is of the opinion that $10,000,000 would be much nearer the facts.

The bonded debt of the territory is given at $500,000, interest thereon, $300; floating debt, $192,000; interest thereon, $13,000, making a total indebtedness of $705,300. The indebtedness of the several counties aggregates $2,117,000. The indebtedness of the cities of Ogden, Tooele, Provo and Tombstone aggregates $130,000. The average rate of interest throughout the territory is 2.25 per cent.

The total number of arms entered within the public land laws during the year is given as 426,196. "Mining has always been the foremost wealth producing industry of Arizona," says the report, "and during the last year it has been very active. The mineral experts for 1891, it is thought, exceed that of any previous year." The acting assayer estimates the copper output at 10,000,000 pounds; gold output $1,132,000; silver, $1,037,000. During the year very extensive deposits of superior onyx have been discovered. The quality is said to be first class.

The pine forests of northern and central Arizona cover an area of about 2700 square miles or approximately 1,700,000 acres.

The common school system of the Territory is said to be finely established, well maintained and compares favorably with any in the country.

The acting governor recommends that Arizona be admitted into the Union as a State upon the adoption of a proper constitution by the people; that all public lands within her borders be ceded by the government to the Territory or State; that all public lands be surveyed; that school lands be ceded to some extent; that the Apache Indians be disarmed and prohibited from going around that the mineral lands in the San Carlos reservation be opened to mineral entry and occupied by white citizens, and that the powers of the sale of the ones be held in trust for the Indians. His recommendations of last year are reviewed.

The Scent of Flowers.

In popular conception, the soul of the flower resides in its perfume. But certain brilliant flower souls sometimes express singular repulsion for particulars of the human family. There have been those even who could not endure the fragrance of the rose. To my knowledge one observer finds in the scent of lilies an unpleasant reminder of the odor of escaping gas. Another makes no distinction between the breath of adjacent and the smell of fresh asparagus. To me the scent of the thistle is sentient with that of the heartsease spreading luxuriously among its purple thistlets, and the first time the delicate, leathery flower of the beach pilot were brought to me, purely their odor was the same I had noted in dusty clerks and scalding cells.

Double the gratification which flowers provide for the sense of sight and the sense of smell, there is another and quite distinct pleasure—that which is conveyed to the contact of a flower; as in a gentle spend of lilies breaking against your face, the delicate touches of the anemone, the leather cushions of apple blossoms dashed with rain, the refined dockness of the lily, which gave an old time poet countenance in describing his lady's hands, as smooth, as white, as soft it was, "as if had worn a lily for a glove." Further tactile differentiation is to be found in the warm, vital and alert touch of the rose as unlike the quality of the lily petals, as the vivid sweetness of the peony and the petunia, in the flattery thickness and dryness of the larkspur blossom.—Edith M. Thomas in Atlantic.

Earthworms and Salt Water.

A very important fact in the economy of earthworms is their susceptibility to salt water; they are for the most part soon killed by an immersion in salt water, and it appears that their eggs are also incapable of withstanding its influence for a prolonged period. However, the eggs are not deposited singly, but are inclosed in large numbers in an egg case of a leathery consistence, which may be, for a time at least, impermeable to sea water. It is therefore just conceivable that the cocoons might come in safety a narrow sea inclosed in a ball of weed upon the floor of a floating tree.

But it seems certain that a very long time does not elapse before the eggs in the cocoon are finally injured by the sea-water. The only exception at present known to an earthworm which is found in heaps of cast up seaweed on the seashores of the Mediterranean and North sea.—Chambers' Journal.

Official estimates of the Kansas wheat crop indicate a shortage of 34,000,000 bushels.

It is said that the American wool clip of 1891 will exceed that of all previous years.

The Kansas state report shows the oat crop to be, according to its measurements, one of the heaviest in the history of the state, likewise barley and flax.

It is reported that flax makes thrifty growth in Colorado, where Kansas is much used as a valuable acquisition in the food ration.

THE NEW YORK HORSE SHOW.

Prizes at the Great Annual Exhibition Horseback and Carriage.

The prize list of the annual horse exhibition of the National Horse Show association of America, which will be held in the Madison Square Garden on Monday, Oct. 19, has been issued. These exhibitions have come to be most important features of the entertainments of the winter, and the large attendance at the one of last year included a considerable part of the society people of the city.

The horse show has won the favor of the men and women of fashion, and any gathering which has the honor to be introduced and entertained by them is sure to be a success. The magnificent and Madison Square garden is extraordinarily well adapted for its purposes and further arrangements for the big horse show, and there seems no reason why the exhibition this year should not equal or surpass the remarkable success attained by first horse show, both as to public attendance and the merit of the display exhibited.

It is desired that the unsophisticated readers shall know a more important feature of the show than it has done heretofore, as the association has increased the award to $500 for first premium and $250 for second. This liberality should induce owners to send a large number of stallions to compete for the prizes. Entries must be 4 years old and over. There will be four and second prizes for Arabs, for box classes of trotters, for roadsters, Clydesdales, Suffolks, for saddle classes of hackneys $2,000 of the money offered being given by the American Hackney Horse association, for jumping hunters, hackneys, hunters in harness, carriage horses, trotters, four-in-hand teams, ponies, saddle horses, Galloways, mules, ponies, pony stallions and brood mares, hunters and jumpers, polo horses and pairs polo horses.

There will be eighty-one regular classes and twenty-one special cups. Special prizes are offered as follows: By the directors, best roadster and road team, $100 and $50; Charles H. Kerner, pair of roadsters and road team, $100; certain members of the Coaching club, best four-in-hand, $100; J. R. Roosevelt, park team (four-in-hand) and drag, $100; New York Tandem club, park tandem, $100; best tandem, $100; Brewster & Co., pair of horses and brougham or victoria, $100; Cornelius Vanderbilt, pair of ponies, $100; E. Grant, Canadian bred horse owned by Americans, to be ridden over jumps, $100; H. Dunlap & Co., best hunter or jumper, $100; Fairey Clark, horse taking eight jumps, $100; Floyd Farrin, saddle horse, $100; A. S. Hoyland, riding school saddle horse, $100. Entries will close Oct. 19, at the office of the secretary, W. F. Wheeler, 63 Madison avenue, New York.—New York Tribune.

Another Dishcover Suggestion.

There is no mystery about an hallowe'en for farmers. A hollow that secures perfect stillness, the metal shell of slide that is short and light enough to hold accident, a deep board and that will turn water and open gables for full and free ventilation is all that is necessary. Then plenty of sawdust, bottom, sides and top, will insure keeping. The outer walls, including those of the coiling room, should be filled with sawdust, but the partition wall next not be a double one. Better make it simple, lined with tar paper or building felt.—Field and Farm.

Butter and Creamery Notes.

We call attention particularly to the hint given by an experienced butter-maker in regard to exercising in fresh butter that it may be worked so that it may become state and strong. Cleave vigorously a few minutes, till the butter is all broken into little and granular. The fragrant, fresh flavored buttermilk will take away the butter's little a cheese. Then work slightly and work as you would fresh butter.

The hair-splitting philosophers are again discussing white specks in butter and their cause. In brief, they are found to mean long either too warm or too cold when it is churned, and they may be avoided by avoiding the cause.

Better that it strained has not had the salt properly worked in. Work salt in evenly and you will have no streaks.

Better than the fountain of perpetual youth is a perpetual well of cold water in the dairy room of creameryman. Ground that has the advantage is worth double as much for dairy purposes as land not thus favored.

There should be everywhere find by now a standard of 3 per cent of fat in milk that will be satisfactory. Field and Farm believes this is as fair to all as that thirty-six inches should make a yard.

As soon as the creaking fall work is laid by, prepare your calendar for the winter dairy.

One creameryman finds there is no advantage for milk equal to white enamelled ware. He strains cream through it, pour into it churning, and finds it holds back all the white specks or cheesy matter and all other things that repel and to get in, while it lets the cream through readily.

Buttermaking is passing from private hands to the creamery, just as weaving passed from the hand loom to the factory.

Why do some writers still preserve the antiquated English form "milk cow" in speaking of a milk cow? Is it because they want to be English? In any case, the word "milch" is German, not English.

Fowls should not fourteen hours before being killed for market.

Remember that an ulcer of liquid, milk cups, or anything else, will lame the point of pure water for live stock.

Feed fattening stock morning, noon and night, but give just as much only as they will eat up clean. The right of a quantity of "remnants over" food is no more pleasant or appetizing to a well bred pig or any form it is to a person.
