CORRESPONDENCE.

ONE FACT THAT MISS FIELD DID NOT MENTION.

Editor Deseret News:

I read some time since that Kate Field declared to having stated "facts" when she manufactured and gave publicity to the malicious and vile slanders about the Latter-day Saints, a people whose customs and principles she professes to have thoroughly investigated. After a residence of thirty years among this people I most emphatically state that I have neither experienced nor witnessed any of the evils which she so loudly proclaims, and as the lady seemingly possesses but one aim, and that to misrepresent, I thought it would not be an injustice to remind her and the readers of her "Essays on Mormonism" of at least that it has not suited her purpose to mention.

During her most eventful sojourn in Utah she was visited and treated with marked courtesy by Mormon ladies of noted intelligence, education and culture—among them Mrs. E. B. Wells, editor of Woman's Exponent, and Dr. R. B. Pratt, who, according to arrangement, visited in company with her a family in Salt Lake City somewhat noted for their peaceful and happy relationship in the order of celestial marriage. Three wives and a dozen healthy, well developed children were assembled in the parlor for Kate's curious inspection.

The family presuming that she came for information were willing to engage in conversation upon any of the principles of our faith and relate their experience in the Abrahamic order of marriage, but it was very evident that this lady so ravenous for information of a certain kind, did not desire to possess herself of any such facts as this opportunity afforded; for she most ingeniously turned the current of conversation upon other topics, herself taking the lead and playing the role of entertainer. The children whom most strangers regard with curious interest because of their birth in the patriarchal order of marriage, were entirely ignored, for had she noticed them at all she must have admitted them to be at least the equals of children elsewhere; and this, I fear, with her would have been too great a consideration.

If the lady, as she stated, was eager to obtain facts, she, in this instance, was certainly guilty of a great injustice to the public whom she proposed to enlighten; for here, in her presence, were women willing, nay anxious, to give her any information within the range of actual experience, personally or otherwise, extending over a period of many years, had she manifested the least desire to listen. But she knew that these ladies would not acknowledge that they were "beasts of burden" "unsupported by their husbands," "animals for refreshing the earth and nothing more," though they were not ashamed of having fulfilled God's first great command, and were proud of their goodly number of

for they look upon children as "An heritage from the Lord."

Neither would they confess to her that they felt themselves degraded either morally or physically by their mutual marriage to one man; nor would they admit that their children, with fine physique and bright, intelligent faces, were one particle degenerate. They would also have failed to harp upon the utterly false and threadbare story of being forced to enter or remain in their condition, so freely termed serfdom by anti-"Mormon" zealots.

One chapter of their knowledge and experience would spoil her whole design, so she refused to possess it for insertion in her "series of essays." Theirs would have been a recital of the enjoyed in this order; its purifying and elevating tendencies; its power to redeem women from the curse pronounced upon Mother Eve, and from the slavery—the soul-harrowing and soul-and-body-destroying train of evils into which a monogamic system of marriage has plunged her, and its power to place all women on the highest pinnacle of honor—that of wife and mother removing all possibility of any becoming the plaything of man's ungodly lust—a margin, if you please, for man's license outside the "marriage relation."

They would tell how the divine instinct of maternity could find its full reward within the walls of comfortable homes in the legitimate ministery and pleasures of honorable motherhood, and how women, by subduing selfishness, and adopting the golden rule, with that true charity which "thinketh no evil," which suffereth long and is kind, is not easily provoked and which covereth a multitude of sins, in fact, by simple taking as a guide the rules laid down by our Savior, and conforming their lives thereto, women may live in a condition of peace, progress and mutual good will, finding many sources of happiness and advantage by living and laboring for each other's interest—and that the bonds of love between wives in hundreds of instances are like those between Ruth and Naomi. The "Mormon" women are not only capable of pure and devoted love for their husbands, and the principles of the Gospel have so enlarged their souls that they are also capable of extending an unselfish love to their own sex, and are willing to share with them blessings both for time and eternity.

THE MAIN SPRING OF ALL HUMAN WOE,

But Miss Field and other would-be rabid "Mormon" abolitionists have no idea of such exhalted principles; hence their abuse, for it is a noted peculiarity of human nature to denounce what it is incapable of comprehending.

Again, people of such proclivities appear decidedly vulture-like in their natures, always delighting in carrion, and always on the alert to discover something awful to shock their extremely moral sensibilities.

When such characters pander to the vitiated tastes of a certain class of the public for the purpose of lining their capacious pockets, where facts are not startling and sensational enough to meet the demand, immagination must supply all deficiencies; but a woe is pronounced upon all those who "love and make a lie," who "speaketh not truth from the heart," who bear false witness against their neighbor; and, while offenses must come woe unto them by whom they come, for however great, influential, or wise in their own conceit may be those who fight against God's work—though humble may be the instruments He has chosen—their sin will follow them unto utter destruction, while the kingdom which God has established never more to be thrown down or given to another people will triumph gloriously.

A FIRST CLASS SHOW.

THE BEST CIRCUS EVER SEEN IN DENVER.

Old John Robinson Scores a Grand and Deserved Success in the Queen City of the Plains.

"The best show that ever visited Denver" is the universal verdict of the people of Denver regarding the John Robinson circus, which gave four complete exhibitions in this city on Saturday last, the Fourth of July. Tis is not only the verdict of the people of Denver, but also of the hundreds upon hundreds of people who, taking advantage of the day being a holiday, come here from Leadville, Pueblo, Colorado Springs, and all over the state to witness what is really, as advertised the "greatest show on earth."

THE STREET PAGEANT.

Promptly at 8 o'clock Saturday morning, in accordance with previous promises, the street parade left the circus grounds and started over the route previously advertised. It was the grandest and most complete street procession ever seen in Denver. The golden chariots, the open dens of ferocious animals, and the giraffes and other rare animals, which were advertized to be seen in Barrett's parade a month ago, but failed to materialize, were all to be seen in old John Robinson's parade, although no fuss whatever had been made about them on paper. The procession was so much better than the people expected that it proved a grand advertisement for the exhibitions which followed. In the language of an enthusiast, "The parade was so much better than their paper led us to believe, that we knew the show must be good too. It is such a novel thing for a circus to actually give much more than it advertized that we thought we had a sort of philanthropic Fourth of July Santa Claus amongst us—and so we had."

THE EXHIBITIONS.

There were over 5,000 people at the morning exhibition at 10 o'clock, every seat in the vast auditorium being filled.

For the first afternoon performance, advertised to begin at 2 o'clock, every seat was occupied, the rings and elevated seats were filled with people, thousands were refused admission and the doors were faced down to keep the crowd out at 1 o'clock, an hour before the time advertised. At this hour the performance began and at its conclusion another crowd began to pour in, so that within twenty minutes the tent was again packed with people, the doors were once more faced down and the third performance began.

The fourth performance began at 8 o'clock in the evening, and notwithstanding the crowds that had attended the three previous exhibitions, many people were turned away, being unable to gain admittance. At the conclusion of this last regular circus performance the grand concert was given—the first one of the day—and fully 5,000 people witnessed it.

OVER 30,000 PEOPLE.

It was generally estimated that fully 50,000 people attended the circus during the day and evening. The management state, however, that this is an exaggerated estimate. They give the actual number of tickets sold for the four performances at 32,516; yet, notwithstanding this, good judges of crowds persist in the assertion that no less than 50,000 witnessed Old John Robinson's great show.

AN HONEST SHOW.

It was certainly the most honestly advertised exhibition ever in our city. The street procession was the best ever seen here—the circus was all that was promised, and the menagerie the most complete. To sum it all up in a sentence: The Old John Robinson show is, in all its details, the very best that has ever been in Denver. Hereafter the promises made by Old John Robinson in a show bill will be relied upon as implicitly in Denver as is the promise of Uncle Sam to redeem one of his treasury notes.

BIGGEST AND BEST.

The tents were the largest ever seen in Denver. The main exhibition tent occupied the entire square used by the Barrett show for all of its main tents, stables, etc., while in addition the Robinson show used the entire block opposite, thus occupying double the space of any previous show that has visited Denver.

In conclusion it may be justly said that while not as fulsomely advertised as the Barrett show, the superiority in every particular of Robinson's was apparent to the most casual observer. In fact, Old John Robinson's shows, while not half so pretentious, would, if placed in comparison with Barrett's show, cause the latter to appear very insignificant. In a word, it was the most conscientiously advertised show that has ever visited Denver, and fully deserved the liberal patronage it received.—Denver Daily Times, July 6.
