Junction City Items.

Fuller, alias Morian, and Stringham, residents at the county jail, who are under arrest charged with stealing cattle, made an unsuccessful attempt yesterday to escape by digging out under the foundation.

Again the police have made a raid on the keno gamblers which infest our town. Three were given a chance yesterday to leave town while others were fined.

Fifteen thousand dollars will be expended in making an addition to the county court house. Bids have been opened but not awarded.

John Q. Critchlow, William J. Reby and William Taylor have passed successful examination of appointments as clerks and carrier for the postal service.

The contract for Ogden city light has been let to the Salt Lake & Ogden Electric Light Co.

PROVO.

PROVO, UTAH, - JULY 16, 1895.

Hunting For a Mythical Bad Man.

Last evening about 9 o'clock Herman Conrad, who lives some two miles north of the city, came down and reported to the officers that a strange man had tried to kill his wife and daughter and had knocked Conrad down and beaten him badly, when he came to their relief, and then made his escape. Two officers went with Conrad to his place for the purpose of finding the desperate man, if possible, and other officers watched the outgoing trains. When the officers arrived at the Conrad home, none of the folks were at home, but they were found visiting at the neighbors. The explanation they gave of the alleged assault was somewhat different from Conrad's, and to the effect that during the day Conrad had started after a boy who was working for the family, with a hammer, threatening to brain him. The daughter had then taken hold of her father for the purpose of restraining him till he cooled down. He broke away, and when he reached the boy, he, in self-defense, knocked Conrad down with a club. That was all there was of the mysterious and vicious assault case. Conrad is peculiar at times and his family are contemplating the advisability of having him brought before the probate judge for an examination as to his sanity.

The Jordan Dam Case.

Yesterday afternoon was spent in hearing arguments for and against receiving evidence in the case of Salt Lake City et al vs J. H. Callander et al, under the complaints filed by the claimants for damages from overflow of Salt Lake county lands, attorneys for plaintiffs claiming that the complaints had not been filed as provided in the stipulations. This morning the board of referees overruled the objection and the evidence will be heard. This is said to take several weeks, as there are a great many claims. The evidence in regard to damages will first be taken in each case and plaintiffs will then introduce their evidence in opposition. This course was agreed upon in order to prevent the necessity for having probably a hundred witnesses in attendance for so long a time. Before plaintiffs introduce their evidence they will have a survey made of the lake, showing high water level in order to aid the board of referees in arriving at a conclusion as to how much land has been overflowed, above the high water level—the point to which plaintiffs were permitted to raise the water under the contract with the Utah county land owners. Judge Sutherland, Judge Hoge and F. S. Richards are representing the plaintiffs, and David Evans, H. G. Edwards, Chas. De Meloy and J. W. Kenyon the defendants.

Notes.

The strip of country in the mountains east of Provo, relieved to contain coal, has been located from Provo river to Kamas, between Provo and Springville, and numerous parties are developing their claims, all hoping that the black stuff will develop into a marketable quality of coal.

At the meeting of the city council, held last evening, it was decided to appeal the case of J. W. Scott et al vs Provo city to the Supreme court. This is the case in which plaintiffs were awarded $1,000 damages by reason of injuries sustained by Mr. Scott through stepping in a defective culvert last winter.

Wm. March, who was sentenced to pay a fine of $200 by Judge King, in the First district court, and to be imprisoned in the county jail four months for conducting a gambling house in this city has paid his fine and received a pardon so to the imprisonment part of the sentence.

W. O. Norrell, for a long time employed with the marshal's office as a deputy, has secured a position with the Iron Mining company of Detroit mining district.

An effort will be made to have a return game between the Park City base ball club and the Provo club played here on the Twenty-fourth.

The Republican ladies of Utah county will hold a convention in this city next Thursday for the purpose of effecting a county organization.

Charlie Andersen, aged 18, and May Adams, aged 22, both of American Fork, have received a marriage license.

George C. Lambert is in the city representing the Lambert Paper Co., of Salt Lake City.

CHURNING CREAM COLD.

A Low Temperature Gives More and Better Butter.

H. B. Gurler is an enthusiastic advocate of churning cream at a low temperature. He believes that 50 degrees is about right. For this temperature it is usually necessary to cool the cream. He himself had devised a cooler which accomplishes the purpose much quicker than the cooling vat, with water surrounding the cream, does. Below is a picture of the invention.

The cooler consists of a row of pipes like a single room heat radiator. Mr. Gurler describes it in his book on dairying, from which our illustration is copied. The picture shows the cold radiator suspended in air above the cream vat. When in use, it is put down into the cream and worked up and down by machinery. At the same time cold water runs through the pipes constantly, so that it is constantly changed. In this way the cooling is very quickly effected. Mr. Gurler has not patented his device, so that anybody can use it. It must be said that the generosity in this respect of a number of gentlemen who have given us useful dairy inventions is almost unprecedented in our money grabbing age.

CIRCULATING COOLER.

The above arrangement will cool a vat of cream from 70 degrees down to within 3 degrees of the temperature of the water in 15 minutes. It is best to cool the cream a few degrees lower than you wish to churn, for the fat globules do not harden quite as fast as the cream cools. Mr. Gurler's experience shows that more and firmer butter is got out of the cream at 50 degrees than at a warmer temperature. The low temperature requires rich cream, and the temperature of the churning room should be as nearly as possible that of the cooled cream in the churn. Mr. Gurler says also that the best temperature at which to hold cream while it is ripening ready for churning is 55 to 58 degrees. He uses the Boyd starter. "Ripen cream that is off flavor at a low temperature and agitate and aerate it as much as possible during the ripening process."

Making Dovetailed Hives.

A new kink in putting together dovetailed hives is reported in Gleanings in Bee Culture. A piece of tin bent at eight angles long enough and wide enough to cover the ends of the dovetails is securely nailed to the corners of the hive. There was no chance for saw and rule to get in their warping effects.
