

BREVITIES.

Six hundred and five horses were eaten in Paris in June.

A farm in Hardwick, Mass., has over fifty miles of stone wall.

In White Pine they have prize-fights on Sundays, "in order that" all may be able to attend.

The latest Niagara fool, is one that is building a set of wings to fly over the Falls with.

A Parisian, who has an uncontrollable desire to strangle every child he comes across, has voluntarily entered a lunatic asylum.

The body is the shell of the soul, and the dress the husk of the body; but the husk often tells what the kernel is.

The hardest thing on Chicago of recent date is a well authenticated statement that a paper which advocates the abolition of marriage and the substitution of free love is a decided success.

"Zack Tower," a crazy man at the Schenectady County Poorhouse, lately remarked in a speech made in a vacant lot near that place, that sooner than accept the nomination for President of the United States, he'd stand the Mohawk river up on end, and skin it like a tree-load to glory.

A lady while out berrying at North-Granville, N. Y., came upon a corpse with the throat cut from ear to ear. She dropped her pail of fruit and rushed for the villagers, who at once repaired to the scene to find that the corpse had come to life and run off with the berries. The clever rogue had stained his neck and breast with berry juice.

The people of the United States are plundered of twenty millions of dollars a year by the tariff on coal, and of twenty-three millions of dollars by the tariff on iron. Forty-three millions of dollars go thus from the pockets of the hard working classes into the pockets of only these two classes of monopolists and the Congressmen who conspire to pass the laws which authorize the plundering.—Etc.

In British East India the railway companies have lately begun to provide coffins for the passengers they kill, or who die on the trains. The coffins are kept at the stations along the lines of the several roads, ready for use at a moment's notice. This precaution has been rendered necessary on account of the intense heat of the climate; which accelerates decomposition, and by the frequency of fatal accidents.—Evening Post.

Many a child goes astray, not because there is a want of prayer or virtue at home, but simply because home lacks sunshine. A child needs smiles as much as flowers need sunbeams. Children look little beyond the present moment. If a thing pleases, they are apt to seek it; if it displeases they are prone to avoid it. If home is the place where faces are sour, and words harsh, and fault-finding is ever in the ascendant, they will spend as many hours as possible elsewhere. Let every father and mother, then, try to be happy. Let them talk to their children, especially the little ones, in such a way as to make them happy.

The Icelanders have a curious custom, and a most effectual one, of preventing horses from straying. Two gentlemen, for instance, are riding together without attendants. Wishing to alight for the purpose of visiting some objects at a distance from the road, they tie the tail of one horse to the head of the other, and the head of this to the tail of the former. In this state it is utterly impossible that they can move either backward or forward; one pulling one way and the other the reverse; and, therefore, if disposed to move at all, it will be only in a circle, and even then there must be an agreement to have their heads in the same direction.

A gentleman of Wilmington, Del., had two of his children, aged respectively three and five years, in his yard during the recent eclipse, for the purpose of viewing it. While thus engaged he doubled the lining of his coat, and on looking through it discovered he had as good a view as through smoked glass. Of course the children had to be accommodated with a peep through this impromptu telescope in which they became deeply interested. In the evening, while the coat was hanging up in its place, the eldest child went toward it, when the little two-year old boy frantically yelled out to her to leave papa's coat be, for he had the eclipse in his pocket, and she must not touch it.

A fellow who has been shaved in China says that the barber first strapped the razor on his leg and then did the shaving without any lather. The customer remonstrated, but was told that lather had a tendency to make the beard stiff and tough, and was therefore never used by persons who had any knowledge of the face and its appendages. After the beard was taken off—and it was done in a very short time—the barber took a long, sharp, needle-shaped spoon, and began to explore his customer's ears. He brought out from the innumerable little crevices bits of wax and dirt left there since his childhood. The barber suddenly twisted his subject's neck one side in such a manner that it cracked as if the vertebrae had been dislocated. "Hold on!" shouted the party, alarmed for the safety of his neck. "All right," replied the barber, "no hurt you;" and he continued to jerk and twist the neck until it was limber as a woman's old dish-rag. He then fell to beating his back, breast, arms and sides with his fist, and pummeled the muscles till they fairly flowed with the beating they received. He then dashed a bucket of water over the man's head, dried the skin with towels, and declared his work was done. Price two cents.
