HOUSE.

The House went into a committee on the tariff bill, and resumed the consideration of that paragraph taxing women's and children's dress goods, which, on motion of Schenck, was amended by inserting "silk not being a component material thereof, of chief value." The succeeding paragraph, relating to clothing, wearing apparel of every description, and balmoral and other skirts, was similarly amended. The paragraph taxing carpets was reached, when Brooks moved to strike out the paragraph. He had read from the clerk's desk an editorial from the Chicago Tribune, which he said had more influence with public opinion than forty members of Congress. Brooks declared that the paragraph voted millions into the hands of a very few in the Middle and New England States.

Myers opposed the amendment and stated that there were in his district seventy-five people engaged in carpet manufacturing on the policy of free trade. The World's special says Schenck explained that the paragraph simply re-enacted the present law except as regards Brussels carpets, which would be brought down from forty-four to twenty-eight cents and the cheaper kinds of carpet from twenty-five to twelve cents. Brooks' amendment was rejected. The paragraph passed without any amendment except to insert "Brussels carpet at twenty-eight cents per yard and forty-five per cent. advance." Several other paragraphs passed without amendment. The committee rose, having gone through over three pages of the bill.

GENERAL.

NEW YORK.—Burt, the representative of the English Erie stockholders has filed a petition requesting the removal of Fisk and Gould, and asking for an injunction to restrain them from issuing more stock; also for the appointment of a receiver to wind up the affairs of the company.

NASHVILLE, 9.—On Sunday, six negroes went into the house of James Simpson, Hawkins county, seized a young white man in his employ and gave him six hundred lashes, charging him with bewitching them.

NEW YORK.—Spencer, counsel for the defence, in speaking his speech, took the ground that McFarland was insane long before killing Richardson, being driven mad by continued wrongs and impoverished by a legal fight for the possession of his children and maddened by the publication of Richardson's card, announcing his intention to marry his wife. Not satisfied with her ruin, he must advertise his victim. The counsel followed the whole history of the case minutely to the death-bed marriage of Richardson and Mrs. McFarland, animadverting severely on the conduct of the participants in that ceremony, particularly that of Frothingham, the officiating clergyman, and he closed with an eloquent appeal to the jury for the acquittal of the prisoner. A number of witnesses for the defense were called; but the examination elicited but little interest. One witness spoke in reference to the death of a cousin of the prisoner in an insane hospital with the view of proving a hereditary tendency to insanity. E. W. Sinclair, brother to Samuel, and formerly connected with the Tribune, spoke of his having delivered to McFarland a letter received at the Tribune office, which he did not notice was addressed to Mrs. McFarland. This was the intercepted letter and was from Richardson to the prisoner's wife, dated March 9th, 1867, after McFarland and his wife had separated. The letter, which was very long, was couched in the most affectionate language, and begged her not to be disturbed about her family, as families would always respect accomplished facts. He once outraged his, who were the strictest kind of Puritans, a great deal more than she ever could hers: but time had made all right. He referred to his expected return home and said: "What judgment hall you fear for doing no wrong? The circumstances make it right and unnoticable; and I will not stay away for forty thousand Mr. Grundys. Further, I have not been waiting for you darling, all these long years, to wear hair cloth and serve seven years. No, I want you every day. My arm seem to stretch out towards you; and I never seek my pillow without wanting to hold you to my heart for a good night kiss and blessing; and the few months before you can only be mine, will be long enough at best. No grass shall grow under my feet; but I never let public opinion bully me a bit, and I never mean to do so. Sunbeam, I shall come whenever I can and stay as long as business will permit. Good night my love, my own wife. Burn this will you not?" There is no signature, but the envelope is postmarked "Hartford, Michigan, 9th" and directed to Mrs. A. S. McFarland, care of Samuel Sinclair, Tribune office, New York City, and contains on the back the monogram "A. D. R." After reading the letter the court adjourned till Monday.

The interest of the public in the McFarland case deepens as the case progresses. To-day the court-room was filled with attentive spectators. Mr. Spencer rose and opened the case for the defense. He said he was about to tell the jury and the world the story of one of humble birth struggling through life, and of a libertine and child robber who had been sent to eternity by the avenging bullet of a father and husband. He then severely criticised the district attorney for calling to his aid the most able counsel of the country; his action in doing so showed the absolute weakness of the case. He told the jury to beware lest they sent into eternity before his time a man who, in a moment of irrepressible passion, killed the destroyer of his home and happiness. The paper upon which McFarland wrote when standing at his desk would prove that the prisoner was then in an insane condition. The counsel then alluded to the case of Cole and Huntington and contended that men apparently sane, in a moment of great excitement, were liable to yield to an uncontrollable impulse for which they were not responsible. At the time Richardson was shot by McFarland, he [McFarland] was not responsible for his action, either in the eyes of the Government or by the law of man. The counsel then reviewed the whole history of the prisoner, alluding to all the incidents connected with his marriage and wedded life, and spoke of Richardson's entrance on the scene and his intercourse with Mrs. McFarland, claiming that, in the defense, he would be able to prove satisfactorily that there was an adulterous connection betwixt Mrs. McFarland and Richardson. He stigmatized Mrs. Calhoun as a conspirator, or the procuress who commenced the work, rendering Mrs. McFarland dissatisfied with her husband. He referred also to the intercepted letter from Richardson to Mrs. McFarland, in which Richardson ridicules McFarland and tells this woman he often, in the night, thought of her and longed to clasp his darling in his arms. Was not this enough, asked the counsel, to make a husband, with the heart of a man in his bosom, mad? The counsel had a wife whom he loved, and whom he believed to be as pure as an angel, and if he found such a letter from any man to her, he would meet that man and shoot him dead. (Applause.)

A correspondent says the British Minister had a long interview with Secretary Fish on the Alabama claims and the anticipated Fenian raid on Canada. The latter is said to have engrossed most of the conversation.

The deep interest in the McFarland case still continues. The prisoner still preserves the same cool, complacent demeanor he has maintained throughout the trial. There was a novelty in the court to-day in the shape of Mrs. Norton, an advocate of woman's rights, who took a place among the reporters to give the proceedings of the trial to the Revolution. At ten o'clock the Recorder came into court and announced that the trial would be adjourned to a room in the new court house in order that the general sessions might be proceeded with.

Discontinuing the Freedmen's Bureau has been favorably reported upon in the Senate by the retrenchment committee.

Steps are being taken to afford families with limited means, who desire to emigrate to the West, to do so free of expense.

Senator Cragin, from the committee on Territories, reported, with amendments, the House bill suppressing polygamy in Utah, and moved to make it the special order for Monday next, but an objection being made the motion was not acted upon.

CHICAGO.—The Tribune's Washington special says the anti-polygamy bill, as reported, yesterday by the Senate territorial committee, retains all to which the House, in Cullom's motion, agreed, and half a dozen sections added. Officers of the Mormon Church are not only prohibited from solemnizing marriages, but they are made misdemeanors and are punishable by fine and imprisonment. Such marriages are in violation of the terms of this bill and are declared incestuous and void; and all persons aiding or consenting to them are to be punished for misdemeanor. Spiritual marriages, sealing, consecrations, and all other devices whereby men get the services of women, are prohibited, and so-called spiritual wives may sue to recover payment for their labor. The Mormon Remonstrance, adopted at Salt Lake City about a fortnight ago, applicable to this bill and all other anti-Mormon legislation, was to-day presented.

The Fenians are said to have left the city in large numbers. Some say they have gone to attend the Chicago Congress, while others own they are concentrated on the Canadian frontier, with a view to another raid. Arms and ammunition stored in various Fenian armories in this city are said to have been removed, but nobody seems to know where they have been taken to.

SAN FRANCISCO, 13.—The Attorney General of California has rendered an opinion that, until the law of the State is changed or Congress adopts some legislation in the matter, it is the duty of county clerks to refuse to register negroes. He urges them to obey the State laws pending the action of Congress.

There was a heavy thunder, lightning and hail storm at Sacramento yesterday; considerable damage was done to fruit trees. A house was struck by a lightning bolt, which entered the roof and penetrated to the foundation. The inmates fortunately were absent.

FOREIGN.

LONDON.—The Pall Mall Gazette censures Gladstone's shuffling policy on Irish matters and predicts the defeat of the Irish land bill on account of the obscure complexity and ambiguity of its provisions. The same paper urges the instant dispatch of a frigate to the fisheries to watch an American war steamer there.

OTTAWA.—In addition to the troops already called out and billeted on the frontier, it was decided to call out four thousand men of the active militia in the province of Quebec. These men will hold themselves in readiness and will probably be concentrated at Montreal. There is considerable excitement along the frontier in the counties of Chateaugay and Missisquoi. If a raid takes place, conjectures are that it will be at the same point as in 1866, between St. Armand and Freelingburg. As a measure of precaution, the government has called out the Mooretown volunteers, a county near Sarnia, to do duty as mounted infantry, along the Detroit River below Sarnia.

The Scotsman says Gladstone has received a letter signed by two hundred members of the House of Commons urging the adoption of the ballot.

MONTREAL.—The ice moved yesterday, leaving the river nearly open in front of the city. The water rose suddenly and flooded Commercial street and the lower part of Griffintown.

The Newark Board of Trade has received a communication from the merchants of Nashville, asking it to co-operate with them in avoiding Congressional interference with Tennessee. The agitation has caused many firms to suspend orders for supplies until the question is settled.

There was a heavy snow and rain storm in the Sierra Nevada mountains, in the State of Nevada, last night, which caused considerable damage.
