EDITORIAL NOTES.

The demand that woman telegraphers should work with men in the same vocation shall have equal pay, is founded on simple justice.

Perseverance can sometimes equal genius in its results. "There are only two creatures," says the eastern proverb, "which can surmount the pyramids—the eagle and the snail."

All the teeth of circular saws should not be filed from the same side, particularly if each alternate tooth is bent for the set, but file one half the teeth from each side of the saw.

The English are said to be preparing for a revolution when the Prince of Wales becomes king. They tell about it so that the Prince of Wales can prepare for a revolution, too. That's fair.

The daughter of an earl started dancing with the Prince of Wales, and openly refused to go, because he was holding her too closely, and otherwise misbehaving himself, in a large hall room. She left him in the middle of the floor, and asked an acquaintance to take her to her mother. She did exactly right.

Prof. Treadwell found that a half grown American robin in confinement ate in one day sixty-eight worms, weighing together once and a half as much as the bird himself, and another had previously starved on a daily allowance of eight or ten worms or about twenty per cent of his own weight.

The Queen of Madagascar deserves the plaudits and eulogiums of the woman suffrage people throughout the world. She had set her face forbiddingly against the manufacture or sale of liquor in her kingdom, and as the regular police proved unreliable in the enforcement of the law, she organized a department of policemen to see that the decree was carried out to the letter.

The wheat crop of 1883, according to most recent estimates, is to be 445,000,000 bushels, a decrease of nearly 61,000,000 bushels, as compared with last year, though the surplus of 1882 is still undeposited, and therefore can be included in all commercial calculations to be based upon the crop supply. Moreover, the farmers of the west are hugging to themselves the hope that the yield of corn will compensate for all deficiencies of wheat.

A yachtsman who was at a small country town in New England invited a large party to take a sail with him. He wrote a dispatch to his wife: "Going for a trip along the coast. Have invited all the oldest and ugliest men in town." He was amazed next day at the small attendance. His wife explained it on his return. A lady friend of his wrote her that the lady operator at the telegraph office told everyone the contents of the dispatch.

Bishop A. Cleveland Cox has written again about dreams, citing his own and others' curious experiences with half-waking visions, and concluding his article as follows: "My conclusion is that there is much of the preternatural in the realm of mind and of matter too; much that implies variations from law and a law of variations. These variations are as such intimate, if they do not demonstrate, that the mechanism of the universe does not run itself. There is engineering somewhere, and an engineer who makes his hand felt, though invisibly."

It has been taught in the text books that there is no tide in the great lakes which form so much of the boundary line between the United States and Canada, but recent accurate observations go to show that there is a slight tide. A very interesting scientific question is thus settled.

The Eastern marriage endowment associations are meeting the same fate that befell the Pennsylvania graveyard life insurance swindling societies. In most of the cases at the East, these colleges have turned out to be arrant frauds. Now and then one honestly conducted one has been found, but in most cases they are the means used by rascals to attain infamous ends.

The North American Review for August opens with a spirited discussion on the subject of "Moral Instruction in the Public Schools." An exposition follows on the tricks and frauds of speculation in grain. "Woman in Politics," is a discussion of certain facts of nervous organization which in the opinion of the reviewer is unfitted for participation in public affairs. A review of "Henry George's Social Failures," the evils resulting from "Crude Methods of Legislation," "The Unsanitary Homes of the Rich," and a joint discussion of "Science and Prayer," are the other chief articles. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York, and for sale here by J. S. Dwyer.

Many people regret the fact that the treasures of foreign literature are inaccessible to them because they have not mastered foreign languages sufficiently to be able to read in the original. To such people The Modern Age particularly recommends itself as its able translations are opening up rich stores of fact and fiction which have hitherto lain unexplored by the great mass of American readers. The August number contains translations from French, Italian, German and Russian authors, besides the program of the English monthlies, and editorial comment on many interesting subjects. All this is presented in attractive form, and at the low price of $1.50 per year. The Modern Age Publishing Co., New York City.

THE TRUTH IS SPREADING.

This Montreal, Canada, Witness, has recently contained some correspondence discussing the subject of "baptismal regeneration," for "baptism," and the orthodox views are put forth with a great deal of blindness to plain Scriptural instructions, one writer laying down as a principle the notion that "We must be born of the spirit before baptism can have any meaning for us." This is clearly opposed to the teachings of the Savior and His Apostles. He was first born of water, being baptized of John in the river Jordan, and then born of the spirit, the Holy Ghost descending upon Him from heaven. He said "Except a man be born of the water and of the spirit he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God." The promise made by Peter on the day of Pentecost was "One of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." In the account given of the acts of the Apostles, it will be seen that baptism came first, then the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. An apparent exception was in the case of Cornelius and his household, upon whom God caused the Holy Ghost to descend before baptism, but it is explained in their case that it was done as a sign to convince Peter, the Apostle, that Gentiles as well as Jews were fit subjects for the holy ordinance of the gospel.

We are pleased to notice in the discussion of this subject that some of the participants have been taking lessons from "Mormon" sources. For instance P. P. thus takes up the argument in the Witness:

"Dear sir.—Your notice in yesterday's Witness of E. G. D's letter on the subject of baptism induces me to hope you will give this common-sense place in your columns, it being brief, to the point and free from what is understood by the term dogmatism. The Holy baptism was ordained of God for the remission of sins. For this end, John the Baptist administered it. Mark 1:4, 5. Peter, on the day of Pentecost, authorized those who cried out, what must we do, to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins. Ananias sent by spirit of revelation from God to the newly converted Paul of Tarsus told him to arise and be baptized and wash away his sins, calling on the name of the Lord. By special revelation also Peter was sent to Cornelius and although he was a pious good man whose prayers and aims came for a memorial before the Lord, and was privileged with angelic visitations yet he was commanded by Peter to be baptized. The great importance of this ordinance in our salvation is also seen in the multitude of passages which believed the gospel preached by the apostles. Note those on the day of Pentecost and those of Samaria, also the gathering and the family of Lydia and her household and the Ethiopian eunuch. Peter compares baptism to the ark in which Noah and his family were saved. Now suppose a man's family were to be saved, would he not want to be baptized? Well, I know the ark was a good thing and God commanded Noah to build it, but I do not think it absolutely necessary to go into it that we may be saved. God will save us without it as well as the ark. This is the way many talk about baptism. Saint Paul declares that as many as were baptized were in Christ and put on Christ. The same apostle teaches that baptized believers are buried with Christ. Our Lord himself declares that except a man be born of the Kingdom of God, and the who-soever believeth and is baptized shall be saved. When God's ordinance is duly administered and received the blessings associated with them will be realized."

He is followed in a subsequent issue by A. W. F., with the following: "Sir—Seeing in the Witness of last week over the signature of E. G. D. his article on baptism, I feel that I am justified in writing you a few lines. I am a member of the church, and I wish to say that I have seen many articles on that and similar topics, I wish to add a word to what has been written, leaving it to you to decide whether it is for your columns or not. Our Lord prescribes a new birth and how it is to be experienced, and although theologians seem to agree in making it a matter of the imagination, we do not find water an imaginary element. A birth is a bringing forth, and what is simpler than being brought forth of water? Moreover, although the work of the spirit is like that of the wind by an unseen influence, yet the operation of the spirit is no less real and powerful when men are thereby moved to do what they had else never intended. In short, believers by repentance and baptism (immersion) are received into the household of faith. These letters contain sound 'Mormon' doctrine and show that truth is spreading. Indeed, we are thoroughly convinced that the discussion of important theological questions now in progress, by which many of the old, erroneous, orthodox dogmas of the chief religious sects are being overturned, has been accomplished by the dissemination of the principles revealed from heaven through the Prophet Joseph Smith, and the faithful labors of the Elders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. All the leading questions now agitated by ministers of the various denominations, to the disturbance of the channels of thought that were once thought to be forever settled, have been answered authoritatively and made so plain as to remove all doubt or query concerning them, by direct revelation to this Church. And the missionaries who tell in the face of a frowny world and the intense hostility of the literary clergy, to spread abroad a knowledge of these great truths, without fee or hope of earthly reward, should take comfort and encouragement from the fact that not only are a few honest souls here and there, receiving and obeying the gospel, but the effects of their teachings and testimony are perceptible in the whole religious world, stirring it up to unwonted thought and to the discussion of principles that have been unchallenged for centuries; and the result cannot fail to be advantageous to the truth. "Mormonism" is of necessity a disturbing element in religious society, and there is no wonder that it is opposed by the orthodox and those who preach for life and divinity for money. It will accomplish its work, spread the light of the true gospel, dispel the fog and mists of theological error, overturn the creeds of men, and fill the earth with the knowledge and worship of the true and living God."

You may say that we are all right, that we are all officers. We have 100 operators at work and they are constantly increasing, and our increase is from 18 to 22 to day, and our night force is 65 for to-night. Not by any means; we have refused at least twenty to-day, railroad men who had no knowledge of the business. And are you able to handle all the business? So far we have taken care of things pretty well. To admit it will not be so heavy as we have advertised that all received telegrams will be subject to delay. However the business has been so quiet but little delay except in the north-west, where the severe storm of this morning broke and crossed the wires. We think we are in a condition to receive congratulations, suitably returned the official. The chief operator was found busy, but while attending to his duties he had been receiving new recruits all the time and constantly expected more. What will be done in the event that some of the strikers want to return? When the men come to us in good faith and say that they want out under a misunderstanding the case will be considered. I told all the boys they were making a mistake when they left and have not changed my mind yet. Are all of the gentlemen and ladies at work experienced people? Oh, no. Many are first-class operators, but not having worked for a long time at the business are more or less rusty. It will take a few days for them to get back to their old work. Just the same as it does printers. Mr. McCollough, Supt. of the B. & O. Co.'s office here, was seen and he said: We are just about as we were. Three new men have come in which with two ladies who didn't join the strike, give us five in this office, and you can easily see that with such a force we are much inconvenienced. I understand they have not a man in Louisville.

STRAIGHT DEMOCRATIC DOCTRINE.

The supporters of the doctrine of "a tariff for revenue" have strong grounds for their position apart from the wide field of argument against protection by the Government of private industries. It is from the Constitution that the Government derives all its authority. Outside of that instrument Congress has no power of taxation. Where within its articles can be found any warrant for the imposition of taxes for the purpose of protecting any private industry? Judge Jere Black, when interviewed on this question not long ago, declared that "Congress has no more right to levy a tax on imports than it has on land, beyond what is necessary for the support and maintenance of the Government. All beyond that is robbery." This is very strong language, but it will be found very difficult to controvert. Expediency is one thing, right another. The great constitutional lawyer speaks by the book, and his utterances on this question are straight Democratic doctrine as well as plain enunciations of principles contained in the supreme law of the land. But the ultra "free trade" doctrine, which some Democrats insist upon, is impracticable unless it is made the general rule of all commercial countries. Responsibility between all nations having trade relations is essential to the full maintenance of free trade by any of them. "Incidental protection" is a term which has come into use in the discussion of a "tariff for revenue," and the principle it expresses seems to meet existing requirements exactly. The Republican policy of a protective tariff for its principal object of the protection of private industries, which is not warranted by the Constitution. But the Democratic policy of "a tariff for revenue" is such that while aimed at a strictly lawful object, it can be so arranged as to afford incidental protection to such home industries as need encouragement, without establishing and maintaining monopolies.

Herein lies the distinction between the policies of the two parties on a question that is certain to play a very important part in the approaching political campaign. If the Democrats do not divide in consequence of the adherence of some impracticables among them to the ultra free trade doctrine, they will have a large advantage over their adversaries on the tariff question, except among the great monopolists and those who are interested in the continued support of monopolies at the expense of the great body politic.

OBITUARY.

John B. Kelly departed this life July 20, 1883. He was born in Douglas, Isle of Man, in 1833. Early in life he became convinced of the truth of the Gospel, and was full of enthusiasm for its power, and to extend it. He first heard it when a boy from the lips of President John Taylor, in 1840, but a native baptistism prevailed him from embracing it as yet. He was a devoted man, and his meetings were held in private houses for testimony, he would noisily creep under the window and listen to the testimony. In 1850 he left Missouri and arrived in Utah, where he was for some time in the employ of the book-binding in connection with the S. W. Co. During his residence here he has many friends, and though unimpaired in his mind, he was ever ready to do the poor, and rescue the distressed, and did many works of goodness and kindness in a secret and unpretentious manner, known only to the recipients and his heavenly Father. He may have had his failings, but when it is known that he was a devoted man, and his meetings were held in private houses for testimony, he would noisily creep under the window and listen to the testimony. ## HOUSE FOR THEM.

George Stephenson's "Rocket," and the magnificent locomotive of to-day are built upon the same general principle, yet the machine with which the great engineer astonished his age, is interesting not only as an illustration of the beginning of the invention, but as a relic of the past. There were platters with holes in them long before BENSON'S CAPSULE PORTLAND CEMENT was invented, and the triumph of the capsule is founded upon the same principle. The old platters were slow in their action; the capsule is quick and sure.

The old platters needed the power to do more than to turn the shaft, but the capsule in cases of emergency, the capsule penetrates the system and promptly overcomes the troubles for which it is recommended.

The old platters depended for any good results they might attain, upon a constant of their motion, the capsule, on the contrary, by means of the scientific combination of the rare medicinal ingredients which it contains.

In brief, the old platters, like Stephenson's discarded engine, are outwitted on the track with the capsule's great and its winning golden opinions from all kinds of people. Yet in this very fact lies the leading danger to the people who buy and use this reliable and scientific remedy. "Hypocritism is the tribute you pay to virtue." Imitation is the commonest failure made to succeed. Beware of platters and capsules in name and style.

Beware of imitations. The genuine have the word CAPSULE on the outer. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.
