

BRYAN AS A STORY-TELLER

Punctures His Talks With Anecdotes, Old and New—Knows How to Tell Them, Too.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN is a good story teller. Besides punctuating his speeches with homey anecdotes he enlivens his conversation by recounting stories possessed of the merit of having a good point, says the Kansas City Journal.

Mr. Bryan's stories fall into two classes: Those he has gleaned at home and the recent acquisition from foreign sources which he carefully selected and stored away for future reference during his trip around the globe. The anecdotes that smack of the red soil of Nebraska are the best for political speeches. The tales that came to him in Japan, India or Turkey he reserves for the private ears of his friends.

In his speech at New Haven and again in Newark Mr. Bryan used an anecdote to illustrate what Mr. Bryan says the Republican party has been doing to excuse its failure to curb the trusts. When he launches his mouth in a quizzical manner, affects a drawl and slowly moves his head from side to side as if his was the task to recite the obituary over the body of one lately departed.

"There was once a man," goes Mr. Bryan's story, "who was sued in court for returning with a crack across the bottom of a kettle he had borrowed from a neighbor. The neighbor was very angry."

"The man who was sued put up three defenses. First, he said that he had not borrowed the kettle. Then when that failed, he said that the kettle was cracked when he borrowed it. And finally when his second argument was disproved he said that he had mended the crack before he returned the kettle."

"And that," concluded Mr. Bryan, "is the way the Republican party defends itself against the charge of not keeping its promises on the subject of trust regulation."

The Nebraska argument that the Republicans draw campaign funds out of the pockets of the men who find the high tariff to their advantage he finds well illustrated by a story which is not altogether new. After explaining his belief that no Republican dare touch the present tariff for fear of offending those who, he alleges, contribute the money for the campaign work, Mr. Bryan tells the following:

There was once a man who went into a clothing store. He stole a coat and started to run down the street. The clothing dealer hurried out into the street and shouted "Stop thief!" but the thief would not stop.

Then the clothing dealer appealed to a policeman and the policeman shouted "Stop thief!" but the thief would not stop. Then the policeman drew his revolver and shouted to the fleeing thief, "Stop, or I'll fire!" Then the excited clothing dealer cried out to the policeman: "Shoot him in the pants; the coat belongs to me!"

"So there you are," concludes Mr. Bryan after reciting this anecdote. "The Republican party don't care to shoot the trusts in the pants because the coat belongs to them. They don't dare to shoot the trusts in the pants because the pants belong to them. They don't dare to shoot anywhere, for fear of hitting something that belongs to them."

Mr. Bryan sometimes makes jokes at the expense of himself, and of the issues on which he has met defeat. While he was being taken over to Newark on the third day of his stay in New York he told the newspaper men this tale:

"My former campaigns and the results that came of them remind me of a man who came out to Nebraska to take up a farm," said he. "This man was a greenhorn and he did not know much about the cyclones that sometimes visit our prairies. But he had some sort of wisdom."

"He put a strange looking wooden fence about his place that looked like a chicken coop. It was built in a triangular shape. A farmer drove by when this greenhorn was sitting up his fence and commented upon its apparent instability.

"Why, the first good wind that comes along," said he, "will blow your fence over like jackstraws."

PHYSICIAN CHARGED WITH WIFE MURDER.

One of the most sensational trials in the criminal annals of the country has just ended in Toms River, New Jersey, where Dr. Frank Brouwer, of that place, who has had a fashionable and lucrative practice in Lakewood, was charged with having killed his wife by slow poison eight months ago. It was alleged Dr. Brouwer introduced ground glass and arsenic into his wife's food while she was an invalid. The jury, after being out less than an hour, brought in a verdict of "not guilty."

"Oh all right," said the greenhorn, who was also an optimist. My fence is five feet broad at the bottom and four feet high. If it blows over it will be a foot higher than it is now."

"That's what I hope my political fence is like," said Bryan, with a laugh. Another Bryan story was lifted boldly by Congressman Lantz in his speech at New Haven on Aug. 31. Mr. Lantz was busy holding the crowd until Mr. Bryan should appear from the meeting of the New England Democrats in the Tontine hotel, across the street, so the use of the Bryan thunder was, perhaps, permissible.

There was once a funeral out in Nebraska—so runs this yarn—and the preacher who had been asked to deliver the eulogy was a stranger in town and did not know the departed sister very well. So after he had said all that he could say a few words about the poor dead sister it would be a good thing to say them.

Three or four of those who had known the deceased in her lifetime made appropriate remarks. Then there was a pause. At last one old brother rose and said:

"Well, if you're all through speaking about the departed sister I will now make a few brief remarks on the tariff."

Mr. Bryan enters into the spirit of his stories with great gusto, gesticulating with his hands and modulating his voice to suit the periods. His eyes are expressive; they light up before the point of the story is reached and his play actor's mouth trembles into a smile.

When the point of the story comes each word is enunciated slowly and distinctly with a lingering emphasis on each as if the narrator was loath to come so soon to the end of his tale.

WOMEN'S WOES

Salt Lake City Women Are Finding Relief at Last.

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity; they must "keep up," must attend to duties in spite of constantly aching backs, or headaches, dizzy spells, bearing down pains; they must stoop over, when to stoop means torture. They must walk and bend and work with aching pains and many aches from kidney ills. Kidneys cause more suffering than any other organ of the body. Keep the kidneys well and health is easily maintained. Read of a remedy for kidneys only that helps and cures the kidneys and is endorsed by people you know.

Mrs. Sarah Pearson, of 542 Elizabeth St., Salt Lake City, Utah, says: "I had suffered from kidney trouble for years. I do not know what caused it, in fact, I think I inherited the trouble. There was persistent pain across the kidneys and it hurt me when I stooped or lifted anything. Then the secretions from the kidneys were irregular, scalded and contained a sediment like brick dust. Oftentimes there was a blurring before my eyes and they smarted. I used a number of remedies but without much benefit. I finally saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and got a box of the F. J. Hill Drug Co.'s store. I found that Doan's Kidney Pills are all that they are claimed to be. They cleared up the kidney secretions and rid me of the aches and pains I have described. I found such great relief through the use of this remedy that I am, indeed, glad to recommend it to others."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

The last time by the newspaper men who had followed him about on his journeys out of New York, Mr. Bryan, remembering that he was once a reporter and not forgetful of the difficulties that sometimes beset the path of the interviewer, told the newspaper men about how he was once interviewed in a rapid fire manner in Louisville, after he had been defeated the second time for the presidency.

"A young man hustled up to me with his pad all ready," said Mr. Bryan, "and announced that he had been sent by his city editor to interview me. 'Mr. Bryan, are you going to run again for president?' he asked.

"Well," said I, "in view of the fact that I have been defeated within two weeks it would be hard to answer that question."

"All right, scratch that. Now, Mr. Bryan, what will be the next platform of the Democratic party?"

"I certainly am not in a position to tell."

"He drew another line through his pad."

"Now, Mr. Bryan, what person do you think will be available to run for president on the Democratic ticket if you do not run again?"

"Again I cannot answer that question," I answered with earnestness.

"All right, Mr. Bryan; much obliged; please to have met you; good by."

"Now there was a man who had done what he had been told to do," concluded Mr. Bryan with a hearty laugh.

The Commoner relates with great glee one incident that befell him in Japan. He went to one of the temples in Tokio to see the shrines of some of Japan's departed statesmen. It was at Shiba park, where the most beautiful of the Tokugawa temples are located.

This was the first Japanese temple that Mr. Bryan had ever visited. He was accompanied by several dignitaries of the municipality of Tokio, who had come to act as an escort of honor.

At the temple door the Japanese gentlemen began to remove their shoes, according to unalterable custom. Mr. Bryan took off his Oxford ties and was horrified to find that most of the great toe and part of the second toe of one of his feet were protruding boldly from his sock. There was no help for it; the great American statesman with his guard of honor had to patter over the bronze floors of the shrines at Shiba with two toes exposed.

"Never have I felt the lack of dignity so much as on that occasion," says Mr. Bryan. "Anyway, I bought the socks in Japan and that accounts for the fact that such a hole could be worn between the time I put them on in the morning and the time I took off my shoes at the temple door in the afternoon."
