

DEMONSTRATION BY DEMOCRATS

It is to be Made Next Week When Their State Convention Is Held.

WHO THE OFFICERS WILL BE.

Moyle for Temporary Chairman, King
For Permanent, and Powers
For Congress Sure.

The political camps today are taking breath for the big rush that is to come next week, when the Democrats swing in the center of the stage with their state convention. They are quietly planning for a big demonstration and figuring out a list of speakers who will define their policies most sharply and go after their Republican foe with the most vigor.

Thursday evening next the executive committee will meet to consider the men who are to control the convention. It looks now as if James H. Moyle would be temporary chairman, Judge William H. King permanent chairman, and that Judge O. W. Powers would get the congressional nomination by acclamation. In accepting it he will have a similar chance to that of the last campaign to make a speech, and with Martineau's speech in calling the convention to order, this will make a quartet of orators in the Democratic cause. The prospects are that its case will not lack for full enunciation.

MARTINEAU MOVES.

Chairman Martineau today moved his headquarters from the Herald building over to the Atlas block where he has rooms adjoining those of Chairman Cunningham.

IN LABOR CIRCLES.

In American party circles the principal topic of conversation is the apparent failure of the party to bring the labor vote over to their banner. The strength of the nominations granted that element. The laboring men have a "hunch" that alleged Embezzler Lavery is now able to return the structural iron worker's union the money they want—amounting to about $300,000. They would hate to think his price is less than that, but they also have a "hunch" that they don't like a respectable position in his vest pocket, and are in favor of putting up a labor ticket themselves at next Sunday's mass meeting.

Republican headquarters are still considering the matter of an executive committee for Chairman Salisbury. An adjourned conference was called to order this afternoon, but no results developed by press time.

FRISCO INSURANCE LOSSES.

L. B. Rogers Returns From Coast and Tells of Conditions.

L. B. Rogers, the well known insurance man, returned this morning from San Francisco, where he has been for the last five months settling up fire losses. He says the losses from earthquake alone amounted only to three per cent; it was the fire that wiped out the town. Forty of the insurance companies paid up their losses, while 10, mostly the German, refused to pay, and not a few of the English companies are yet uncertain as to what to do. Mr. Rogers expects $175,000,000 will be collected altogether, and says there is more money now in the city than there has been in any other city of the same size in the country. In fact, unfavorable economic conditions have so retarded reconstruction that the banks have large amounts of money for which immediate use can not be found. If material could be secured more rapidly, the rebuilding of the city would progress much more rapidly than at present. But as soon as winter cuts off building in the east, there will be a money movement toward San Francisco, and then there will be another story to tell. The railroads are doing all they can to help build up the town, and Mr. Rogers believes that in 10 years San Francisco will be a city whose size and importance will exceed present rosy anticipations.

GRIEF IS DOUBLED.

As Son Dies, Husband Is Seized With Paralysis.

(Special to the "News").
Ogden, Sept. 25.—While Mrs. J. S. Noble, a well known woman of Ogden is speeding toward Los Angeles to be at the bedside of her husband, who was seized with an attack of paralysis this morning, her son, Lincoln G. Wenner lies dead in this city, a victim of tuberculosis. The young man passed away this morning and hardly had his eyes closed in death when a message came to Mrs. Noble from northern California conveying the sad information that her husband has just been seized with a severe attack of paralysis. Mrs. Noble at once made arrangements for the care of her son's body, and then boarded a train for California.

Young Wenner was only 15 years of age and was well thought of by his associates. He had been afflicted with the disease which caused his death for some time. Mrs. Noble is well known here, especially in railroad circles. He was former superintendent of the Salt Lake division of the Southern Pacific.

SECOND DIVORCE SUIT.

Nora Greenhagh Again Appeals to Courts for Relief.

For the second time Nora Greenhagh has resorted to the divorce court for a legal separation from her husband, Henry Greenhagh. She and defendant were first married 15 years ago, but were divorced three years later in Denver. They remarried in Denver in 1902 and removed to this state. Greenhagh went to Birmingham and conducted a boardinghouse and about six months ago his wife left him and took their young daughter to Montana and placed her in the sisters school. Greenhagh found out where the child was and went to Montana and brought her back here where she was placed in the infants home. The question of the custody of the child will be decided upon in the juvenile court this afternoon.

In her complaint for divorce Mrs. Greenhagh charges her husband with cruelty and failure to support. She asks for $100 as attorney's fees, $50 per month alimony and the custody of the child. In the first proceedings in the juvenile court a few days ago the child stated that her father treated her cruelly and that she preferred to live with her mother.

CROPS DAMAGED BY STORMS.

Wheat and Oats Reported in Bad Condition in Eastern Utah.

Cashier Romney of Z. C. M. I. has returned from a pleasant two week's vacation in eastern Utah. He left considerable snow on the eastern side of the Wasatch range, where the season was so short that one farmer said he had hardly had time to get his feet warmed from last winter. The wheat and oats are in bad shape, owing to the storms, the grain being badly lodged and tangled up so that it is hard to cut even with a grain mower. However, the fruit crop is enormous, and the trees are all loaded, so that the question is what to do with it. The growers only want to provide for fruit evaporators all of the surplus fruit for which a ready market cannot be found could be taken care of, and the hope and expectation is that the introduction of these useful means of disposing of fruit will become more general in this region.

ADULTERATED DRUGS.

Local Health Officers Are Interested in Controversy Now On.

Local health officers and the drug trade are interested in the controversy in progress in New York and Boston over the adulteration of drugs by manufacturers and wholesalers, which has been practiced to such an extent that physicians there are never certain now whether their prescriptions will do the work expected of them. This New York case, the commissioner, Dr. Darlington, recently sent out a circular letter to the wholesale trade calling attention to the fact that adulterated drugs are being sold in large quantities, and a committee from the wholesale druggists waited on the health commissioner for consultation. One of the committee, Dr. Darlington, thought to defy Dr. Darlington, whereupon the latter threatened to put the man under arrest on charges. The druggist militant then came down off his high horse. The trouble was laid to a grass-roots competition among the manufacturers and wholesale houses. The latter have promised to cooperate with the health commissioner in bettering the situation.

A prominent Salt Lake wholesaler says that purchasers in this market always secure the purest goods at the highest prices, because it does not pay to handle adulterated drugs. However, a member of the state board of health says there is a great deal of "substituting" going on among retail druggists, and is substituting for eastern, standard made ingredients called for in prescriptions, other ingredients of their own compounding, thus making 100 per cent profit.

COAL TOO HIGH IN SALT LAKE

The amount of coal per man per diem mined averaged, he said, three tons.

COAL PRICE TOO HIGH.

Coming down to the retail price of coal in answer to a direct question witness said the price of coal was too high. He raised a laugh by asserting that he would not have said that a few years ago when he was in the business. Witness asserted that a profit of 50 cents a ton was a good one.

Take Castle Gate coal, for instance, said Commissioner Proby, "that coal sells at $12.50 a ton. It is the nearest mine to Salt Lake on your estimate of $1 a ton cost, do you think it is too high?"

Witness smiled, then said, "Castle Gate was an old mine and the cost of production was heavier, but he thought the coal sold at $12.50 a ton. It was a cost of $1 a ton for mining throughout its mine."

Taken all in all with the freights witness was of the opinion that the price of coal was altogether too high in Salt Lake.

WHAT DEALERS MAKE

To the cost of coal to the retail consumer witness said the dealers paid $3.75 for their coal and sold it at $5.25. After going into details he asserted that the coal could be handled on a margin of $1.50.

Witness asserted that while the Union Pacific only supplied 25 per cent of the coal in this section it controlled the situation. The Union Pacific was here first, he said, the Utah fuel company came in later and was the second, he said, to speak, which followed the lead of the pioneer of prices. "It is not a business proposition," he said, "for the Utah fuel company to cut the price when it can get the same price as the Union Pacific."

The shortage on coal, witness said, was occasioned not so much for the purpose of keeping up the price, but because there was not enough equipment on the railroads to handle the situation at times and then the mines were not always worked to their capacity.

Some pointed questions regarding a 25 per cent secret rate said to be in operation between the Utah fuel company and the Rio Grande Western were asked witness, but beyond the answer that he presumed such was the case there was nothing definite forthcoming.

QUEALY'S ADMISSIONS.

P. J. Quealy, vice president and manager of the Kemmerer Coal Co. of Kemmerer, Wyo., was called and sworn. After the preliminary questions he said that the company was made up of the two Kemmerer brothers of Pennsylvania and himself. The property was not bonded. Witness testified that he came west in 1878 when he leased the old Rock Springs Coal company proposition and worked there until December, 1894, when he sold out to Omaha and Chicago parties. These properties are now operated by the Central Coal and Coke company. Shortly afterwards he acquired the Kemmerer properties which today produce 1,500 tons of coal a day. The Kemmerer Coal Co. he said, owned the machinery and leased the land from Utah Improvement Co., which consisted of M. S. Kemmerer and P. J. Quealy, who were the sole stockholders.

Witness stated he paid tariff on all mine supplies and never had a secret understanding.

Counsel Thomas then asked witness if he had brought his stock certificate book and copies of his pay rolls with him as requested by letter.

Mr. Quealy asserted that he had wired to Pennsylvania for the former and it was on the way here. The pay roll he offered to produce after the noon recess.

This brought Parley L. Williams to his feet to ask the reason for this request.

In the cross fire that followed between the two attorneys, it developed that the commission expected to show that the Kemmerer people had some railroad employees on their pay roll.

"Mr. Quealy has already answered that," interjected Mr. Williams.

It developed later in the testimony that witness knew of a case where a man named M. S. Kemmerer, county clerk, had been told by the Union Pacific people that it was undesirable for them to open up a mine as the railroad company could not furnish the cars. There were enough mines in operation on the system, he was told.

COULD FURNISH MORE.

Mr. Quealy said it cost him $1.15 a ton to deliver coal on the cars. The miners earned, he said, from 40 to 60 cents a ton.

Witness asserted he could increase his output "if there were a need of it." He then said "We don't accept orders that we don't anticipate to fill."

Witness admitted that at this time of the year his company turned down from one-third to one-half of the orders. In defense he asserted he filled these orders they would have to close down the mines in the spring for some months each year.

The total output for both mines each year he said was 250,000 tons. The railroads in some instances, collected the bills of the Kemmerer Coal company, he said. He denied that it was for the purpose of keeping track of the sales.

SNEDDON ON DEFENSIVE.

Thomas Sneddon, the "big boss of Diamondville," was the next witness called and sworn. The big Scotchman who risked his life repeatedly and worked unceasingly during the rescue work following the Diamondville disaster, some years ago, when he was ill at ease. He crashed into the court and scowled around the court room. In broad Scotch he answered all questions like a rapid fire maxim gun. He did not know a thing. He was not aware of the name of the president of the Diamondville Coal & Coke company. All he knew was that he was the superintendent of the mine in charge of operation. He really did not even know who furnished the money to pay the wages in the mines, all he was concerned in was the getting out of the coal.

Witness testified that 75 per cent of the output of the two mines operated at Diamondville went to the Amalgamated Copper company smelters at Anaconda. About 800 tons additional each week went to the Oregon Short Line. The mines he said were not filling one-third of the orders for commercial coal. He said he would like to do so but owing to the shortage of cars and the difficulty in securing labor it was impossible.

WYOMING OIL TROUBLES.

George T. Odell of this city was then sworn, but it early became apparent that aside from being a stockholder in the Diamondville Coal & Coke company, a Wyoming corporation, owning and operating some wells of high grade oil at Spring Valley, near Evanston, he knew very little that was of any immediate service to the commission. Mr. Odell stepped down to make way for Atty. N. V. Taylor of this city, who is general manager of the company. Mr. Taylor testified that last year he shipped a consignment of six carloads of oil to Florence, Colo., over the Union Pacific at a special published rate that amounted to about $2 cents on the barrel.

The rate in conjunction with some alleged trickery on the part of the Standard Oil people who refined the oil made the company decide to ship no more crude oil, but erect its own refinery.

Several witnesses were called for, including Auditor McNair of the Oregon Short Line, who was reported to be out of the city in western Idaho, checking up some station agents. None of them appeared so the commission adjourned until 2 p. m.

Lack Of Coal—Local coal dealers report no coal received from Wyoming for the last 60 days, except one company whose properties are located at Rock Springs, the occasion being the increased competition by the railroads and important centers in the northwest. However, the receipt of coal from the Utah Fuel properties is reported as very fair.

Justice Durand Again.

Another Application For Writ of Prohibition Against Murray Man.

THE WAY OUT.

Change of Food Brought Success and Happiness.

An ambitious but delicate girl, after failing to succeed on school on account of nervousness and hysteria, found in Grape-Nuts the only thing that seemed to build her up and furnish her the peace of mind.

"From infancy," she says, "I have not been strong. Being ambitious to learn at the first dish I experienced a peculiar satisfied feeling that I never gained from any ordinary food. I slept and rested better that night and in a few days began to grow stronger."

She had a new feeling of peace and restfulness in a few weeks, to my great joy, the hysterical and nervousness left me and life became bright and hopeful. I resumed my studies and later taught ten months with ease of course using Grape-Nuts every day. It is now four years since I began to use Grape-Nuts and the mistress of a happy home and the old weakness has never returned." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason." Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pink.

vor of C. H. Heritage and that he issued an illegal attachment against him before he was served with summons in the case. In his affidavit Zuckewert sets out that Durand has no jurisdiction either of the subject matter of the action or the parties to it for the reason that he was not not never had been a resident of Murray precinct and the contract sued upon did not arise in that precinct.

He made his usual motion to dismiss the action on the ground that Durand had no jurisdiction, but the justice, as usual, overruled the motion and entered judgment against Zuckewert. The latter claims that he was not served with summons until Aug. 15 and that the judgment was entered against him on Aug. 23, notwithstanding that only five of the ten days allowed him by statute to answer had elapsed. The attachment was issued in the case on July 3, over a month before he was served with summons.

Petitioner asks that Durand be prohibited from taking any further action in the case and that he be compelled to dismiss it.

NEW YORK DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 25.—When State Chairman Cord Meyer rapped for order and the grand marshal, William W. Foster, attempted to read the program of the convention, the hall was so full of delegates that the program was not read.

A public reception at the home of Congressman Brooks at 4 o'clock this afternoon in honor of Vice President and Mrs. Fairbanks was the chief social event of the day.

The throng that has been present at Camp Perry since the arrival of the army detachments here on Friday and Saturday was undiminished today. The military features of today's program consisted of a dress parade by the Twenty-ninth infantry on the Cascade avenue plaza, followed by a concert by the Twenty-ninth infantry band. The polo and golf tournament were continued today, and Indian dances at the Broadmoor and concerts by the military band this evening will complete today's program.

When Congressman Brooks, Thomas P. Walsh, President William F. Slocum of Colorado, and other delegates to the state convention were escorted to the Walsh automobile at the Antlers hotel, the vice president, baring his head and rubbing his forehead with his handkerchief, said:

"No more talk to walk."

The midland band which had given a concert in front of the hotel, marched up the middle of the street, playing a military air while the vice president and his escort walked along the sidewalk for four blocks to the park, the head of the presidential procession towering above those of the immediate crowd that followed along behind.

DIST. ATTY. JEROME OUT OF GUBERNATORIAL RACE.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Dist. Atty. Jerome's candidacy for governor was practically withdrawn today at an adjourned meeting of the so-called Albany conference of anti-Hearst Democrats. At the meeting, which was attended by representatives from about 25 counties, it was decided that the delegates to the state convention should concentrate on either Judge Gaynor or Mayor Adam as expediency may require.

At the conference Thomas M. Osborne, for mayor of Auburn, said a critical condition existed in the Democratic party and there was danger that "the emblems and traditions which we all love are to be turned over to the Independence league."

"It is," he continued, "the sense of the majority of those present that we should concentrate on some candidate who can be voted for by all self-respecting Democrats, and who may possibly defeat this unholy alliance."

Mr. Jerome, John N. Carlisle of Watertown, secretary of the Democratic state convention, and former mayor Osborne, were among the delegates to go among the delegates and report to the sentiment and report to a meeting to be held tonight.

Mr. Jerome would make no statement after the meeting. He has let it be generally understood during the last few days that he has been entering the race for governor, but he has not yet made a public statement.

Representative Sulzer claims he has 14 voters outside of Greater New York, who will stick to him throughout.

He says that even if he does not get the New York county votes, he obtains those of Kings and Queens he will have a total of 237, or 11 more than necessary.

Mr. Sulzer said the only assurance he has from Charles F. Murphy is that some time between the close of today's session of the convention and the adjournment of the Tammany conference will be held, and Mr. Murphy is very friendly to me," he added.

He also asserts that Jerome, McClelland and Adam are all working for him as the one man who can beat Hearst.

ARMY FIRELESS COOKER.

Washington, Sept. 25.—Under the direction of Commissary General Sharp of the army, experiments have been made at the practice camps this summer and fall of a fireless cooker. The cooker has been used by the army for some time in experiments but this fall it has been tried under severe service conditions. The results have been particularly satisfactory both to the officers of the commissary department and to the men in the field.

The cooker now in use has four compartments and will cook 100 pounds of food. It will hold 20 gallons of food, enough to supply a meal to a company of infantry or a troop of cavalry.

PIONEER DAY AT COLORADO SPRINGS

Dedicated to Glorification of Efforts and Achievements of The Trail Blazers.

WAS AN IMMENSE GATHERING.

Vice President Fairbanks the Orator—Gen. Hall, Secretary of Jefferson Territory Was There.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Sept. 25.—Pioneer day, the second in the Pike Centennial celebration week, opened as auspiciously as did the week itself. With early dawn the streets took on a most animated appearance, the trains of last night and the early morning adding materially to the vast throng of outsiders who have come to participate in the celebration.

The day had been set aside by the committee on arrangements for the glorification of the efforts and achievements of the early pioneer, the man who blazed the trails and belonged to the vanguard of civilization that has made the great American desert the land of milk and honey. The day is witnessing the grand and glorious day from Colorado and neighboring states made a gathering of those interested persons that never before has been equalled in this section of the country. The formal exercises were conducted in the open air, the meeting being held at Stratton park at the entrance to the famous Cheyenne canyon at 11:30 this morning. The speakers at this meeting were Gen. Frank Hall, one time secretary of Jefferson territory, and Judge Wilbur F. Stone of Denver.

It was the fact that it was seen early that the grand opera which would accommodate only a small part of the crowd that desired to hear the address of Vice President Fairbanks, the meeting was made an open air one instead. The vice president spoke from the balcony in Acadia park, and his address was listened to attentively by fully 10,000 persons. It was presided over by Congressman Frank E. Brooks, to whose efforts was due in large degree the federal participation in the present celebration and seldom has a speaker received such an ovation in this city as Vice President Fairbanks today.

A public reception at the home of Congressman Brooks at 4 o'clock this afternoon in honor of Vice President and Mrs. Fairbanks was the chief social event of the day.

The throng that has been present at Camp Perry since the arrival of the army detachments here on Friday and Saturday was undiminished today. The military features of today's program consisted of a dress parade by the Twenty-ninth infantry on the Cascade avenue plaza, followed by a concert by the Twenty-ninth infantry band. When Congressman Brooks, Thomas P. Walsh, President William F. Slocum of Colorado, and other delegates to the state convention were escorted to the Walsh automobile at the Antlers hotel, the vice president, baring his head and rubbing his forehead with his handkerchief, said:
