WILD GAME SHOOTING.

The opening of the hunting season in this locality saw a vast number of amateurs engaging in the "sport" of slaughtering all manner of wild beast that came within reach. An estimable has been made that the value of the ammunition used in the fusillade of Thursday morning would feed, clothe and warm all the poor in Salt Lake City the coming winter, if judiciously expended in that direction instead of being fired at ducks and snipe. As it was, however, the market value of the game bagged was not more than a tenth of the sum expended, for fortunately but indifferent success attended most of the hunters. We say fortunately, for the reason that most of the killing was for "sport" and not for food and therefore the less extensive the slaughter the better. The fact is, the unnecessary killing of game by sportsmen, not for food but for amusement, is cruel slaughter which brings no credit to an enlightened community.

There is one source of satisfaction to the present law regarding the game interests of the State. This is that the statute makes it unlawful for any one to ship game out of the State. Heretofore poulterers have made a business of killing and shipping wild fowl and other game, finding an outside market thereon. Frequently the attention has proved remunerative, and as a consequence killing has been extensive and in many cases unlawful. Now, however, the statute puts a check on providing outside markets from either the fish or the game supply of this State, and the officers evince a determination to enforce the law vigorously. This leaves only the local market, which is comparatively limited, and much of the slaughtering of game that has been going on in past years will be stopped because it will be unprofitable to those who did the most of it for the money they made. There will be a feeling of retribution with the major part of the community that killing game for necessary motives is time brought within reasonably restrictive limits. The unnecessary slaughter of wild animals or game out of season has been related materially from what was allowed in past years, but there are still steps that may be taken in that direction.

CHANGE THE CLASS.

Among the office-holding fraternity in county, city and other political divisions in this locality are some good men, who truly represent the interests of the people, and are not in position for pelf. If these were in the majority in the administration of affairs, the question of public business would be met that no legitimate complaint could be made. Jurors of judgment might occur through the natural importunities of humanity, but there would not be of a bias to harass the people, for honesty in judgment would intervene and prevent serious wrong. Unfortunately, however, this good class of men are not in the majority in office-holders in the most populous district in the State, and consequently politicians run affairs to the greatness of their own aspirations, while the people have to foot the bills.

Under these conditions we have officeholders who are paid salaries for work they do not do, nor for the performance of which they are allowed direction, who pay out of the public funds. These office officials thereby "farm out" their office work to incumbents; they are allowed a much larger list of deputies and a vastly greater aggregate of salaries than are needed for either honest or capable discharge of official duties. There are also "semi-special" deputies or employes who draw salaries for actual service that they render, and it is a pretty well authenticated report that a portion of such salary is distributed to parties who have no interest in the public treasury. Thus the public treasury is bled to fill the pockets of leaders and prominent politicians of the lower order. Another item in connection with this is that these office holders, some of whom there is the most cause of complaint are not of the kind who would stay here and meet their share of the burden in the darker times which is sure to come, they are laissez-faire rather than taxpayers.

In such a situation it is not to be wondered at that a great picture of a desperate effort to keep right in to returned to office, that they may longer repute themselves as paymasters while the taxpayers' portion can be taxed from the people. Therefore they have administrative hustling for them as they are hustling for school votes, so that in either event they will be mutually benefitted and the "dear public" be fooled again LIKE "paying the fiddler." These inferences are made with due consideration for the fact that some good men are seeking reconstitution and are being urgently pressed to do so in behalf of the public welfare; and we have no fear that any of these will be mistaken for the other class, whose methods in getting office and in administering it are generally understood.

It is now time for a change in the ruling class of office holders in this locality. What is wanted is the reputable persons, whose interests are permanently located here, whose determination is to make this place their home through weal or woe, who are of the people and are in no way tractable, whether they be comparatively rich or comparatively poor, should be put into office in greater proportion than has been the case for some time; so that they will not scheming politicians may direct public affairs. The people now have the opportunity to make the change, and may be expected to exercise their power in doing so. There is to be an alteration in city officers this year, but in the county the time is at hand. The party has put up a ticket, whether satisfactory or not we know not. If one party put up, or the one to come, or both, satisfactory with the intelligent class, they ought to be weeded and routed out, if either presents a solid front that is superior to the other all along, it should be so received. It is quite proper to retain officials who have proved capable and are true to their trust, but "stay stag" that has been used to a considerable extent in control are ought to be dropped out, and dropped hard. If intelligent conversation will not do it, then votes may be expected to accomplish the work at the polls. There has been too much of officeholders who get in place for private gain to themselves or their class. Honesty and capability in office are in demand.

PEACE ONCE MORE.

The deliberations at Balmoral between Lord Salisbury and Cabinet Ministers and the Turkish envoys have not given officially to the public. It is thought, however, that the powers of Europe is assured for the time being, an agreement having been entered into to give the sultan further time to carry out reforms, without hostile interference on the part of the powers.

To the many who believe that the Turkish government already has had ample power to enforce peace within the borders of the empire, and that the only, consequently, is Russian and upon Europe to remove the Orient, the announcement probably will be a disappointment. It should be remembered, however, that, on high authority, the integrity of diplomacy is framed sometimes with view to the concealment of thought, instead of for the purpose of revealing it. If so, the policy has been adopted on at Balmoral, it will be known only when the time for action has come.

Europe naturally hesitates to apply the knife to the tumor from which it is suffering. The Russian government has a suspicion that the Armenian revolution in Turkey, if encouraged, would lead to a rising among the subjugated Christian nationalities within the Russian borders. It is no secret that they dream of an independent Armenian kingdom, the establishment of which might lead to new international complications. But this consideration might not have the weight it has, did not the Armenians have a faith of their own. They are concerned herein both by Greeks and Russians and can complain on account of their religious affiliations. In fact, it is more than probable that the ignorant mass of "orthodox" churches look upon their adherents as a just measure a punishment from the Almighty on account of their "heresies." The motives let similar to the old Greeks when they commenced their struggle for independence, or attempting to free the cause of the Christians in Bulgaria and other Balkan states, do not exist in the case of the Armenians, and this is one reason why some powers of Europe feel less concerned about their fate.

Public opinion has been strained, though, to a great extent, and it may happen that the statesmen will be forced to resignation by power. Influential papers not only in England but in Germany and Austria, voicing that opinion, now ask the governments to put an end to the "unspeakable con."

THE NEXT LEGISLATURE.

The time is drawing close for the voters of this State to perform one of the most important duties that ever has rested upon them—the selection of a state legislature, part of which will continue in office four years and part for two years, which will name a United States senator for a six years term and in part will hold over for the election of another full term Senator two years from now, and which will have the responsibility of passing upon a constitution and revision of all the laws of the State and of adding new legislation which may be very difficult to change when once enacted. The combined work is of a character the importance of which, for a new state in the condition in which Utah is, hardly can be overestimated.

At such a time, the people should take especial care to send as their representatives those who have both the determination and the ability to make the public weal. It is not sufficient that a legislator should intend to do right, for well meaning people often are bewildered into doing that which they never intended; nor is ability to talk fluently and to frame laws sufficient, for smart persons are often curses. Legislators should have the attribute of meaning well and also be endowed with the ability to do well, and have the backbone to stand by the right and should not be above consulting the wishes and heeding the advice of their constituency. Any other class of aspirants for legislative honors should receive a backset despite any political pull they may have. Under the State law the nominating convention is the best place to make a stand, but even at the polls there is a choice between candidates.

Some candidates for the next State legislature have been placed in nomination in various parts of the State. Of those already named, some are very good indeed; of others it could be a travesty on truth to make the same remark. More candidates are yet to be named, and the probability is that they will consist of good and not so good persons for office. Certainly there are among those who are aspirants for legislative honors persons whose ability and integrity are not of an order to entitle them to public endorsement and confidence. A judicious selection is necessary to weed out the incompetents.

In the matter of legislature parties, as a rule, the people should not well upon candidates who come out themselves. It has become a fashion, almost a necessity, in some parts, for a person to "announce" himself before he receives any situation. This should not be. It is all right for citizens to become candidates, either from their own choice or on the advice of friends. It is also right for the people to go outside of these and exercise the choice themselves. And in naming a legislator—which office is not always a desirable one—it is commonly the better way to select persons who are evidently not candidates, and who would accept only from a sense of patriotic duty to the State. But in any event incompetents and irresponsibles ought to be guarded against and out out of the State Legislature. It is a body too important in its functions to be composed of politicking lawyers, ultra-rule politicians and cynical statesmen. Knowledge, brains and energy of the first order are needed in the State Legislature to make it truly representative of the best interests of the people.

NATURALIZING CITIZENS.

Utah has had some experience in the naturalizing of citizens that are not common to other states, and not likely to become so; these have been in the extra-judicial severity which sought to exclude eligible persons because of their religious belief. On the other hand, some of the states have had experience which Utah does not want, viz., the herding in by political manipulators of hundreds of people who are utterly unprepared and unqualified for citizenship by reason of their being foreign in knowledge and sentiment to the genius of the American Constitution.

It is not an unusual thing in most of the states for rival campaign committees to organize, a month or two before every election, steering committees for the naturalizing. Such committees have the control of some cunning foreigners who go among their countrymen persuading those who have not taken out their final papers to apply for citizenship in time to vote, and sometimes their persuasion is not over-persuasive. It is a common assertion concerning the places where such committees ply that the men are "rounded up" in bands of fifty or one hundred and brought to the court house, where the judges seriously sit day and night for their convenience. There the prospective American citizens are prompted in their answers by the steering committee and rushed through the mill with a sweetness that would shun an old fogy who still attaches the traditional dignity to the process of converting the supposed slave of Europe into a sovereign on his own account. The judge who is a member of the particular party under whose auspices the august ceremony is conducted, from the questions with the rapidity of a gatling gun, the regulated "citizens" gabble the vacant answers suggested by the politician at his side, the clerk brazenly administers the meaningless oath, and another proud "defender of the Constitution" is launched.

It is a stain upon the judiciary of the country that such proceedings can go on. The magistrate who winks thereat is more to blame than politicians, because better is expected of him. This representable practice is one that has done much to degrade American politics, and ought to receive a check. With the Chicago Times-Herald, we believe the remedy for this evil, by which thousands of persons who neither know nor care about our institutions are made voters and are subject to the manipulation of ward bosses, "lies with the courts; these can stop the pernicious practice with a word, and where no courts is at stake they ought not to need urging to give the word."
