Merrick said they had to ask the indulgence of being heard by three of the counsel, and that as some important questions had arisen this morning, the time be ex-tended another hour.

The commission granted the time requested.

Judge Hadley addressed the commission. He contended that the tender of his resignation to the Government in Ohio, and his acceptance of the same by the judge. in his opinion, was not an aim of the circuit court of Florida, and that, therefore, the resignation of Humphreys had not been legally a.m. accepted, and he was consequently at this time holding an office of profit and trust under the United States, and therefore was ineligible as an elector. The effect of the writer of the communication prog- disqualification extended not only the elector but to the State which appointed him. This view he supported with quotations from the debates when the Consti-tution was framed, holding that the selection of an ineligible elected worked the forfeiture of the vote to worked the forfeiture of the vote to the State; it was intended to protect the several states against the ille-gitimate use of the federal power in any one state. Time had not shown the evils from federal inter-ference any less than our forefathers had apprehended in 1837. Five post-masters were among the elect-ors. Clay introduced a resolution ors. Clay introduced a resolution directing a joint commission to in quire into this infringement of the lause of the Constitution. It was then held that it was the duty of Congress to take testimony and inquire into the fact. The committee did not find time to ascertain whether parties of the same name were the same individuals, as then the votes would not change the re-sult. The inquiry was not carried out, but at that time the idea was entertained that the committee did not think that a single disqualified elector vitialed the whole electoral vote Judge Hoadly quoted Eng-lish authorities to show that in the event of the election of an incligi-ble individual the election was void.
