

BUSINESS IS NOW RECOVERING

Manufactured Goods Are Rising in Price.

WOOL AND WOOLEN GOODS.

Mild Weather and Liquidation of Embarrassed Concerns Mitigate Against Them.

New York, Nov. 23.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade tomorrow will say:

With reasonable promptness business is recovering both activity and tone, and fortunately with the sharp rise in general prices which was seen in the spring, and which was followed by a sudden and serious transition to a more natural range. Manufactured goods are rising in response to a better demand from distributing sources, helped at the end of the week by the more seasonable weather. Business is not yet what it was on the top of the wave of industrial prosperity, but this working force is fast increasing. The ordinary measures of business reflect operations at all points, but the textile markets are at the point of least response to the improved undertone of trade.

Recital of conditions in the iron and steel market has become a monotonous repetition. Each week there is the same record of activity so generally distributed that everything from the raw material to the finished product enjoys a share. There is also the same freedom from speculative accumulation in anticipation of fancy prices that has been for weeks the chief encouraging feature. Railroad companies compete for rolling stock. Export orders in some lines are filled with difficulty, owing to the unusual domestic demand for all forms of iron and steel products, but in no quarter is there any unreasonable inflation of prices, such as was seen during the meteoric ascent last year. In a few descriptions prices on export orders are shaded to hold the business.

Two factors militate strongly against activity and strength in wool and woolen goods. Mild weather has been the chief adverse influence, reducing sales far below a normal volume in this vicinity, while liquidation of embarrassed concerns threatens to throw a considerable quantity on the market at forced sales. In the light of these disquieting features it is not surprising that sales of wool at the three chief eastern markets declined to $3,541,231 pounds, against $3,550,000 pounds in the week preceding, and $3,870,292 pounds a year ago. Hides continue to rise, regardless of the largest arrivals of cattle in Chicago in many years.

Failures for the week were 238 in the United States, against 191 last year, and 29 in Canada, against 22 last year.

Bank Clearings.

Suffering Women

Don't Despair! This is our message to weak women. Here is assurance of help from one who has suffered and found relief.

"I am a firm believer in the efficacy of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, for they cured me after several doctors had told me that nothing but an operation would save my life. For nearly 30 years I suffered from female weakness which was aggravated by kidney trouble. I could stand but a few minutes at a time and at intervals would be confined to my bed for days.

"For about ten years I doctored continually and employed several physicians. I continued to grow worse and finally the doctor told me that my only hope was in an operation. I would not submit to this. Seeing Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People advertised in the papers I decided to try them. That was four years ago. I thought they helped me and I took, in all, six boxes of the pills. They are the best medicine I ever found. No one who sees me now would believe that I had suffered so much. I do not find it necessary to take the pills now and am able to do my own housework. I take pleasure in recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all who are in need of a good medicine."

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 4th day of February, 1900.
[SEAL]
T. R. EVANS, Notary Public.

INTER-COLLEGIATE FOOTBALL TODAY

Yale and Harvard of the Big Four on the Gridiron.

OVER 20,000 TICKETS SOLD

The Immense Crowd is Made Up Principally of Yale and Harvard One Time Students.

New York, Nov. 24.—For the first time in several years two colleges of the "Big Four" will meet today for the undisputed championship in the inter-collegiate football. Harvard, the victor over Pennsylvania, and Yale, fresh from their crushing defeat of Princeton, will line up against each other on Yale field, at New Haven. Every seat of the 30,000 and odd surrounding the Yale field was sold nearly two weeks ago to the students and graduates of both universities. Half as many more were in demand by the alumni. Between the partisans of Harvard and Yale those seats have been equally divided, so that a flare of crimson will back one side of the field and a blur of blue the other.

Except for a very few masculine and many feminine friends of the "Old Grads" and students, the immense audience will be one made up of those who call one of the two contending colleges "Alma Mater."

The intensity of interest with which such an audience would watch the struggle under ordinary circumstances can easily be imagined, but the special phases of this afternoon's contest may not be generally appreciated. Since athletic relations between Harvard and Yale were resumed in 1897 three games have been played. The first resulted in a score of nothing to nothing, although the crimson had been picked as an easy victor. Harvard, under the captaincy of "Ben" Dibble, won the 1898 game by a score of 17 to 9. Last year's game was again a tie, neither scoring. With two nothing to nothing games and one defeat to avenge, Yale has all along proclaimed today's game as the most important contest of the season, and Yale men have all the fall been cheered by the wonderful collection of giant football players that this year wear the blue.

Harvard, on the other hand, began the season with less promise than usual, developed a splendid team, and now comes to the all-important game of victory, but not over confident. Outside of the students of the two colleges themselves, Yale is the undoubted favorite. This belief is due probably to two things, namely, the widely heralded stature and weight of the Yale players and the blues' impressive victory over Princeton. Yale has a team of giants who know most thoroughly how to play football, but as the students of New Haven point out, their team has not yet been brought to the crucial test. Princeton's eleven was too weak for great significance to be given to Yale's easy victory last Saturday, and it remains yet to be seen whether the slowness inherent in a team of giants has been sufficiently mitigated.

Of the real strength of Harvard team perhaps even less is known. The crimson is outwitted by the blue, but the discrepancy is not great. Harvard, too, has a team of giants, but somewhat smaller giants than those at Yale. The most apparent advantage that Yale has over Harvard lies in the greater experience of the blue line in tackling, and the more effective distribution of weight. The crimson's apparent advantage lies in her star back field. Just after the Harvard-Pennsylvania game, Yale's star back, Harry Kipp, was as one man declaring that Harvard's speed was more than enough to overcome Yale's advantages of greater weight and experience in the line. Since that time, however, Yale team has gained in dash, while Harvard's improvement is uncertain.

From the crimson press corps have come discouraging reports, but at the same time the most knowing regard this apparent slump as merely an intentional start-up in the work given the "Varsity stars so that none will go into today's game overtrained.

The contest will depend chiefly upon today's work. If Harvard's line works with the lightning-like rapidity shown in the Pennsylvania game and if it is backed up by the line behind the line, the crimson ought to stop Yale's "Tackle and back" plays as it did Pennsylvania's "guards back" formations, namely, by hitting and smothering the play in under way.

On the offensive, Harvard's agile back field ought to score ten, for Yale's defense is comparatively untied. On the other hand, if Yale can add the regularity to her powerful formations, she will win, and that by a large score. There is now absolutely no telling which team has gained the balance of momentum. In a word, the game is one of the most uncertain, therefore, is in anticipation one of the most interesting games. The probable line up of the two teams and the weight of the players follows:

FAT AND LEAN

That is, babies: fat, they are happy and safe; lean, they are neither happy nor safe.

Apart from being entirely healthy or not quite well, a fat one has much reserve of vital strength to resist any sudden attack, while the lean one has little or no reserve.

The way to be fat and well is Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil. A little: only a little. Not any, if healthy and plump already; "let well enough alone."

We'll send you a little to try if you like.

Tod Sloan Talks.

New York, Nov. 24.—"Tod" Sloan, the jockey, who had just returned from England talked quite freely last night. He said in the course of an interview: "I do not think Lord Durham is opposed to Americans as a nation nor to any particular jockey or trainer. I agree entirely with what Mr. Corrigan said, and I think those have caused the whole trouble. This is true of one fellow in particular who tried to pass himself as me, and another time called himself 'Skeets' Martin, and when that was found out against him, he palmed himself off as my brother. Of course, he deceived many persons and that began to give us a bad name. If people would let me alone I would have no trouble with anybody. It is those fellows that go across from here to bet on our mounts who have caused us to be much talked about."

"What about your engagement to ride for the Prince of Wales?" "Well, there never was a contract, so I never was really retained. Had it been for all this talk, however, there is no doubt I would have been. I do not anticipate the least trouble in getting a license to ride in England or anywhere else. I have been in no trouble. I do not believe how I manage anybody's stables."
