

The difficulty was over the right to a position on the floor at a dance there. Boyd received one stab near the heart, one over the right lung and the left side of his face was split entirely open, besides numerous painful cuts.

H. B. Crouch, a prominent rancher and cattle-man, shot and killed, on Tuesday morning, with a small revolver, Abundio Leon. For several weeks past Crouch has been in trouble with Mexicans over contested lands and water rights. On Tuesday Leon jumped the ranch of Crouch and set up a tent, intending to work the land. Crouch says that he fired only after Leon had threatened him with a knife and crowbar. The shooting took place in the tent.

Thomas J. Welch, a locomotive fireman out of work and a stranger at Pueblo, Colo., was found dead on Tuesday at that place, sitting bolt upright in an unused stoneyard west of the Rio Grande freight depot. The body had evidently been there forty-eight hours. Papers in his pockets showed him to be a member in good standing of Cloud City lodge No. 196, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen at Leadville. Death was evidently from natural causes.

A telegram from Atlantic, Wyoming, says: The Revere and Northern Spy mines have turned out to be tin properties. What the owners took to be silver proved to be tin. The local assayer, L. S. Kempher, made two tests from samples taken from the outcrop, which gave returns of 5 per cent and 6 1/2 per cent tin. This lode is over sixty feet wide and shows a strong outcrop for over 6,000 feet. Bates and Wygall, the fortunate owners, are well satisfied that they have a big thing.

The Cheyenne Tribune says: The thirteen hunters who threatened to clear North park of game have returned to town. The party was absent eighteen days and hunted across North park and back again, killing two bear, six deer, one elk, three antelope, 120 ducks, seventy-five grouse and a number of carnivorous wild animals. They sold the bears, traded considerable game off for vegetables and fruit, and what they intended to distribute among their friends has spoiled on their hands.

Will L. Simpson, county and prosecuting attorney, has returned from Jackson's Hole, says the Lander, Wyo., Clipper, where he has been visiting his relations. Mr. Simpson confirms the report of the depredations of the Indians in that section. He says that the country is fairly alive with redskins, and that they are killing game to their heart's content, leaving the carcasses to rot in the sun, carrying away the skins only. They are all of them provided with passes from Captain Ray of the Shoshone reservation.

Sport must be good and chickens plentiful in the state, if the following from the Cheyenne (Wyo.) Tribune is true: Yesterday as Engineer Harvey Chaplin was gazing ahead of his engine, about 130 miles north of here, on the return trip from Orin to Cheyenne, he observed a large flock of chickens fly up from the brush along the track directly in front of the train. One big fat hen struck the headlight of the engine with terrible force, smashing the glass and cutting her own throat on the fragments. She fell to the ground and stopping the train, Harvey picked up the self-executed fowl and brought her to town.

A man named John Heaney was run over and killed between Palisade (Colo.) and Mt. Lincoln coal mines on Tuesday night by an extra freight train, east bound. He has been working at these mines since last November. He went to Grand Junction last Monday morning and returned Tuesday night in an intoxicated condition. After the train left he started for the camp and was run over and killed about 200 yards this side. When found he was breathing slightly, but soon expired. Both legs were cut off and he was bleeding from the head. He was an Irishman, unmarried and about 27 years of age.

The Casper (Wyo.) Derrick says: Range riders report awful havoc by wolves this season. Prominent cattlemen place the destruction of calves at fully one-fifth and say that they find an average of three to five calves that have been killed by wolves every day and a great many cows and yearlings terribly mangled. No end of complaint is heaped on the Natrona county commissioners for their lack of encouragement to have these pests exterminated. As it is, the wolves are increasing very rapidly and are destroying thousands of dollars worth of property more than it would take to pay such a bounty as would be an incentive to their systematic destruction.

A young man named George Sully, in the employ of George Putnam, of Chinook, Montana, met with a serious accident a few days ago. He was out near the British line herding sheep on horseback when his horse stumbled and fell, catching his foot in the stirrup and dislocating the ankle. The wound was painful in the extreme, but he succeeded in pulling the dislocated ankle into its proper position, and then, having no one to relieve him, he continued to herd the sheep for five days in this suffering condition, until the camp-tender came out. For fidelity to duty under trying circumstances this case is almost without parallel. Sully was finally taken to Chinook and is improving.

On Tuesday, Ada Nicholas, a fifteen year old girl, whose parents reside seven miles above Los Gatos, Cal., committed suicide by taking poison. For a long time the deceased had been troubled with her eyes, and at one time consulted a physician, who told her she had better see a specialist or else she would have more serious trouble. This seemed to trouble the girl a great deal, and when she went home she told her mother she would rather die than wear spectacles. This is supposed to be the cause of her suicide. The home life of the girl is said to have been always very pleasant and both father and mother are heartbroken over the matter.

A runaway accident, horrible in its results, occurred at Courtland, Cal., on Monday morning. The head Chinaman of Wm. Johnson's ranch down the river was driving down the road in a cart, accompanied by his wife. The horse took fright at some object in the road. The woman was frantic with fear and tried to jump out of the cart. As she was in the act of doing so her clothing became caught in the wheels and she was pulled to the ground. The horse dashed wildly on and the poor woman was dragged quite a distance. When picked up she presented a shocking sight. Literally, a portion of her body was torn to shreds. Her legs had almost been severed from the trunk. The Chinaman would have no one but a Chinese doctor, so they telegraphed for one to San Francisco. In a few minutes a telephone message was sent, telling the doctor not to come. The woman had died on her board bed.

At an early hour on Monday morning an officer walked into the police station at Los Angeles, Cal., in charge of a youthful-looking Mexican, whom he asked to have booked for burglary. The Mexican was bleeding from a wound over the left eye, and the officer said that the hole in the Mexican's head was caused by a bullet which the prisoner had received while endeavoring to force an entrance into a house on South Main street. He had been shot by a plucky servant girl whose name is Anna Cull. The Mexican gave the name of "Jesus Ladesma," but beyond vouchsafing this information he refused to talk. It is now learned that instead of the burglar he was supposed to be the fellow is a shyster lawyer who has a record that is unenviable, to say the least. It appears that he had been for some time past endeavoring to force his attentions upon the girl, but that she had repulsed him and would have nothing to do with him. Whether murder or assault was his purpose in seeking an entrance to her room is not known. The fellow is said to be known in San Francisco and Oakland, where he was brought to the attention of the police by persecuting helpless women.

Springville Independent—The marshal will commence on Monday impounding all calves found at large in the streets of the city. It is not generally known that the stock law includes calves as well as grown stock, but such is the case. Great complaints have been made to the marshal in relation to the depredations that have been and are daily being committed by the small stock in our city, that are daily running at large.
