

OPEN REBELLION AT STATE PRISON.

Disgruntled Prisoners Try to Dictate Matters and Come To Grief.

COMPLAINED OF FOOD SERVED.

Because it Was Not to Their Liking They Refused to Work—What Happened.

There was an incident rebellion at the state prison yesterday, by 20 convicts, alleging inferior quality of food, as an excuse to stir up a disturbance, and for a time the situation was breezy. But Warden Pratt and his officers by prompt action forestalled the insurrection in the bud, and the disgruntled disturbers of the peace, after being locked up, vented their feelings by yelling like Comanche Indians on the war path, or students at a college ball game. The warden is not working at all, for he has the rebels just where he wants them, and where they belong, viz., manacled up to the walls of their cells, where they can exercise their lungs until tired nature can exercise no more.

HOW IT HAPPENED.

The racket began yesterday after breakfast, when 30 "bonds" suddenly expressed their "mild dissatisfaction" with the quality of the commissariat, refused to go to work, and endeavored to persuade all other prisoners they could approach to do likewise. This performance brought on an immediate investigation by Warden Pratt, who asked the men individually what their cause of grief was, and it was not long before he had 10 of the ringleaders in a repentant frame of mind, but the remaining 20 were obstinate. So these latter were escorted, without further ado, to the lower tier of cells in the north side of the south cell house, and locked up. But they straightaway inaugurated a yelling howl which they kept up until afternoon, using language that fairly turned the ears of the white guard and white jailers in the neighborhood, and as an obligate the warden's hands on the doors and the walls of the cells, raising a most infernal din. This sort of thing became monotonous, and the warden considered it to be a nuisance. So the noble choir of 20 were put on bread and water diet to quiet their overworked nerves, and at 3:30 each vocal artist was doled out two slices of unbuttered bread and a mug of water. However, this failed to allay the fever, and the desire to be heard, and at 9 p. m. the supply of water was cut off, and after a boutful supply of manacles had been secured from the sheriff's office and the police station up town, each inmate was chained up against the wall of his cell, with his hands about on a level with his eyes. Then each man's shoes were removed so that he could not get on the floor with his feet because too painful for further continuance. But the men kept on pounding against the cell walls with their manacles, and "whooping it up" with the remnant of their lung powers.

WARDEN PRATT'S VOW.

At midnight, the warden philosophically remarked: "They may keep us awake but they can't do much sleeping themselves. And they can't get on the floor with their feet because too painful as can be. They were sent here to work and they will work all right." By warden Pratt's belief there was any plan to escape from prison for the very men who would naturally be mixed up in such a thing—men like Muller and Connors—were not in the affair at all. There was a thorough search made of the cells, and no contraband implements or instruments were found. The warden found that withholding the water supply from the rebels aided in reducing the din, as thirst is not conducive to noise-making, and this morning the noise had been greatly abated and the shrieks were less suggestive of the horrors of the condemned. By noon, the tendency to quietness and peace, even more pronounced than the obstreperous "com" found that yelling is highly conducive to thirst, and thirst is unpleasant, if not positively oppressive.

QUALITY OF FOOD SERVED.

Most of the men making the trouble are fresh arrivals from long term sentences in other institutions. There is really no cause for any kicking about the food. Warden Pratt said, "There is a fair sample of the bill of fare."

PAID HIS LICENSE.

Italian Saloon Keeper Narrowly Escapes Going to Jail.

The county jail did not look half so bad today as it did a week ago, to Ferdinand Chavali. He had goodbye to his quarters of a week and this morning returned to his old haunts at Brigham Canyon, something over $200 poorer than when Chief Deputy United States Marshal Smith brought him in for selling liquor without a Federal license.

The case against Chavali will not be moved by the government as it effected settlement this morning, on terms satisfactory to the internal revenue collector. The case was set for trial at 10 o'clock before United States Commissioner Charles Baldwin. Chavali was brought into court by Chief Deputy United States Marshal Smith, and faced an array of six witnesses in addition to Asst. United States Prosecuting Attorney, Fennell Cherrington, who had been called to the stand and through his attorney offered to testify on any reasonable basis, rather than serve a term.

Asst. Internal Revenue Collector Stewart, at whose instance Chavali was arrested, testified that he had received the revenue service was to accept a year's license, plus a fee of 50 cents for delinquency in such matters. A settlement of $200 was therefore agreed upon, plus $100 costs of the case.

The license which Chavali was forced to take out, and which he paid for, was good for one year. However, Chavali's place was destroyed by fire two weeks ago and he will probably not remain at the place.

BOYS' NARROW ESCAPE.

Little Sons of Joseph A. Silver Mixed Up in Exciting Runaway.

About 7 o'clock last night a horse attached to a buggy in which were seated two small boys, dashed down Seventh South street at breakneck speed, and in a manner which gave little hope of the lads escaping serious injury. Fortunately, however, the maddened animal was brought to a sudden halt on Fifth West street, where a brother of the boys had driven his horse in the path of the runaway, thus stopping it before reaching the Rio Grande bridge. Aside from the fright which the fellows were none the worse for the experience. The boys are sons of Joseph A. Silver and were driving home when the horse bolted down the street.

Woman Who Walked From Denver Committed to State Mental Hospital.

Miss Christina Davis, the woman who alleges that she walked all the way from Denver, was today committed to the State Mental hospital at Provo. An examination as to her sanity was conducted this morning by County Physician Whitney, assisted by Dr. Fisher, and upon their recommendation Judge Armstrong made the order committing her to the hospital. Mrs. Davis declared that she has visited all parts of the United States, and that she has recently returned from a visit to Europe. She claims to be of Spanish descent, and that one of her forefathers was Don Carlos.

SANITARY SITUATION.

That at Brigham Canyon Discussed by County Health Board.

The sanitary situation at Brigham Canyon was the subject discussed at today's meetings of the county board of health. This morning an informal discussion preceded the presentation of a report on the Brigham situation this afternoon. A definite policy of reform will probably be decided upon at the afternoon session, as yet no definite conclusions have been reached.

OFF TO EUROPE.

J. Sampson and Harry News, two well known bookkeepers of this state, this morning purchased tickets and reserved room for New York, where they will spend a summer, for a vacation in Europe. They were due to leave on the Overland limited this afternoon.

IDAHO WORKING FOR NEW ROADS.

Contract Let for the Construction of the Big Creek Road, to Cost $25,000.

OTHERS IN CONTEMPLATION.

Plans for Capitol Building Approved, The Structure to Cost $800,000—Music for Fair.

Special Correspondence.

Boise, July 5.—The Idaho International Wagon Road commission has awarded a contract for the construction of the Big creek road to Whitway & Hicks of Boise, the contract price being $25,000. Work on the new road will be commenced this week. The road will extend from the old mining town of Warren, across the south fork of Salmon river, and over the Elk creek summit to the Wordenford mines in the Big Creek district, a distance of 85 miles. The bridge across the Salmon river will be a heavy truss bridge 150 feet long. In addition to this the contractors will have to repair about five miles of road in Washington county, in the neighborhood of Payette lakes.

Of the total cost of this work the state will pay $10,000. The remaining $15,000 will be paid by contributions from parties and corporations who will be benefited. The state wagon road commission has already received $5,000 from the Wardenhoff Mining company; $2,500 from the Kansas and Texas Oil and Mining company, and $25,000 from the town of Warren, the latter being a part of the $1,000 to be raised by that community. The town of Weiser has already banked $1,000 for this purpose, and there is no doubt but that the whole amount of $15,000 will be on hand when needed.

COMMISSION MEETS.

The wagon road commission was in session nearly all last week. It was decided to build the proposed road to the Atlanta mines if the people of Boise would subscribe $15,000. A committee from the chamber of commerce is now at work to secure the money. It was also decided that the state engineer's force left today to make a survey of the road, preliminary to advertising for bids. The agreement between the wagon road commission and the Commercial club, the expense of this survey will be borne entirely by the latter. If the community fails to put up the necessary $15,000.

MISSION MEETS.

Messrs. Wheeler and Lewis of the commission, while in north Idaho recently, visited the proposed road from Wallace to the Snake river valley, and it was decided that the parties benefited would pay half the cost of the road, the state would put up the other half. The commission authorized Lewis to advertise for bids upon the feasibility of the proposed road from Kootenai to Syringa, for which an appropriation of $500 has been asked.

CONTRACT FOR CAPITAL.

Tourtelotte & Co., Boise architects, have been awarded the contract for the plans for the new state capital, and are to be paid $10,000 hereafter. The vote in the capital building commission was 10-0 in favor of Tourtelotte & Co. The local firm was supported by Messrs. Strickland, Gibson, Preserved Coffin and W. E. Pierce, a member of a local real estate firm who is also a member of the commission. The governor and Judge Rees were absent, and the local firm was supported by Messrs. Strickland, Gibson, Preserved Coffin and W. E. Pierce, a member of a local real estate firm who is also a member of the commission. The governor and Judge Rees were absent, and the local firm was supported by Messrs. Strickland, Gibson, Preserved Coffin and W. E. Pierce, a member of a local real estate firm who is also a member of the commission.

CENTENNIAL NOTES.

Liberals' famous Italian band of 10 pieces is now giving two free concerts daily at the Lewis and Clark exposition.

Russell B. Anthony, the leading exponent of woman's suffrage in the United States, was the honored guest on Friday, June 30, at a reception in the Oregon building at the Lewis and Clark exposition.

Saturday, July 1, was "Trail day" at the Lewis and Clark exposition, and on that day the amusement street was formally opened to the public. There are 25 shows on the Trail, and it costs only about $7 to see them all. This is much cheaper than at St. Louis.

In the Idaho building at the Lewis and Clark fair there is a pyramid of nearly pure lead ore which weighs 2,000 pounds. A single specimen weighs 1,000 pounds. Idaho produces annually 40 per cent of the lead mined in the United States, and 27 per cent of the world's supply.

In the foreign exhibit building at the Lewis and Clark exposition there is a reproduction of Raphael's "Stella Matutina," done entirely in needlework. The reproduction was made by a young German girl, Fraulein Clara Riberger, and is considered the most wonderful example of art needlework ever created.

Friday, June 9, was Vancouver day at the Lewis and Clark fair. People of the historic town of Vancouver, Wash., to the number of nearly 2,000, swarmed into the fair grounds in the morning and paraded with banners and banners. "Vancouver Grows Without Watering" was the slogan of the Vancouver people.

The free illustrated lectures by Harry Bulkeley of Washington, D. C., which are given every afternoon at 4 o'clock in the government building at the Lewis and Clark fair, are attracting large audiences. Mr. Bulkeley speaks eloquently on the wonders of the Yellowstone National park, and his lecture is beautifully illustrated by colored lantern slides.
