THE CARNIVAL ENDS.

Closing Exercises of the Grand Celebration.

VAST MULTITUDES OF PEOPLE.

the Oil brilliant Spectacle never in Every Way Second to Any Parade.

On Saturday night the Carnival came to a close. The nine days of its duration, while not as long a term in view of the extent and magnificence of the celebration, was long enough to afford the vast multitude in attendance ample opportunity for enthusiastic enjoyment, and to fatigue them sufficiently to make them willing to witness the end.

To say that the success of the celebration was all its promoters expected to accomplish, is speaking entirely within bounds. This is true in respect to the magnificence of the parades, the enormous attendance of visitors and the unbounded enthusiasm of the multitudes who witnessed or took part in the festivities. Such an event is sure to be compared with similar ones in other cities. There is no other means of measuring its merit. But such comparisons invariably increase the credit due to our new state for the manner in which it has entertained, for the first time, the birthday of the glorious American Union.

The Carnival is a form of celebration common in France, and there transplanted to the United States by the early settlers of Louisiana, and its American home is the city of New Orleans. During recent years, other American cities have held such celebrations, but the one we have just held was equipped any other that has occurred in the United States in years, when the population and surroundings considered, of this city are considered.

Promptly at 11 o'clock on Saturday morning the parade began to move. It was accompanied by some of the days, and was witnessed by immense crowds of people that packed the streets along its entire route. It is estimated that fifty thousand people saw the magnificent exhibition.

The moving column contained all of the most beautiful and striking features of the previous parades, with some additional ones of a very attractive character. Chief of these was the Chinese dragon, which was the most remarkable display in the pageant. It typified Chinese mythology, and was dressed and accompanied by Chinamen, who beat gongs, and illustrated the record in which this, their national emblem, is held.

The head of the monster is constructed of leather and papier mache, and its body is of bamboo frame with covered with silk and satin. One Chinaman carried the head, a dozen were required to carry the body, and one bore the tail. Those who carried the body were almost concealed from view. Each of the thirty-six men had hold of a sort of pole, similar to the handle of a hoe, by means of which he supported his burden. The effect looked like an enormous sea serpent, writhing and glittering as it wended its way along the streets. It was made in Chicago and is owned by the Chinese colony at Rock Springs, Wyoming.

Forward to the progress, when the procession reached the city and county building, the Queen of the Carnival, Miss Jean Russell, was deposed by the Goddess of Liberty, Mrs. Harry L. Jennings, who with fourteen young lady attendants, clad in Greek costume, took possession of the throne and royal car.

One thousand school girls in white costumes delighted the multitudes who crowded around the tribunes in the grounds of the city and county building by singing national airs under the direction of Prof. Russell.

In the evening another parade was given, which included many of the leading features of the one which occurred in the forenoon, and some others, and was witnessed by vast crowds of people. Incident to this parade was the accession to the Carnival throne of King Carnival.

The evening was further signalized by a great display of fireworks, which was made in the grounds of the city and county building. It was a handsome feature, and created much enthusiastic admiration.

FIRE.

In the parade on Saturday evening the 6 at of the Fisher Brewing Co. caught fire. The blaze was quickly extinguished, with slight damage.

The Indian band from the Tuller Institute, Grand Junction, Colorado, attracted a great amount of attention and admiration. Considering the condition of barbarism from which its members have so recently emerged it performed remarkably well. Its leader, Lewis E. Hill, is a full-blooded Indian.

Among those to whom credit is due for hard work and public spirit in connection with the Carnival celebration, Chief Pratt and his force should be sound well up near the head of the list. They have striven hard to maintain order and are entitled to great praise for their efforts and success.

But few violations of law have been reported during the carnival celebration. Offenses against person and property have been much less frequent than might have been expected, in view of the enormous crowds that have been in the city, and the opportunities thieves, burglars and pickpockets have had.

The chariot race which was to have come off between Mr. Stichtenoth and Dr. Higgins did not take place. The former was on hand with his chariot and team, and to appease the disappointed multitude had assembled to witness the contest spurted over the course alone. Dr. Higgins, who was the originator of the race, did not appear, and his failure to come was severely resented. The reason for it, however, receives all grounds for blame. The doctor was taken seriously ill, the afternoon, as supposed, being mainly due to the exertion and excitement incident to preparing for the contest. During Saturday night he was delirious, and several men were required to take care of him. He imagined that he was driving his chariot over the race course. His many friends wish him a speedy recovery.

During the Wild West performance on the Exposition grounds, on Saturday evening, a scandal occurred. The short table between Wanter and Jackson was in progress. A man impersonating an Indian and just fallen, supposed to have been shot, and a young man named Morris, also impersonating an Indian, was bending over him, when Arizona Charlie fired at the latter. To the horror of all who witnessed the incident, it was instantly apparent that Morris was seriously wounded. He was bending forward towards the shooter at the moment of being hit, and the charge, which was of shot, struck him in the face and neck. He was conveyed to St. Mark's hospital. It is not thought his wounds are dangerous. Arizona Charley had been shooting at glass balls, with shells loaded with shot, and was unknowingly got one of these shells in his gun during the storm battle.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

The Saints tabernacle was occupied by President George Q. Cannon.

Elder Joseph E. Taylor, of the Stake Presidency presided over the regular services at the Tabernacle yesterday afternoon.

Choir sang:

For the strength of the hills we bless Thee, O God, our fathers' God.

Prayer was offered by Elder W. W. Riter.

Choir sang the anthem:

From star, glorious Lord, Thee, best gathered day dawn.

President George Q. Cannon was the speaker. He commenced by reading a portion of the 42nd section of the book of Doctrine and Covenants, and followed it up with a clear and concise doctrinal discourse on the same, calling especial attention to divine authority and how the Latter-day Saints came into possession of it; their right to believe it upon others and the blessings to be derived from exercising it with diligence and truthfulness.

Choir sang the anthem:

Let the mountains shout for joy.

After which the congregation arose and joined with the choir in singing the Doxology and benediction was pronounced by President Joseph F. Smith.

OPINIONS OF OUR LEADING MEN.

President Angus M. Cannon says of the Keeley treatment.

"I thought it impossible for the man to do what Dr. Keeley has done scientifically in counteracting the terrible evils of intemperance. His treatment strengthens men physically, mentally and morally. Under these circumstances they are given another opportunity to become men amongst men. Is there a man who loves his fellow-men that can fail to say: I view Dr. Keeley as engaged in a most commendable work? I treat his good work may continue."
