A jewelry building and its contents were destroyed by fire at New Whatcom, Wash., on Saturday afternoon.

There men have been held to answer by the superior court of Santa Cruz for killing a cow and selling the meat to soldiers.

During March the Fort Collins (Colorado) factory sent to Denver ten tons of cheese, besides shipments to Colorado Springs and Pueblo.

The California police think that Jesse, who is wanted in Tuolumne county for a second robbery, but whom Lieutenant Waite caused to extradite, will go to Mexico.

The hay and grain crop of Sonoma valley, Cal., will, it is said, turn out better than was anticipated, and will be not even enough for another drop in rain falls this season.

Nineteen young Jews are being defended at Wortmann, Wash., for want of immigration permits. They had walked all the way from Vancouver and are almost destitute.

The Eureka-red son of Cyrus Roberts, of Yamhill, Or., was drowned last week in a sluice 10 to 15 feet deep. His father who plowed and sowed the child. On making a search he found the body in a little creek.

A coroner's jury at Reno, Nevada, has decided that the man Cahill, who was found dying in the hall of a lodging house Thursday, came to his death from a blow on the back of the head, whether by design or accident the jury could not determine.

A Phoenix (A. T.) jeweler raffled out a few days ago, and while he was asleep. His sleep was so sound that judicial proceedings were instituted. He was fined $5 for contempt, and when he refused to pay was taken to jail.

The Indians of northern Arizona have a peculiar branding iron. It is made of steel and joined on the head of an arrow. Then with burning sticks it and with each force that it cuts a mark on the animal, which when it heals looks as if it had been branded.

H. A. Leonard, the silver City (Nevada) man, who is visiting New York, says the Lassen Daily Mining Journal, owns one-third interest in the Bonanza mine, near Silver City, which was recently bonded to San Francisco parties for $10,000. Mr. Leonard is confident the Bonanza will develop into a bonanza. He says samples sent across the Rocky mountains gave $8 a ton gold. Specimens had been taken out that assayed as high as $10,000 a ton.

During the past week says the San Francisco Chronicle, nearly every outgoing steamer for the Alaskan Coast (Cal.) has been carefully and systematically robbed. The amount taken from the lodgers was not large, but they could ill afford to lose the few dimes and nickels in their possession. On Saturday night the police have caught a well dressed youth about sixteen years of age in the act of leaving the rooms of a lodging house and arrested him. He gave the name of Richard Lallus and says he came from St. Louis.

A distressing case of poverty has been discovered in Oakland, Cal. C. H. Henry and his wife have been actually starving. Money is a cripple, and the owners now are in a state of gangrene because they have not been properly attended to. He is a believer in Christian Science and has not paid any attention to his condition. His wife is an old lady, and she, too, is very ill. They have had no one to care for them, and the room in which they are living presents a sickening sight. As soon as their condition was discovered the matter was reported to the authorities, and aid was given them at once.

In the county treasurer's office at Portland, Or., on Saturday afternoon, Charles A. Mackey, son and deputy of the treasurer, was shot and seriously injured by a robber, who, after his victim had fallen to the floor, stepped over his body, entered the county's vault and rifled several drawers of their cash contents, amounting in the aggregate to between $1,000 and $2,000. When Mackey recovered sufficiently he gave an excellent description of the robber. Suspicion was first fastened on a San Francisco sneak thief now in Portland, but it was found that he was innocent. The detectives have decided that the robber was some one who gained his knowledge of the county treasurer while confined as trusty in the county jail and are now working on that clue.

Gardner Landon has brought suit in San Francisco against the Tallant Banking company, John Tallant, its president, and John Dodson to recover $50,000 damages for malicious prosecution. Landon was formerly secretary of the Mutual Oil company, of which D. M. Black was president. Both Landon and Black were indicted by the grand jury for obtaining money from the Tallant bank by false representations as to the value of certain commercial paper. The charge against Landon was dismissed last week on account of the death of John McKee, who was the principal's principal witness. Landon now alleges that the charge against him was malicious and false and hence his suit against the defendants, who, he says, were responsible for his arrest and indictment. The complaint recites that John Tallant is worth $1,000,000 or more and that the defendant, Dodson, is an impecunious lawyer.

Judge Homer Merrill, of Rawlins, Wyo., whose son Ed., with Eli Hook, was herding sheep about fifty miles from Casper when the storm of four weeks ago struck the county, reached Cheyenne last night from the search made for the boys, says the Laramie Boomerang. He secured the assistance of men near Casper and, after a search of several days, found the two young men safe and well. The storm had come so quite young Merrill was out with the sheep. Hook, who was at the camp, became alarmed for Merrill's safety, and started to find him. He kept up the search until nearly exhausted and then made his way back to camp, where he found young Merrill pretty thoroughly exhausted. The sheep were then turned loose and Hook and Merrill went to bed, never leaving it for thirty-six hours. When the storm was over they went in search of the sheep. Hooker stated that seven were killed in the drift without it. The sheep were unable to stay there and were driven out of the drift by hunger. Out of 1,400 were, however, comparatively undamaged by the snow drift, from which some of them were dug out alive. Some days ago 700 were sold at a loss of $1.00 only 150 perished.

A San Winchester rifle is on exhibition in one of the gun stores in downtown Colfax's office, at sixty Aerograpers, says the Denver News. The rifle has a history, but it is a history whose links will never be connected together. The owner of the rifle is indeed up in a bloody asylum, and experiments by will never be a reasonable again. One day as a condemned on the story was entering the memorable of the sentence in sorrow of bad thirteen months ago two white men. The white men proved to be Eugene Smith, who was serving upon a hunting expedition, and having set foot in Colorado, was escaping that trip immediately. The husband and his party spent the night with the hunters who were in high spirits at the meeting with the Winchester rifle. The Engelmann were well educated gentlemen, and presented the rifle at least in highly acceptable style. Several weeks afterward the soldiers received a white smoke curling up from a ravine in the mountain. They approached cautiously and saw a wild-looking man stirring something which he was boiling in an old seven gallon kettle thrown away by a wagon train years before. The subject advanced and accosted the man, taking one prisoner after a desperate struggle. The man was insane and in the camp said he was the man of his comrade. The kind which perhaps failed to throw any light on the tragedy further than the fact that the survivor was one of the Engelmann party. The rifle was taken before in the fall S. W. at Beach and again. The man was sent to an insane asylum and the gun adopted the other day in Denver.
