time by the strike. All report a good time and don't seem to mind the few inconveniences which they were compelled to endure on account of it.

The Strikers' Attitude.

The strikers' supply of boldness appears exhausted and those now being arrested stand but little show of obtaining bondsmen. They seem to think they have not played the game and that things will come their way yet. The most of them express their willingness to resume their old situations if the companies could see it that way.

Indictments by Grand Jury.

The grand jury has found indictments against the following named persons:

John L. Farrell, grand larceny; A. Rogers, charged with having committed rape upon a 13-year-old girl; J. Curtis, for housebreaking. These three parties will have an opportunity of pulling in their pleas this afternoon, while the following will plead on Monday next: Thomas Speckman and A. Dixon, each charged with unlawful cohabitation.

Notes.

Looper, the man wanted at Reno, who was arrested here three weeks ago and who broke jail last Monday night, is still at large.

The transfer of real estate is falling off; but one transfer of $500 was made yesterday.

The earthquake of last Wednesday was felt more forcibly at the Reform school than at any other place in the city. The school was promptly confined to the bench.

A Hanging in Virginia.

NEWARK, N. J., July 20.—By the unknown of a bullet in Benjamin Aldrich's hat factory this afternoon the story said six Italian immigrant hoboes were enveloped in flames. It is believed several lives were lost.

Strikers Give In.

ST. LOUIS, July 19.—East St. Louis strikers' executive board today declared the A. R. U. strike off by two-thirds vote.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., July 19.—The potters today by almost unanimous vote declared the six months' strike off. The men accept 15 per cent reduction.

Was Evidently Mistaken.

He was a pale-appearing man with a small leather case in his hand, and when he rang the bell the lady of the house, who was "readin' up the parlor, did not hear it go to the door, but around her head she all.

"I am selling a small article, ma'am," he began, as soon as the period of astonishment had passed.

"I guess not," she interrupted.

"I beg your pardon," he said in a stand of a connoisseur.

"I said I guess not."

"Guessed not what?"

"Guessed you were not selling a small article here."

"But I assure you, madam, I am and I have been selling them all over for a week past."

"I don't doubt that, sir, but I say you are selling no one here, for you are not, sir, and I know what I am, and I wouldn't want to be left in spite anything." And she firmly but gently closed the door in his face.

"I wonder if there is another one of these swindlers about from Boston," he soliloquized as he went down the steps.—Boston Telegraph.
