FORD GOES SCOT FREE.

As to the Big Sergeant Mrs. Bayline Says He Did and He Says He Didn't.

The fire and police commissioners held a protracted and important session last night at the conclusion of which Sergeant Ford, who has been the central figure of a sporting woman scandal for the last week, was ordered reinstated, the charge being considered insufficient to warrant dismissal from the force.

Ford was represented by Judge Howatt and the prosecution, or rather the city, by Judge Hogg. Ford, through his attorney, entered a formal plea of not guilty and Chief Pratt, briefly reciting what he knew of the case, and when the charges were made to him, he ordered Captain Dougherty to investigate. The charges were to the effect that Ford met a notorious woman on the street on the night of May 26th in the company of two men that some driver the men away he took upon himself the task of securing the woman's escort, that he attempted to "make a date" with her and that in order that this might not be difficult he offered to rent a room and buy beer for her. In answer to a question from Judge Howatt as to who was his informant the chief replied that it was Captain Dougherty.

A bevy of witnesses were then sworn, and Mrs. Polly Bayline, the woman in the case, was put on the stand. She said in substance that the night she met Ford she was in search of a wayward sister. She walked about the streets for a time with the sergeant and finally together they made their way to the Grand Opera house. She informed the officer, or rather admitted to him that she had once been a sporting woman and then he asked her if it were not true that she still engaged in the same business. She declared that she was not. The night was stormy one and she had Ford that one of the boys who had accompanied her on her rounds (one of those who had been driven away) had her umbrella and that she couldn't very well go home in the rain. There it was, according to her testimony, that Ford offered to get a room in town for her for the night. To this proposal she claims to have stated that she knew the janitress in the Singer block across the way and that she could easily stand her off for one. She then crossed the street, engaged the room and at Ford's request went back to him where he still stood under the portico of the Grand Opera house. On her return he proposed, she says, to buy beer for her and "make a date" with her. To the latter proposition she demurred on the ground that she had absolutely quit leading a shameless life and had no desire to resume it. But the officer, she insisted, was determined and that Saturday night at 11:30, before negotiations were declared closed there were signs of returning daylight and the officer told her she had better go away because if found standing on the steps of the Opera house she might be arrested. Then the parting took place and she went to her room in Mrs. Ford later sent her beer by Oat Nostrum, one of the young men who declares Ford drove him away from the woman earlier in the night. Witness said that she and Nostrum drank the beer and the latter confirmed the statement.

At the opera house she also talked to Ford concerning her sister and a colored man whom she charged with having ruined her. Here she was asked if she knew Attorney Gerald J. Jackson, to which question she was positively informed that she did not and that she had never seen him before. Asked as to whether it was not true that she had been offered money by a policeman to appear against Ford, she entered the most vigorous denial in general. When questioned by Judge Howatt as to whether Ford asked if he might go to her room with her when she went back to him on the opera house steps she replied that he did not, but supplemented by saying that he would see her in hell as a rule.

Nostrum was the next witness. He corroborated the witness' story as to being driven away, buying the beer at the instance of Ford and drinking it with the women. Judge Howatt asked him in cross-examination if he had not said to Dr. Beer that he intended to get even with Ford as soon as the Ford hearing was over, and that he had it in for the "big duffer." He said that he had probably stated that he would be content for telling what he knew. The witness then went on to relate how he had given the facts in the case to Sergeant Ballinger. He didn't understand that of now that he was making charges.

At this juncture a tempest was caused by the entrance of the conversation with Dr. Beer at the house of the witness. Captain Dougherty, who had entertained a decided silence throughout, thought it was time to open out and did so. He openly charged that Dr. Beer was a particular friend of Ford's and that he had been specially deputed to fix things up for that officer and if possible entirely suppress the facts.

Then counsel No. 2 was called by Judge Hogg declaring "that is just what I want to show, only the conversation will not let me." And there the matter was allowed to rest.

Sergeant Ballinger told what he knew of the case and the defense insisted its side of the case by attempting to prove from the records the number of arrests Ford had to his credit and the fines realized therefrom. Attorney Jackson asked that had Judge Howatt's question been affirmatively answered by the woman with reference to receiving pay from a policeman it would substantially represent the conversation he had with her. And in addition there's she had attempted to induce him to make a date for her and Ford at some remote point in the city.

Dr. Beer in his testimony stated that one of the young men in the case was a half brother of his and that he had asked Ford to send him home when he saw him on the streets late at night. Nostrum had told him that he was going away as soon as the case was over and that he proposed to get even with the "big duffer" before he went.

A number of other witnesses were sworn and among them were Ford who entered an absolute and sweeping denial to the charges preferred and when he left the stand the commission unanimously decided in his favor as indicated. Then on the suggestion of Judge Hogg and their own fine views on the case.

At the conclusion of the hearing Chief Pratt took occasion to say: "I want to say that I manner with Judge Hogg. If an officer could be deposed on such evidences as this there isn't a man on the force from the chief down, who could hold his position a week." Ford was back at his post today.

MISCELLANEOUS MATTERS.

There was not even a whisper concerning the alleged numerous charges said to have been drawn up by dissatisfied firemen against Chief Dwyer. The reason is given that there was not time as the hour was very late when the regular business was disposed of.

The payroll and fire and police department accounts for May were passed upon and referred to the City Council. Charges were preferred, formally, by J. J. Sears, against Patrolman Talbot for the shooting of his horse through the house, at Liberty Park recently. The matter was laid over until the next meeting.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES OF MILK.

Do You Eat Milk? If You Do, You Are Interested in Every Word of This Article.

The importance of everybody using absolutely pure milk cannot be questioned, and the question of how and where to obtain the pure article is a question of vital importance to the health of every one. The Jersey Farm Dairy of this city is taking the lead in methods, and propose to do their part, at least, in the matter of furnishing the best to be had to dairy products. This enterprising firm has inaugurated the glass jar system of delivery, by which all milk and cream is delivered to the customer in air-tight, absolutely clean glass jars. Milk is put up at the dairy, and sealed and so delivered to customers, has the following advantages: First, it is more cleanly, not being subjected to the odors and contamination of city air, to the drinking dust or dirt, to drip from the reins of the hands of the driver. Second, its quality may be seen at a glance, the cream at the top, the color of the milk, and this is equivalent to a guarantee that the cream could be sheared and the milk pure, the best method of ascertaining at a glance from the bottom of the jar. Third, it will keep sweet longer, because in transportation there is no churning, and in hot weather the jars are kept on ice until delivered. Fourth, its flavor is better; the air has no chance to act upon it, and it is absolutely free from the "metallic" flavor often imparted in milk transported in tin.

Our cows are all fed on the best of sweet hay, oil cake and good hay, and the milk is guaranteed to be strictly first class in every respect. Why use milk from cows fed on slop and swill when the kitchen, which such milk is sold, is selling on the best at the same price and delivered as above described? P. O. box 951.
