GASOLINE EXPLODES,

Demolishing a Five-Story Building in Cincinnati, Ohio.

MANY BURIED IN THE RUINS,

Mutilated Victims Asking for Death—John James of Salt Lake Knocked Senseless.

CINCINNATI, May 4—This city and vicinity has been greatly excited tonight over the explosion of a large tank of gasoline which completely demolished the five-story building at 430 and 432 Walnut street at 8 o'clock tonight. After the explosion the wildest reports were current as to the loss of life. Before midnight it was known that six were killed and eighteen injured, but the work of removing the debris had proceeded so slowly that the general estimate of the killed and wounded greatly exceeded this number. The building seemed to have collapsed in such a manner that the pile of debris was covered by the tin roof, and after working several hours it was found that the only way to remove the bodies was to remove the immense mass of brick and timber. Accordingly men were put at it, as many of them as could work on it. The debris was taken shoveled by one force out into the street and into the rear alley, and all available teams were secured for another force of men to load it up and get it out of the way. This is found to be the only practical means of rescuing those who were on the lower floors. All those who have been rescued had been on the upper floors, except some who were thrown out into the street. While this work was going on holes were cut through the foundations of adjacent buildings and twelve were thus rescued. Three lives were saved by persons being rescued in that manner. It is thought that others will be saved by these holes through the basement walls of the adjoining buildings.

A most touching scene occurred when Fireman John McCarthy found his brother pinioned under a heavy beam and begging the men above to kill him. McCarthy said there were three other men near him and they were alive. The most heroic efforts to liberate these sufferers were made up to midnight.

There were many that suffered slight injuries who were taken to their homes and whose names cannot be learned.

The shock was so terrific that it was felt all over the city, and not one brick upon another is left in the front and rear walls of the building, while the adjacent buildings are badly damaged, and the glass in the windows in the tobacco house and the large Johnson building across the street are all broken. The glass was broken out of street cars that were passing at the time, and one of the cars was badly wrecked, but none of the passengers were seriously hurt. All the horses in the immediate neighborhood broke from their fastenings and ran away, and there was not only intense excitement but the greatest confusion.

There are wild reports about the extent of the loss of life. Six bodies had been recovered up to 9:30 p. m. and it is known that there are many more.

It could not be definitely learned for some time what caused the explosion, but it was finally ascertained that the column in the building had put in their own electric plants for incandescent lights and had just secured a gasoline engine with which to run the dynamo. The plant got out of fix and there was a flash which communicated to the gasoline and caused the explosion.

Mr. John J. James of the Salt Lake Herald was just leaving the Gibson house at the time of the explosion, and was hit heavy girl, was hurled into the doorway of an adjoining store. He was knocked senseless, but afterward recovered sufficiently to take the train tonight for St. Louis, on his way West.

It was thought early in the evening that Mrs. Dresch as well as her husband was killed. The body of Mr. Dresch was recovered and taken to the morgue. As Mrs. Dresch was known to be in her flat at the time of the explosion, she was counted among the dead, but her body was reached shortly before midnight, and she was found to be still alive. She was suffering intense pain and all the efforts of the workmen failed to rescue her. Up to 12:30 they have been able to talk to her but over an hour while she remained pinioned under a heavy beam.

At 12:30 tonight they furnished her with something to drink and are providing for her as best they can.

Workmen report at 12:45 that one of Mrs. Dresch's children was certainly alive, as they could plainly hear it calling "mamma." They said the servant girl of Mrs. Dresch, name unknown, was dead, and lying by Mrs. Dresch's side. This does not, however, increase the number of those killed, as Mrs. Dresch has been counted in that list.

The workmen liberated Mrs. Dresch after 1 o'clock, also her little child, and they were taken to the hospital. The child was badly crushed, but she and her child will recover. The dead body of Maggie Kennedy, a domestic, was recovered at the same time and taken to the morgue.

THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, May 4—In the Senate Hill secured the floor, taking up the thread of his speech opposing the bond resolution begun many years ago.

He referred to the "Massachusetts and Maryland combination," in speaking of the votes of Lodge and Gorman, just given in favor of the bond resolution.

Sherman asked Hill to point out any objectionable feature to the resolution, adding that he would like to know if there was any reflection on Secretary Carlisle in connection with the bonds. He was not in the habit of rising to put to it, as the secretary was not open to offensive criticism.

Hill responded that this debate had forced the author of the resolution to strike out the offensive statements. On that alone the Senate and the country were to be congratulated. At one time it looked as though the Senate was bound to three months, "I would have the Senate treat John G. Carlisle just as a Democratic House of Representatives treated John Sherman," said Hill.

Sherman rose to say that he had, while secretary of the treasury, willingly submitted to every Congressional inquiry. "I would be sorry," said he, "that there is a law stating from the time of Alex. Hamilton, requiring the secretary of the treasury to submit to any inquiry from Congress."

Hill thought that about the House of Senate desire any information as to the sale of bonds or other data regarding the office of the treasury department, a courteous note addressed to the head of that department to appear to petition before the committee and give the data required, or even reply by written communication, would be promptly met and would suffice.

Sherman, Gray and Gorman supported Hill in this position, the former reading the statute providing that any committee of the House or Senate might call on the secretary of the treasury for any data he might have as to the business of the treasury department, or might call on him to appear in person.

Hill continued at length. It became apparent that Hill was speaking mainly to consume time, and the cloture became invoked and but few Senators remained in their seats.

Vest entered the chamber and interrupted Hill to secure, as he stated "some information as to the business relations that existed in the bond issue between the treasury department and J. Pierpont Morgan."

"I am not interested in these negotiations," he explained, "as far as they concern any allegation against the integrity of Secretary Carlisle, for I do not believe it."

He then stated his opinion that Mr. Carlisle, as trustee, should not have allotted the remainder of the defaulted bond issue to Morgan & Co., but should have again offered them for sale and thus saved the government the advantage of the rise in price which resulted after the bonds had been on the market a few days.

Hill explained that the Morgan bid was regular and in the common form, and in acceptance was quite proper. While the Republicans side was detained, Hill unexpectedly requested Hill to allow him to move an adjournment, stating that he believed Hill to be quite tired, having spoken for two hours.

Hill acquiesced and the motion carried.

Lodge and Chandler and other Republicans hurriedly entered and made an effort to defeat the motion by a call of the Senate, but the yeas and nays were taken, and, on a division the motion stood 15 to 12 in favor of adjourning, and then at 5 p. m. the Senate adjourned until tomorrow.

Three More Days to Live.

PHILADELPHIA, May 4—H. H. Holmes, the convicted murderer, has now but three more days to live. Sheriff Clement says the execution will occur about 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning. The sheriff says that thus far Holmes has made no final stand on the gallows. If Holmes has anything to say, it may be said from the well.

About fifty persons, including officials and newspaper men, will witness the hanging, although thousands are straining every nerve to be present and as high as $500 has been offered for a single ticket.

DECLINED TO ANSWER.

Rivington Asked Robinson About the Meeting of Troops Near Mafeking.

CAPE TOWN, May 4—A long interview between a correspondent between Sir Hercules Robinson and Dr. W. J. Leyds, secretary of state of the South African republic, and Sir Jacobus A. Dawitt, British agent at Pretoria, covering the events of April 30th and April 30th, has been published. In brief, it shows the extreme disquietude prevailing in the Transvaal at the time by reason of the massing of British troops on the western border of the Transvaal republic, or in the vicinity of Mafeking. It appears that President Kruger was asked to telegraph to secure the assurances of Sir Hercules Robinson that the gathering was not one of hostile intent and that the troops were not to be sent to Mafeking, but were being started as promptly as possible for Buluwayo and elsewhere.

Sir Jacobus A. Dawitt finally proposed, with the approval of President Kruger, the sending of a joint commission of Boers and Kaffirs to acquire into the reported gathering of British troops at Mafeking. To this Sir Hercules Robinson replied that he trusted that he would have no more such "preposterous proposals."

ELECTRIC EXPOSITION.

Opened by Governor Morton Touching a Button.

NEW YORK, May 4—The National Electric exposition, under the auspices of the National Electric Light association, opened at the Grand Central Palace tonight. It was opened by the pressing of a golden key by Gov. Morton, which sent an electric current into the electrical exhibits from San Francisco, New Orleans, St. Paul, Augusta, Me., and London, England, from the roof of the exposition building.

Mayor Wickham of Brooklyn, after a brief speech, introduced Gov. Morton, who spoke as follows:

"Mr. President and officers of the National Electric Light association—I feel honored by the invitation which you have extended to me to release the electric current generated by the power of the Niagara cataract at Niagara, and in accordance with your wishes, I now declare this exposition duly opened."

The following telegram was received from the mayor of San Francisco: "San Francisco recognizes the electrical chaining of the Niagara as one of the grandest triumphs of this wonderful age. It is a triumph of mind over matter, and therefore commands our congratulations."

W. H. Preece, who has charge of the land lines of the Great British telegraphs, in answer to the signal given replied: "Wish your exposition every possible success."

Dispatches were also received from Augusta, St. Paul and New Orleans, declaring that the guns had gone off satisfactorily. When Gov. Morton touched the key a volume of fireworks had danced through the tubes that environed the place where he stood, simultaneously the electric lights around the different exhibits blazed out in different colors and created a sight that looked like a circle from Fairyland.

One of the most interesting of the exhibits was the Edison apparatus showing the telegraph and telephone equipment, the earliest forms of electric lighting, transmission motors and dynamos, together with four sets of apparatus with which experts gave exhibitions of the Rontgen rays, so announced that by using the fluorescence of their bones people were able to inspect their own anatomies.

RUSSIA INTIMATE WITH SPAIN.

A Diplomatic Demonstration On Account of Cuba.

MADRID, May 4—The ambassador from Russia, who has arrived here to put in effect the purpose to mutually convert the Spanish and Russian families into embassies, presented his credentials to the queen regent today. He said that the Czar's desire is to devote himself with zeal to further an improvement in the mutual friendly relations between Spain and Russia. The queen regent replied in terms of joy upon her satisfaction at the elevation of the Russian mission to an embassy as a proof of the czar's sympathy. This step on the part of the Russian government is regarded as very significant. The relation between the two nations is to be most intimate, and the attitude of the Russian press is declaring that America was so bad in interfering in the Cuban affair, which, according to Russian newspapers, only concerns Spain, has already been much regretted.

THE PRETORIA CRYPTOGRAM.

The Governor of Cape Colony Does Not Know a Thing About Them.

LONDON, May 5—At the request of the secretary of state for the colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, in the House of Commons today, Mr. Henry Labouchere agreed to postpone until Thursday his question regarding the joint action of the Pretoria cryptograms and in regard to the action the government proposed to take towards the British Chartered South Africa company and its directors.

Mr. Chamberlain, replying to a question, said he had received a telegram from the governor of Cape Colony, Sir Hercules Robinson, with reference to the cryptograms, which had not contributed to implying that Sir Hercules Robinson has knowledge of the plan to invade the Transvaal. The telegram from Sir Hercules is as follows:

"I cannot state too explicitly that I never received from any one the slightest hint of what was about to occur, and the news of the invasion of Dr. Jameson came like a bolt out of the blue sky. If there should be any information to the contrary, I may refer you to pledges my character in my absence."

When Mr. Chamberlain was questioned regarding the cryptogram from Johannesburg urging that the raid be postponed until Cecil Rhodes had pledged that the imperial government would not assert authority over the Transvaal in the event of success, Mr. Chamberlain replied "Mr. Rhodes had no authority to pledge the imperial government in any way, and I was not aware that Mr. Rhodes had done so."

The Standard expresses the belief that Colonial Secretary Chamberlain is trying to communicate with Cecil Rhodes, who is now on the way with a warrant for the relief of Bulawayo, about the so-called "Transvaal cryptogram."

Holt has resigned his directorate in the South African company on account of his connection with the Jameson raid, as shown by the telegrams published by the Transvaal government. This paper also reports that the mining companies have lost $50,000 and government have been paralyzed. There is no confirmation of this report.

DR. "DROPPER DEAD."

Turkish Announcement of the Death of the Sultan of Morocco.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 4—The newspapers here were authorized to announce the death of the sultan of Persia, but without stating the cause. One newspaper publishes that the sultan was not for a week, but recently, and died suddenly. Some anxiety also is felt here in official circles, owing to the fact that the sultan's family lived in the city, and a telegram has been communicated with South Jean Alexandre, who is credited with having obtained the mission of both the shah and grand vizier of Persia.

"DR. MILES,

Through His Nervine Is a Benefactor to Thousands."

A WIDELY known Wisconsin patriot, who resides at Green Bay, writes March 6th, 1895, as follows:

"Five years ago I became so nervous that I could not sleep. I could not walk or talk on account of nervousness. My attention was called to Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, and I commenced to use it with the very best effect. Since then I have kept a bottle in my house and my whenever my nerves become restless, with always the most good results. My son also uses it with good results. My wife has taken it for nervousness with the best effect and I have found it very useful. All who take it speak highly of it. I have recommended it to many and it never fails to give satisfaction. I shall always keep it in my family, and shall not hesitate to recommend it to many and to urge them to try it. All who have taken your Nervine are loud in its praise. I have recommended it to many and it never fails. All who take it speak highly of it. It is free from narcotics, perfectly harmless, and not habit-forming.
