NOTICE OF SPECIAL STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING OF THE PEOPLE'S EQUITABLE CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT A special meeting of the stockholders of the People's Equitable Co-operative Association will be held on the premises of said association, in Salt Lake City, Utah, on Wednesday, the 5th day of December A. D. 1894, at 7 o'clock p. m. of said day, at said company's store, being numbered seven (7) and four (4) south, and Temple street, Salt Lake City, Utah, for the purpose of changing Article V of the articles of incorporation of said People's Equitable Co-operative Association which now reads as follows: "The board of directors shall consist of thirteen members in which the corporate powers shall be exercised. The officers of secretary and treasurer may be held by the same person, but no one person shall hold the office of president and secretary, or president and treasurer, or president and vice president at the same time. The officers of president and vice president of the board of directors shall be another president and vice president of the corporation. The offices of secretary and treasurer may be held by the same person, but neither secretary nor treasurer shall hold the office of director."

The proposed amendment to Article V of said Articles of Incorporation shall read as follows: "The board of directors shall consist of five members in which the corporate powers shall be exercised. The officers of president and vice president of the board of directors shall be another president and vice president of the corporation. The offices of secretary and treasurer may be held by the same person, but neither secretary nor treasurer shall hold the office of director."

The proposed amendment to Article III of said Articles of Incorporation, to be added to the "implied rights of Utah Territory of the year 1884, and of article VI of articles of said incorporation.

Dated this 8th day of November, 1894.

GEORGE H. VANCOTT,
President of the People's Equitable Co-operative Association.

DESERET EVENING NEWS.

MID SHOT AND SHELL

Fort Douglas Surrendered to the Enemy After Hard Fighting.

BATTLE WITNESSED BY THOUSANDS

A Splendid Exhibition of Modern Warfare and the Knowledge of Military Science.

The battle is over, the smoke has cleared away and Fort Douglas is in the hands of the "enemy." But the defense of the Fort was a splendid one and the surrender graceful, dignified and manly. All who heard and saw the engagement will hear the statement out.

It was after the NEWS had gone to press last evening before the result of the battle was known or before the particulars were obtainable. At a few minutes past 7 o'clock hostilities commenced. Captain Richards was in command of the defense and Captain Palmer led the attacking force, consisting of six companies of infantry, one battery of artillery and one platoon of cavalry from Troop C, National Guard of Utah, who acted as patrolmen in reporting the movements of the enemy's scouts and skirmishers. In detail the attacking force was made up as follows: Company A, Lieutenant Newins; B, Lieutenant Preston; D, Captain Morrison, Lieutenants Steadman and Gardner; E, Captain McFarland, Lieutenant Lorey; F, Captain Woolley, Lieutenant G. Woodward; G, Lieutenant Seeley; battery A, Utah National Guards, Captain Iddins, Lieutenant West; troop C, Utah National Guard, Lieutenant Elias A. Smith. Captain Palmer's aides were Lieutenants Tyler and George.

Captain Richards's command was made up as follows: Company C, Captain Allen, Lieutenant Palmer, and H, Captain Whitall and Lieutenant Castle, sixteenth infantry; A, Captain Gow, Lieutenant Thompson; B, Captain Loud, Lieutenant Jensen, and C, Captain Sayers, Lieutenant Alford, N. G. U.; a battery consisting of two of the Gatling rifles of the post, commanded by Lieutenant Cowles, and troop C, N. G. U., Captain John Q. Cannon. Captain Richards's aides were Lieutenants Cowles and Wright, while Lieutenant Lassier had the militia infantry under his direct supervision.

It is estimated that there were one less than from ten to twelve thousand interested spectators in civilian dress on and above the reservation and when the heavy and galvanizing gun battery of Captain Palmer's men were seen coming over the brow of the hill, just above the city, and when they were met by a volley from Captain Richards's entrenchments and there was rapid running, riding and movements in all directions, a shout went up from the multitude that fairly covered the foothills. The major portion of this great outpouring of citizens watched and admired the fray from commencement to close and only one element was in any way dissatisfied and that was the one who had allowed its feelings to be wrought up to that pitch that required blood and carnage to satisfy.

Captain Palmer's men returned the fire that had been opened on them and were met by another volley at musketry which for a moment caused them to halt and being kept up they sought cover and changing position. Three times went on with the attacking forces were repulsed. But they were brave soldiers and had for their commander a leader well up in the art of war and since the second assault was made. The militia fairly covered with volleys of musketry and rending cannon, thus obscured the vision and the reservation looked like one great and tremendously real battle field. Captain Richards's men were scattered on the right and left flanks simultaneously. They fell back a little but soon the enemy was repulsed again.

The final assault was a repeated piece of military work and showed a knowledge of scientific warfare that evoked spontaneous admiration and commendation from General Pulsifer, General Ottinger, Governor West, General Lew Wallace and others who witnessed it. Even the retreat of Captain Richards's men, driven back by fire, fighting as they made it, was praised to the utmost. But said the boys, "If only our guns had been loaded with bullets as well as powder, we would have kept them back for ever. Ten times we number would not have been able to capture the fort." But they did capture it and marched into the parade grounds to martial music, with colors flying and spirits at the highest pitch, while the citizens gave generously away to the conquering heroes who had done their work so well.

BATTERY A'S BALL.

Battery A's ball at the Continental Market hall last night was a very pleasant and successful social affair. National colors, patriotic pieces and other decorations gave the place a most pleasing appearance. On either side of the musicians' stand was an army tent and at the entrance of each stood a uniformed sentry near a stack of muskets gracefully grouped together. At 9:15 the concert was blown and a moment later the grand military march was in progress. Governor West and Mrs. Lieutenant Palmer led off followed by Colonel Tanner, Colonel Adams, General Ottinger, Captain Cowles, Lieutenant Palmer, Captain Gow and ladies, members of the various committees and of Battery A.

Died From his Injuries.

O. E. Porter, one of the unfortunate painters who met with serious injuries at Banker McCornick's residence yesterday morning, as detailed in the NEWS, died last evening. His young wife was at his side when he died and was overwhelmed with grief at the calamity that has befallen her. Cousin, the deceased's fellow workman, is still at the hospital. Both of his ankles are broken. His body is also badly bruised.

A "Mormon" Meeting.

The following is taken from the Pulaski, published at Lynchburg, Tenn., the date being Nov 9th:

A large congregation was met to hear the Mormon Elders E. S. Larsen and D. C. Rossiter, who held services at the courthouse Sunday afternoon. This, we believe, was the first Mormon services ever held here and curiosity attracted a large crowd.

Residence Burglarized.

Observant and clever housebreakers effected an entrance into the residence of Captain Egan, No. 144 south Sixth East street, yesterday afternoon while the family were witnessing the exam battle at Fort Douglas. The premises were ransacked from basement to garret. Jewelry and other valuables worth several hundred dollars were stolen.

BEAUTIFUL MONUMENT.

Memorial to a Missionary who Died in the Field.

Many readers of the NEWS will remember the death of Elder Walter H. Barton, of Kaysville, while on a mission to the South. His remains were brought home, and his family have had made a beautiful monument to be placed at his grave. The memorial stone is in the form of an altar, draped, and surmounted by an open book. On one page is the inscription: "Whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the Gospel's, the same shall save it. Mark viii. 35." On the front of the altar is a scroll bearing the inscription: "Walter H., son of John and Sarah Barton, born April 18, 1868, died February 18, 1894." On the left side of the stone is the following: "Died near Meridian City, Miss., while tracting as a missionary of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints."

The monument was designed and carved by Walters brothers, marble workers, of this city, and is a handsome piece of work. It is of a white block of marble, and in design, workmanship and artistic effect is very creditable. It was removed from the premises of the firm named and taken to Kaysville lately.

A FRIEND OF UTAH'S DIXIE

Feelingly Shows How that Section is Made to Suffer.

Poor Transportation Facilities and Little Encouragement, Though Others Less Deserving Have Both

PAROWAN, Utah,
November 18, 1894.

Editor Deseret News.

As southern Utah has conditions and peculiarities not generally known nearer our common parental center, where the NEWS sends forth its semi-weekly bunches of information, I pen you a few lines by way of information—new to some—while only a reminder to others.

Iron county has been a great stock country, subsequently an extensive sheep range. Thousands of dollars have been derived from the sales of cattle, fat sheep and wool. Now, however, a change has taken place, and is gradually taking place, in that the grasses are gone, the roots are dead, and the animals that cannot live upon sage, rabbit brush or greasewood, stand a very poor chance indeed; only poor in summer but dead for the winter. The recovery and inevitable change of converting the public lands into improved and private property seems tolerably to lay hold of the public mind, owing to the fallacious impression that asking for man or beast can be raised without irrigation. Many sections of land have been "taken up" and title obtained from the government, but still the disappointed and unfeigned under this unfortunate lack of faith and resolution.

Bordering upon this county, and down on bottom and mayon is the wonderful Dixie, of Washington county, with its unique combination of climate, force, sand, precipitous mountains, and isolated spots of unmeasurable fertility, improved and unimproved. In St. George temple, semi-tropical vegetation, beautiful flowers, extensive orchards and vineyards, and within the vast expanse of labor that has been expended upon roads, buildings, rock fences and horticulture seem to almost bewilder the mind in contemplation of the change from one county to another. Yet its section from railroad communication causes it to be almost unappreciated by its sister counties and possibly by the whole Territory. Its cattlemen and unemployed tracts are without a market or a purchaser, only as their owner, not possessing a good grain farm, is compelled to hitch up his (for them) hungry and poor teams and loading up his fruits, glean his way through the sand and over and between the rocks to the settlements lying north and northwest, where he can exchange for grain and produce with which to load back to return. The Dixiette is thus (dusty and hungry as the sand and heat, wind and storm may combine against him), classed as a poor peddler who has to get out of his shell for bread. Traveling from 40 to 100 miles to make his advantages, he regrets not carrying company for special of making trains and carrying them upon springs, assist the producer in the disposal. And yet with suitable lines of carrying transportation to society in the Rocky Mountains has greater prospects of any section for cause of intrinsic value of improved land, methusaleh lying north and northeast, as before said, 40 to 100 miles away, long distance from main road, make the trade a most painful task to both parties to an exchange. One hundred miles of the rough, rocky, sandy, wagon travel one is off from railroad communication with Salt Lake City and the north, whether it costs all the money it can get for imported supplies, and the borrows from necessity its sole patronage, while California, which pays little or nothing from Salt Lake City and central Utah, supplies daily and receives the money for which they borrow to patronage in return, but seem, as report, to try to engage the institutions of Utah, whereas its inhabitants are trying to help themselves; yet supplies daily and gets commercial advantage for the very things produced within our own borders and almost by our own hands.

Washington county—planted and keenly appreciated by our great leaders and early forefathers—is now left out in the cold of isolation, with, as far as known, no effort or sympathy to achieve her financial redemption. But as self-help is the best, helpful measures should begin at home, and surely Salt Lake City and northern Utah would speedily see the point of increasing their own patronage by extending a helping hand to a struggling community possessing valuable and desirable fruits, vegetables and delicacies which are produced nowhere else within our borders. With the advent of prosperity, let us hope that a suitable effort will be made to supply the people of Utah who have been gathered from many nations under a common impulse of common redemption, with the delicate productions of this warm climate, produced by their own brethren in faith, fellow citizens of state, and very often blood relatives.

More might be said inductive of protection and amendment to the roads and conveyance of present available, but for one writing—enough.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

The Great Water Wheels at Niagara.

The water which is not all of the same size. Time employed in the transmission of power by the machinery of the power mill were, when they were put in, the largest ever made. They were capable of generating as much as 1,500 horsepower each. But they are mere pigmies in comparison with those which are to supply power to the great dynamos. Each of these has been built with the purpose of developing as much as 5,000 horsepower, which is about the power required to drive an ordinary ocean steamship from 12 to 14 knots an hour. There are to be three of these monstrous turbines, and their handmate, the dynamos, are proportionately colossal in their capacity to generate electricity.—McClure's Magazine.

The Hamiltons.

Women have had a strange influence in the affairs of the Hamilton family. Old Alexander got in numerous scrapes on account of the fair sex, and poor Robert Roy Hamilton was driven to a tragic death by his association with a scheming woman. Now Schuyler Hamilton, a brother of Robert Roy and a big swell at Newport, is being sued for divorce by his wife.

Geo. W. Jenkins, editor of the Santa Maria Times, Cal., in speaking of the various ailments of children says: "When my children have croup there is only one patent medicine that I ever use, and that is Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It possesses some medical properties that relieve the little sufferers immediately. It is, in my opinion, the best cough medicine in the market." If this remedy is freely given as soon as the croupy cough appears it will prevent the attack. It is also a valuable remedy for whooping cough. There is no danger in giving it to children, as it contains nothing injurious.
