> AN INDIANA MARRIAGE.-The Terre Haute (Ind.) Express prints the following: "On Friday morning Justice Sheets, of Paris, Ill., was called upon by a happy couple. The man beckoned him aside, and said that he wanted to be married. The young lady was twenty-five, while her lover was about ten years her senior. The justice adjusted his spectacles, put on the look he usually wears when about to make people (un) happy for life, and told them to stand up. This they did and as he was about to begin the ceremony, the following formula was handed to him by the groom, who stated that they had concluded to be married by this: Verbatim it is as follows: 'Mr. W. C. Cole do you take this woman Lida Hutchins whom you hold by the rite hand to your lawful and wedded Convenience, wife in the presence of God and these witnesses. So long as you both love each other and live happy together and will you endeavor to make her happiness and that of yourself and familys, your hiest earthly aim to take care of her in sickness and in health, so long as you both live together as husband and wife?' The same formula was presented interrogatively to the lady, except that the sentence 'to do your duty by him so long as you live together as husband and wife' was interpolated at the close. The parties live at Chrisman, Ill."
