MIND READING.

Professor Tyndall's Experiments Abruptly Interrupted.

There was a very small but interested audience at Turner hall last Saturday evening to witness the performance of Professor Tyndall. A committee of six, among whom was a representative of the News, were seated on a platform. The professor stated that he claimed no supernatural power whatever. He had almost accidentally discovered that he possessed the gift of, to some extent, receive an impression of what passes in the minds of other people, and he had, since the discovery, cultivated the faculty and obtained some startling results. He now proposed to show a few experiments.

He was then blindfolded by two members of the committee. A third member went down among the audience and lightly touched a child on the head. The blindfolded mind reader, who could not see this, seized the hand of the gentleman who had touched the child and led him with but little hesitation to the place and, laying his hand on the child's head, said, "This is the person." In a similar way he found a hidden pin and other objects and finally a small spot on the wall, touched by one of the audience.

The mental strain seemed to be too much for the professor, as soon as he had found the spot he staggered and fell to the floor in what seemed to be a cataleptic fit. The audience instantly surrounded him, applying such restoratives as could be found. He was carried outside and a doctor summoned, but it took an hour before he regained consciousness.

He always carries about his person a letter containing the following:

To the Doctors in Attendance:

If I should at any time after an experiment in thought reading be attacked with catalepsy and life should appear extinct, and if, after consultation, your united opinion should be that it is so, do not hold an autopsy until evidences of decomposition are found. I am subject to trance and have remained in that condition for more than five days consecutively.

If it is finally settled by evidences of decay that I am dead, let my brain be thoroughly examined to show whether there is anything peculiar or abnormal about it to account for the unexplained power of mind reading which I possess.

Yours truly,
ALEXANDER J. MCIVOR TYNDALL.

WHAT THEY WILL GIVE.

Additional Premiums to be Distributed at the Territorial Fair.

The appointment of Dr. John R. Park as a director of the Deseret Agriculture and Manufacturing society is to fill the vacancy caused by the failure of E. B. Wicks to qualify. This makes a complete directory, and the fair work has begun in real earnest. The following offers of special premiums have been received:

Browning & Barker of Ogden will give $10 toward paying expenses of poultry judges. W. W. DRIGGS.

H. M. Wells

[illegible]

[illegible] J. E. WALLACE.

The undersigned will give a special premium of two years' subscription to the [illegible] and two years' subscription to the [illegible] for the [illegible] of 1892.

KEITH, BRIGHAM & PEARCE CO.

The undersigned will give a special premium of $10 in merchandise, to be selected by person entitled to same, for the best display of hand painted china, done in Salt Lake, to be competed for at the Territorial fair of 1892.

LITTLE, BROWN & CO.

I will give a special premium of $5 for the best drawing from nature by a boy or girl under fifteen years of age, residents of Utah. For the best oil painting by a young lady or gentleman under twenty years of age, residents of Utah, $10.

The above prizes will be given for original efforts only. No copies accepted for competition. C. R. SAVAGE.

The secretary has assurance that Z. C. M. I. will add $100 to the premium list, and many citizens are getting their ideas together, and thinking upon what industrial enterprises to encourage with premiums.

Citizens, now is the time to show your interest in home industry!

UNION PACIFIC COAL AGENTS.

A Large Party of Them Arrived in This City Yesterday.

Three special cars attached to the regular Union Pacific passenger train arrived in this city at noon yesterday. They were occupied by agents of the Union Pacific coal department. The party went direct to the Templeton where they had lunch. The afternoon and evening were spent at Garfield.

Today they visited the Tabernacle, Temple and points of interest in and about this city. They leave for their homes at 8 o'clock tonight. The Citizens' Coal and Coke company which acts as distributing agent for the Union Pacific Company at Denver is well represented in the party.

The agents of the Union Pacific company are all from Nebraska. Their names are:

L. P. Sanderland, H. T. Lowest, Lee Hedlund, Omaha; A. G. Graff, Ben. Hur; J. C. Hedge, Fairfield; J. Y. Young, Edar; George Heath and William Cutler, Hastings; F. M. Osterhout, David City; C. Hershelmer, Rising City; O. M. Smith, Shelby; S. H. Sumbles, Stromsburg; E. A. Warner and H. C. Stephenson, York; H. H. Mohr, Pierce; J. C. McClary and Charles Hudal, Norfolk; Charles W. Brunch, P. A. Clark, Madison; J. M. Elmers, Humphrey; J. A. Kelch, Platte Center; Sam Crouch, St. Edwards; W. H. Parks, Fullerton; C. A. Speer, Columbus; J. H. Pope, Silver Creek; M. V. Seal, Central City; Jean Friman, Chapman; A. Egge, Grand Island; J. C. Porter, Wood River; G. H. Bailey, Shelton; Thomas Kirk, Gibbon; G. H. Downing and J. B. Ayers, Kearney; A. B. Oathouse, Loup City; J. C. Fredrick, St. Paul; F. J. Ager, Ord; Pattie Clark and W. W. Birge, North Platte; C. E. Gunnell, Paxton; F. Kimball, Big Springs; George Jeunes, Sidney; Alex Stewart, Kearney, and W. A. Lawrence of Laramie, Wyo.

Those in the Citizens' Coal and Coke company are as follows: E. B. Taggart, J. E. King, A. T. Wilson, James Lee and A. M. Rosch, Denver, Colorado; O. F. Roslin, Cheyenne, Wyoming; A. H. Comstock, Idaho Springs. Then comes the Kansas delegation: L. A. Hurd, Abilene; J. M. Yost, Hayes City; Edward Link and E. E. Ferguson, Salina; S. M. Sanford and E. S. Ashodial, Minneapolis; J. B. Winkelsen, Ellis; Wm. Schlakter, Wakee; John Blanchard, Bennington; S. Jerrett, Lindsborg; S. N. Brown, Clyde; B. Walk, Ellsworth.

Home Again.

Elder Moroni England of Tooele arrived in this city over the Union Pacific yesterday noon on his return home from a mission to Great Britain, for which part of the world he left on September 1st, 1890. Elder England labored as a traveling Elder in the Norwich Conference during his entire mission. While there is more or less indifference manifested among the people as to religious matters, he reports that he met with fair success and the best of treatment. He allayed much prejudice and made many warm friends. He enjoyed good health and returns in excellent spirits. He was met in this city by his wife, who will accompany him home tomorrow.

Breadth of the Higher Criticism.

A wealthy timber merchant announced that he was relieved to find that he need not believe literally the various passages in the Bible which he had often proved to be impossible. Being pressed to name one of these passages he mentioned the ark. It was, he understood, 450 feet long, 75 feet broad and 45 feet high, and was filled with live animals. He was convinced, therefore, that the Israelites could not have carried it about with them for forty years.—Pall Mall Gazette.

IN A FREE READING ROOM.

People Who Patronize the One Built by the Late Peter Cooper.

Unique, always interesting, during the months it is open, are the people to be met in the huge reading room of Cooper Institute. Three distinctive classes, as regular in their movements as the clock, find intellectual recreation in scanning the periodicals, countless weeklies, magazines and the thousand volumes to be had for the asking. Early in the morning comes a curious coterie, fresh from lodging houses or men out of employment. Drifting in the warmth of the great room, and the heat often overcomes the [illegible], for some and the delinquent not often fall asleep, to be aroused by the vigilant officer with whom they are liable to have a personal acquaintance.

To weed out all objectionable people cards were issued some years ago, requiring each visitor to state his occupation and give references. Of 3,000 cards collected in one day 100 gave down town printing offices as references. This is the class that continues to drop in about noon and rarely departs before nightfall. Forced to work at night, they sleep until noon, when they seek Coopers. To newspaper and illustrated periodicals they are devoted. Inveterate readers, not infrequently they are storehouses of general information. After supper their places are filled by mechanics, clerks and business men. Every table, every file is crowded. Day and night men and boys stand, often two rows deep, against the wall, devouring this miscellaneous food provided by one mindful in his wealthy days of the deprivations of his youth, when he, too, hungered for this communication of ideas now to be had by the poorest without the expenditure of a cent.

Characters are not wanting in this motley throng, always representative of the very people the institution was founded to benefit. Nearly all the magazines are worn to tatters before the month expires. Duplicates of 100 dailies are always on file, and the want advertisements are carefully scanned. The call for French periodicals is constantly increasing. A French and a Spanish daily have recently been added and there are three Italian journals. There is a marked characteristic difference in the appearance of the French and German papers. The readers of the former handle their periodicals with the greatest care. There is scarcely a finger mark on the French magazines. On the contrary, the German are battered beyond recognition, but probably there are many more German readers. There are seventeen German foreign periodicals provided. Rarely is a paper willfully destroyed or a book lost.

Women consult the fashion papers and magazines devoted to housekeeping. Evidently they are cooks, tailors, dressmakers or household decorators. The awkward position of the women's reading room—at the farther end of the room—makes it anything but a desirable retreat for ladies. Thirty is the average attendance in the room. Curious foundlings are wont to gather there. Frequently two [illegible] are found dyly [illegible].
