OGDEN.

OGDEN, UTAH, - DEC. 28, 1894.

Notes of News.

Dr. R. S. Joyce has been appointed Rio Grande surgeon at Ogden.

Ed Hoffman, postal clerk running between Cheyenne and Ogden, had his left leg broken below the knee on Wednesday, caused by a mail pouch thrown into the car at a station near Rawlins, Wyo., striking him.

Frank Whitehead failed to identify the two men arrested at Tooele for the hold-up in the Southern Pacific freight yard. They were released.

At the parlors of the Methodist church George R. Williams, of Ohio, and Miss Eva Smith, of Cheyenne, Wyo., were married, the Rev. Dr. Jeffrey officiating.

Yesterday was a severely cold day, with a cold, blistering wind. The streets were almost deserted and teamsters at a standstill.

LOGAN.

LOGAN, UTAH, - DEC. 28, 1894.

Arrests.

A tramp blacksmith who has been working at one of the shops here left his boarding place between two days without settling his bill, and lost his landlord's overcoat, possibly to realize him of the debt. He was arrested at Brigham City yesterday, and the marshal went down for him this morning.

One J. M. McCoy, a non-resident here, was arrested on Monday for the crime of adultery, alleged to have been committed with a woman named Mrs. Weiss. The arrest was made by the city police, and he is being held until official papers are received for his detention from the U. S. marshal.

Notes.

The comic opera Amorita, rendered on Christmas Eve by the Calhoun Opera company, was beautifully staged and portions of it were exceptionally well rendered. While there are no Patti or Nicolini in the cast, there are many fair voices, and the evolutions of the company in its military and other drills were executed with admirable precision.

Logan seems very quiet after Christmas. Probably the cold weather has something to do with it. The thermometer has registered 12 deg. below zero on two mornings this week.

There is one case of diphtheria, and one of scarlet fever in Logan, but on account of the careful quarantine and cold weather, the diseases are not expected to spread.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.

MADELINE POLLARD

Will Not Go on the Stage, But Will Try and Star Her Money.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Madeline Pollard will not go on the stage, she hence will not accept the offer of Mr. M. C. Anderson. There is reason to believe, however, that she will try to stake some of the money that comes into her offices at Col. Breckenridge's lectures. She can easily do this by filing a transcript of the judgment secured her in Washington in each place that the Colonel lectures and issue a sheriffs bill accordingly.

Miss Pollard is quietly living in an unpretentious place near Twenty-third street, where she pursues her literary work. She keeps herself thoroughly posted as to the Colonel's movements, and there is reason to believe another chapter will be added to the case either before the matter is sued finally.

Miss Pollard is devoting her spare time to befriending unfortunates. She has several old blind ladies, inmates of city hospitals that she visits as quite frequently and those who know of her act as an absolutist, on to speak of her dramatic powers, can judge of how much pleasure she gives to the old women, who have come to look at her as an angel of light.

She is frequently seen in the streets and mingles every day with the crowds of promenaders on Broadway. A dark veil conceals her face and she is accordingly unknown to New Yorkers as the famous plaintiff.

In speaking about the report that she had changed her name, Miss Pollard said:

"It is perfectly absurd and something that I never dreamed of doing. My father gave me my name, and enough I have sulled it, I propose to live long enough and try to remove the stain by giving my life to attack. What I have done, I have done; but the future is mine and I expect to retrieve the past. I will recognize what I have to contend with, but I find much to strength. on me between the lids of the Bible. There is a report, too, that I have been doing typewriter work. It is exceedingly absurd. I am trying to make myself useful in the world and endeavoring to avoid entirely of any kind. I expect to come upon the crest of the wave in 1896."

Miss Pollard has been very busy in "doing" the city, particularly the Bowery and tenement districts, and will doubtless employ her pen to some advantage one of these days.

SKATING CHAMPIONSHIP.

January 12th Set for the Annual Contest.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The advent of King Frost finds the officials of the National Amateur Skating association on the alert with the program for the annual championship already prepared. Warned by their adverse experiences of the past two winters they have taken time by the forelock and fixed Saturday, January 12, as the date for the big event. The avenue selected for the sport is Orange lake near New Burgh, N. Y. The program includes races at 440 yards, one mile, five and ten miles. None of the events came off last winter on account of the outside ice at Red Bank, N. J. In the 1893 series at Red Bank Howard Hosmer, of Storm King, N. Y., won 440 yards, and he is rating hard to retain his title. Other entries expected for the 440 yard championship are Jim and Joe Donohue, New Haven, N. Y.; C. and W. Clark, Storm King, N. Y.; W. O. Douglass, New York; S. B. Phillips, New York, and John S. Johnson. The last named has written expressing his wish to enter for all the events.

Nothing has been heard from Johnson's skating side partner, Gus Hood, who quietly gathered in the one mile championship in 1893, while Joe Donohue and Johnson were waltzing each other. Even if the holder does not turn up the race is bound to see a clinker between the other pair. A strong representation of the young athletic element is expected in the events as many of the junior experts who have not spent for the shorter race may wish to try their staying qualities.

McNeoudmond's Petition.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—In a leader this morning, the Daily News says:

Whatever the issue to be proceedings against the directors of the Commercial Bank of Newfoundland, the incident will hardly strengthen the public confidence in which the poor remnant of New Foundland's property rests.

The colony must now see cause to regret its short-sighted refusal to enter the dominion. Had it joined the Canadian confederation it would have a better claim for support from its sister community than it can now advance.

The Telegraph says: Something must be done to extricate Newfoundland. We cannot help thinking that the wisest eventual course will be for the colony to abandon its independence and join Canada.

She was the daughter of Parshall and Hannah Terry and was born in Albion Home District, Upper Canada, New Ontario, on the 2nd of July, 1825. She was baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints by Theodore Turley, in February, 1836, and in the following summer she moved with her parents and others of the family to Missouri, in time to be driven out in the following November, under the exterminating order of Governor Boggs. She married John Crawford in January, 1847, and lived in Calhoun county, Ill., until his death, which was about the year 1854, when she moved to Nauvoo, where she married Nelson Hansen in the winter of 1845, and in February, 1846, at sunrise of the saints being driven from their homes, they started West and went with George Miller's company to Potosa. After the company was broken up they returned to Pottawattomie county, Iowa, where they lived until the spring of 1851, when her husband left her and went to California, where it was supposed he died. With her children she emigrated the same season to Utah, arriving at Draper, Salt Lake county, in August, where she stayed until the fall of 1852, when she moved to Rockville, then Kane county, and her lived there since. Her death was caused by a complication of diseases. She was the mother of nine children, two by the first and seven by the last husband; five of her children are left to mourn her loss. Four having preceded her. She had fifty-one grand children and seven great grand children. She died as she had lived, a faithful Latter-day Saint.
