The new hall in Manti, built by L. T. Tuttle, is now opened. At the inaugural ball fully 300 people were present.

The Derrick thinks Natrona county will soon be the richest part of the state of Wyoming, on account of its oil, asbestos, galena and copper.

Hiram Lewis, the boy who recently escaped from the Reform School at Ogden, has been captured at Osen. His parents reside at Richfield, Sevier county.

The freight rates to all points north of us on the Union Pacific railway in Idaho and Montana are now cut down fully twenty per cent lower than they were prior to Nov. 25th last.

Wood River Times—While standing at the bottom of the Triumph shaft Sterling H. Tucker's left hand was caught between the collar of the shaft and the bucket, and two of his fingers were almost cut off.

Saratoga, Wyoming, is said to have presented a remarkably lively scene for the two months last past, and there is no cessation of the procession of wagon loads of grain, hay, lumber and produce that daily marches about our streets.

Two reports come from Ketchum, Idaho, both seemingly well authenticated. One is to the effect that the smelting furnace is to be "blown in" in about ten days; the other that the blowing-in will not be done until shortly after the first of the year.

In a few days more that part of the Boston & Montana Company's smelting plant known as the lower works will have been closed for all time, and the ore that has been formerly treated there will be treated at Great Falls, so states a dispatch from Butte, Montana.

Dall DeWeese, a prominent Colorado nurseryman at Canon City, Fremont county, says that the wood in his nursery has matured well and the small fruits are in splendid condition for the winter. At this date everything promises well for an unusually large crop in Fremont county for 1893.—Field and Farm.

L. W. Holt, of Seven Rivers, New Mexico, shows a cutting from a three-year-old Mission grapevine, twenty-three feet and three inches long, all of which grew during the past season. The total growth of this vine including all its branches, was eighty-six feet, and this is the best record of a summer's growth thus far made in the Pecos valley.

Lusk Herald—While there is good money in trapping grey wolves and receiving the bounty paid by the state and stockgrowers' association, the trappers find it a little hard to capture many of them during this cold weather and the old hunters and experienced men with the trap are breaking up their camps and going home, there to remain for better weather.

Rock Springs Miner: Jim Goodson, an old timer of Brown's Park, and a noted Indian fighter, reported long ago as dead, writes the editor of this paper from Atlanta, Georgia. He is still a cripple with rheumatism, but his mind is active and he is writing a book about the west and the part he took in opening it up in early days.

Amos Ivie, who has been ailing for over a year, has within the past few days become a raving maniac. The doctors attribute the cause to a blood vessel breaking and letting the blood run into the brain. He was taken to Richfield Monday where he had a hearing before the commission who sent him to the Provo insane asylum.—Central Utah (Salina) Express.

News from the Navajo reservation, in the Black Horse country, received at army headquarters, points toward the amicable adjustment of all difficulties existing between the agents and Indians. At the suggestion of Gen. McCook, the Navajo chiefs from all parts of the reservation assembled several days ago in council to consider the matter, with the general result that they expressed a desire for friendship rather than warfare.

A Flagstaff (Ariz.) dispatch is authority for the statement that great excitement exists there and along the line of the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad over the report of the discovery of rich placer mines near the mouth of the San Juan river, in Utah, 175 miles northeast of there. Five hundred citizens from Flagstaff. Williams and Winslow have left for the new El Dorado. The placers extend for fifty miles from the mouth of the San Juan, and 200 locations have been made. The new gold fields are reported as being the richest ever found.

Stephen S. Fenn died at the Blackfoot asylum on the 8th inst., aged 72 years, says the Idaho Democrat. The deceased had twice represented Idaho as a delegate to Congress. Upon several occasions he was a member of the territorial legislature, and was at one time register of the United States land office in the Lewiston district. He was a lawyer possessing at times considerable mining interests. Of late years his mind has been unsettled and he was sent to the insane asylum at Blackfoot for treatment. He had been a resident of Idaho for the past thirty years.

Ebaugh, Hunt, Black and Bass, the men who were arrested for holding up the Great Northern train near Malta, Montana, has had a hearing before the United States commissioner at Great Falls, on the charge of interfering with the United States mail, but were discharged for lack of evidence. They were arrested immediately afterward and charged with train robbery. Ebaugh, Hunt and Black were discharged on this charge also, but Bass was held over. One member of the gang, Longbaugh, is still at large, having eluded the officers and escaped to the Yellowstone country.

On Monday George W. Landers, a renter on the Thorn Creek ranch owned by Martin Hibbs, went out hunting and on returning left his shotgun at the barn over night. In the morning when he had finished milking he picked up the gun with his right hand and as he did so it was discharged and the load of bird shot went through his arm above the wrist, tearing the bone to pieces so badly that it was necessary to have the injured member amputated. Landers is a poor man but as luck would have it he carried a $3,000 accident policy and the accident will not work a hardship on him as it otherwise would have.—Idaho Miner.

People living near the Pacific coast have seen specimens of what is commonly called "sea moss," says the Los Angeles (Cal.) Express. On the coast of California are found 238 distinct species, some of them very large and many of exquisite beauty, which the ordinary beach gatherer never finds. The study of the Algae is exceedingly interesting. Stanford and Berkeley universities give it a place in their course of study. Students from the East and from Europe are delighted with our specimens. The variety of color and the delicate beauty have a charm for the lover of art. A California lady has devoted her time for the last six years to this subject, and has a wonderful collection of over 11,000 specimens.

Samuel Hunt of Gold Hill was frozen to death near Palmyra, Nevada, the other night, in the Como mountains, while his companion, whose name [illegible], has his feet badly frozen. Both men left Dayton [illegible] with a pack animal to go to Palmyra to do assessment work on the claims. They encountered [illegible] of snow and finally Hunt became fagged out and dropped by the roadside when within a short distance of a cabin. His companion wandered on, but failing to reach the building, which was occupied by two other prospectors. Hearing outcries, attracted their attention and they went to his relief. He was removed to the cabin with his feet badly frozen. The two men then went out after Hunt. He was still alive, but unconscious.

North Idaho Star—Miss Nellie Smith of Kingston, Idaho, assistant World's Fair commissioner for Shoshone county, has selected over twenty different varieties of wood for the shield which is to mark the foundation of the woman's building at Chicago. These boards are four inches wide by three feet in length. The shield will be made at Coeur d'Alene City by local mechanics, and will be a work of art. Miss Smith expects to have at least twenty-eight pieces of timber in the shield, and she has taken great pains to collect every variety of the wood native to this state. The shield will be placed in position at the dedicatory services of the woman's building next May, Montana furnishing the gold, silver and copper spike and Nebraska the hammer with which to fasten it.

This week a tough looking character landed in this quiet town and began jollitating freely. He had all the appearance of a tough citizen and we, as a community, were very respectful towards him. He had the freedom of the city and a run on the suburbs. Malad always entertains proper regard for the feelings of tough citizens. After the mayor and blacksmith had extended every civility and relieved the distinguished guest of a little small change in a quiet game of high-low-jack; everybody went home satisfied with the amenities of life. Thursday morning there was unusual bustle on the streets. Deputy Marshal Little and another officer were in town and they were after our distinguished guest. They got him and put "bracelets" on his wrists. It seems that the gentleman had got away with considerable trouble, the property of Logantes. Among the things illegally appropriated were a month's board, a considerable number of watches and other jewelry and three or four hundred dollars in cash. The culprit made no kick, and consented to return with the officers without the formality of extradition. This is no city of refuge for tough citizens.—Malad (Idaho) Enterprise.
