In Unpleasant Close Contact With a Huge Mountain Lion.

MONTANA FARMERS INFECUNIOUS.

The Desperate Act of a Jealous Husband.—Bold Robbery at an Idaho Gambling-house, Etc.

Stewart Menzies, representing a French syndicate, and the owner of the Clear Creek ranch, Merced county, is at Fresno, Cal., negotiating with the Fresno Canal and Irrigation company for 1000 inch of water to be delivered some forty miles to the above ranch at a consideration reported to be $200,000 or $300,000. Considerable vexation is expressed by a number of Fresno citizens who fear the deal will be consummated.

On Monday the dwelling house, outhouses and about forty tons of hay belonging to David Bills of Mill wind were destroyed by fire. The contents of the house, with the exceptions of a sewing machine and a few other things, were also destroyed by the flames. Mr. Bills and wife were at Salt Lake City, and the children, a son and daughter, were taking care of the place. It is not known how the fire started.—Herald Express.

Another batch of forty or fifty "bohos" arrived in Ashland, Oregon, on a freight train from the north on Monday evening. This gang attempted to take possession of the dry goods on the overland train at Grant's pass that morning but were beaten off by the trainmen with clubs and revolvers after some: in window lights in the car had been broken. The freight train laye in Ashland over night before going south, and the town is infested with "bohos" each night, though, aside from the Chinese outrage last Wednesday night, no particular depredations have been committed.

The land department of the Great Northern finds that it is impossible the present season to make collections from the farmers, towns in the Havre, Montana, Independent. The difficulty lies in the low price of the grain product. With wheat at fifty cents a bushel the producer cannot find money to pay bills. The indemnity lands of the Great Northern are pretty well settled and cultivated, and under more favorable conditions would prove a goodly source of revenue to the road, but the corporation has decided to be exceedingly to carry the farmers over another year, as it is not the policy of the company to visit available hardships upon any one.

A bold robbery was perpetrated at midnight on Monday in Dickey & Beckner's gambling-house at Cœur d'Alene, Idaho. The game has just closed for the night when the door opened and three masked men sprang in, covering the crowd with a Winchester and two six-shooters and ordering "hands on, quick." The under covered Beckner with his revolver and stepped to the faro table. Jerking up a sack the thrower and took out $500 in silver with his left hand. He crossed to another faro table and took out $200; shoved it into his pocket and all three backed out of the room. As the border crossed the threshold he said, "The first man that follows us will get his hide full of lead," and slammed the door. A posse of men started to ranch seven miles west of town, and on searching the premises found Edward Harvey, a man who has been loafing around town several days. He was arrested and brought to town, but had none of the missing money. He protests his innocence. Jack Dillon an ex-convict, is suspected as being one of the men. It is believed that two of the men have started to Spokane on foot, following the railroad track. A dozen men have started in pursuit, all well armed and determined. The robbers are well armed and are not expected to surrender without a fight.

Lewis Sweat, of Center ward, while hunting deer in the mountains near the head of Cedar creek, says the Wasatch River, came across a track in the snow which he at first took to be that of a bear. He took up the trail, and had not followed it far when he came to the conclusion that he was tracking a mountain lion instead of a bear, and that the lion was tracking him as well, for he had made a complete circle and was back on the trail again, which he saw the lion had made cut a few moments before. While walking as warily as possible, Mr. Sweat stopped to look around a little, for fear that the cunning beast might be lying in wait for him. His imaginations were only too true, for just a few steps ahead, on the limb of a large pine tree, and directly over the trail, he spied Mr. Lion, ready to pounce down upon him when he came along underneath. Mr. Sweat drew from his belt a cartridge, in case the one he was about to fire from his gun should not prove fatal, when he took a good aim and fired, the ball striking the terror of mankind directly between the eyes, killing him instantly. The lion proved to be a monster in size. He measured 8 feet from tip to tip, weighed 150 pounds, had a forearm that measured 17½ inches around, and his tushes and canines each measured 2½ inches in length. We consider Mr. Sweat has a very narrow escape from a struggle with the brute whose life he so suddenly put to an end.

W. E. Wrisley on Tuesday afternoon visited the cottage occupied by his wife, Estella Wrisley, at Riverside, Cal., and killed her in a most horrible manner, crushing in her left temple an iron weight and then repeatedly driving a dirk into her neck and breast, cutting the arteries and windpipe. The murderer left the knife driven into the woman's body up the hill, and going to the Park hotel close by, where he had a razor, cut off the whole top of his head with a razor, the muscle of which he is supposed to have placed in his mouth when he died. Wrisley, who was about 31 years old, married his wife a year or two ago. She was a San Francisco girl, and 23 years old at the time of her death. The marriage was brought about through an advertisement and resulted most unhappily for both. Disputes were frequent and charges of infidelity common. Liquor and morphine also played an important part in their domestic discord. Some time ago they separated, and recently the house in which Wrisley was living was burned under circumstances which indicated arson. A warrant was issued for Wrisley, but he fled. It was said that he fired the house to destroy the clothing there belonging to his wife. A week or so ago Wrisley appeared in Riverside and was promptly arrested for arson. Which taken before the court, however, it was learned that the case had been dismissed. Wrisley then, disclosed that he had paid to C. A. Hall, the owner of the house, $75 to square the case. This story caused the district Attorney Anderson to have Hall arrested on the charge of embezzling a money, the crime Wrisley to be a witness in the charge of arson. Wrisley was released on a cash bail of $500 last Friday, and immediately started to Kansas in search of his wife, intending, he said, to return to where she was living in no any a man safety. Hall continued two policemen, and while they stood guard he went in the door and secured some evidence of what he suspected. The police allowed Mrs. Wrisley's father to go in place, but she was compelled to appear in court Saturday and was fined $25 for unusually profane. The fine, however, was remitted upon the condition that she leave town, which she was prepared to do when state by her husband. Wrisley left a long letter addressed to the public, of which the following is an extract: "The fact of the whole matter is I have become the object of attention in each solicitude. It is not pleasant to know that my name has been mixed in a disgraceful manner. The fact of the matter is the one in whom I have placed my trust has proven false and untrue. She is no longer worth a cent to me, but I love her still, and it is for her sake that I now lay down my life. With all her life is on earth the living. What is life have I to live for? Walk all the rest. I you see living to enjoy yourselves I am left alone to face the music as best I can, heartless world. You will call me 'fool,' but what of that? All only that will not disturb me in my rest. I I am such, then I am not responsible for my actions." Before the morning Wrisley is said to have been a steady, hard-working man. He was a foreman by occupation, and was in comfortable circumstances. Since his marriage he had become very dissipated, and during the past week had been acting like a crazy man.
