New York, Oct. 8.—Whatever the merits of the directors' decision which compelled the playing off today of the alleged tie of Sept. 23, even the most bitter enthusiast must concede that the decree has given opportunity for seeing such a marvelous throng and such rare sport as would not otherwise have been possible. The circumstances which

GATES OPENED.

The gates were opened unusually early today, that so far as possible the inevitable congestion in the last half hour before the time set for calling play might be relieved. Lines began to form shortly after daybreak and when the gates swung open at 11 o'clock there was a large crowd. From then on its ever increasing hundreds of men, women and boys fairly hurled themselves inside the inclosure, and then, at top notch speed, sprinted to GATES OPENED. then, at top notch speed, sprinted to the bleachers and unreserved sections. Scrimmages over positions were fre-were poweriess to stop the almost dangerous crowding around the entrances.

There was something fascinating in watching the filling in of the picture by the constantly growing inpour of people. Before the gates were thrown wide there were but the bare outlines formed by grandstands, bleachers, club house "L" structures, viaduct, speedway roofs, trees and overhanging cliffs westward. Then suddenly, here, there—everywhere—men and women, more and more. Every possible vantage point, however, precarious, soon came to have its human cluster. The unusual number of women gave relieving touches of colod here and there. And in the center of this all, in the middle foreground, the empty diamond, clear out on the browned field. On the grand-foreground, the empty diamond, clear out on the browned field. On the grandstands were humerous notables and "fans" many of whom had traveled hundreds of miles for the event.

No last act of any drama ever heid in expetancy and thrill such a waiting audience as those which today follows the play to the curtain fall on the pennant season of 1908.

Hundreds of its counterparts, in miniature throughout the country, are inture throughout the country, are watching bulletin boards, in Chicago, whereby almost instantaneous flashes over the wires, play by play was reproduced on a mammoth perpendicular diamond; and even in the little village where the enterprising weekly records on an impromptu poster the records on an impromptu poster the re-sults half inning by half inningwere wired from the press box here. WHAT WILL END BE?

Tragedy or glorifying comedy, it will end finally according to one's sympa-thies with the actors. Fate has cer-tainly set the stage and developed the culminating scenes with a master con-ception of dramatic proprieties and essentials. And, now, stadium-like, the shrongs are banked high here on every-side; and now breathless hushes, now wildest cheering indicate the tension which has eliminated life's ordinary routine and concentrated attention up-on championship baseball. At 1 o'clock, Doyle, who has been laid up for sometime, ran out onto the dia mond, and was greeted with great applause. Both teams began warming up. The weather conditions were per-

The gates to the diamond had been closed and the Polo grounds practically sealed against further entrance. At 1:15 p. m., the gates to the field were opened and thousands rushed for vantage places. Soon the police within the enclosures had their hands full. Outside the grounds pandemonium

Outside the grounds pandemonium reigned, thousands clamoring for admittance which was denied them.

The police cleared part of the diamond in front of the grandstands, using their clubs in some instances.

Manager Chance, crossing the field today to join his team, was greeted with jeers and hisses from the bleachers, while McGraw, strolling from the club house across to the benches was given tremendous applause.

The sporting world, augmented by the additions of thousands usually luke-warm or indifferent towards baseball, holds its breath today while New York and Chicago contend under extraordinary conditions in the last round of the struggle for the National learne championship of 1908. For weeks, while the leaders in the race have see-sawed back and forth with only the slightest margins in the percentage standing separating them, interest has been maintained at fever pitch. But today even that point was exceeded. Not only the "fans" but staid business and professional men laid aside all their engagements for the day and devoted their time and men laid aside all their engagements for the day and devoted their time and attention exclusively to the "discussion of the prospects and to attempts to obtain for themselves advantageous places in the grand stands and bleachers at the polo grounds. Aside from the weather, which could not have been more favorable, chief interest, of course, centered in the two teams, which were to engage in the battle royal.

The Chicago team arrived at 9:25 in fine condition and cheerful spirits, ready for the supreme battle of this afternoon. Manager McGraw said today that he had no thought of any outcome of the game but another victory for New York, "We won the game of Sept. 23 fairly and squarely, but, now that the officials of the National league have ordered it played over again received. dered it played over again, we will show them that we can win," said he, as he reached the clubhouse at the Polo

President Murphy of the Chicago team said there was no question in his mind as to the outcome of the championship game this afternoon. He already had predicted that Chicago would win by a score of 8 to 3, he said, and he was standing by that prediction. grounds.

"The boys were never in such a con-"The boys were never in such a condition of fitness as they are today," said he, "They always fight better away from home, and the unjust decision of the directors on the tie game has stirred up every particle of fighting blood in their bodies. I believe it is the greatest nine that ever played. While I have no bitter feelings against McGraw or President Bush, I am strong in my assertion that if the tie had to be played off it should have been settled in a series of three games. This be played off it should have been set-tled in a series of three games. This custom obtains in all departments of sport, and in a precarious contest like baseball it is unfair for a team to be obliged to rush out of the west and play one deciding game. I believed as do all the Chicago followers, that the game should have been awarded to us by the board of directors on the merits by the board of directors on the merits of the case."

THE TIE GAME. The tie game which was responsible for today's sensational play-off has been looked upon from every side as one of the most unfortunate incidents one of the most unfortunate incidents of an extraordivary baseball season. New York and Chicago, were tied with a score of 1 to 1 in the ninth inning of the game played at the Polo grounds on Sept. 23. It was the last half of the ninth inning, Chicago having been retired without breaking the tie. Two of New York's men also were out. There were two men on bases, McCormick on third and Merkle on first and Reidwell. third and Merkle on first, and Bridwell was at bat.

Bridwell smashed a single to center Bridwell smashed a single to center and reached the first base safely, scoring McCornick and forcing Merkle off first base. A dispute arose as to whether Merkle touched the second base. Manager Chance protested, declaring that Merkle did not touch the second base, but ran from the first hase to the club house and the crowd which rushed on the field prevented the Chicago players from getting the ball. Merkle has maintained that he completed the play by touching the second base before running to the clubhouse. After hearing the reports of the two umpires, President Pulliman of the National league declared the game a tie, tional league declared the game a tle, and his decision was upheld by the board of directors of the league. Both New York and Chicago team managers New fork and Chicago team managers have expressed extreme dissatisfaction with the decision, each maintaining that the game should have been credited to their clubs.

The weather outlook gave promise of almost ideal conditions today. Occasional fog banks rolled up from the south, but not a storm cloud was in

Up until that time it was drizzling almost continuously; it was cold and unpleasant generally. But Monday morning-the opening day of the fair-the sun came out and all has been warm and clear. Today saw a repetition of the same pleasant weather, just sunny enough to be warm enough and cool enough to be comfortable. Being Weber day, Ogden folks and neighbors of Weber county constituted a big portion of the crowds which began coming early and give indications of making "a day of it." There's plenty to see and there's plenty to do today as a glance at the program indicates. For lavish pro-vision of openair entertainment, as well as in-door attractions, the thirtieth annual fair of 1908, has all others surpassed. The horse races continue to be a big drawing card, in fact the interest shown in them grows with each succeeding day. The plan of having the open air acts held before the grand stand of the race track made a hit from the start. Long before 2 o'clock—the hour set for the starting of the first race—the grand stand and bleachers were all but jammed and the late arrival: found nothing to do but repeat yesterday's stunt of leaning against the fence surrounding the inside oval.

As special train service has been ar-ranged between Salt Lake and points ranged between Salt Lake and points in the north a majority of visitors will remain in the city to see the evening display of fireworks. The pyrotechnical show this year is declared by all the "best ever," the set pleces being voted especially beautiful. Having something going on (or off) constantly wins with the crowds. Many visitors stayed at the grounds throughout the day, patronizing the restaurant and hungounthe grounds throughout the day, patronizing the restaurant and bun-counters at noon and supper hours. A dignified resident wandering about the grounds, while munching a "hot dog" sandwich is a common sight; no one notices what the other fellow does at the fair and no one cares—everybody is too busy having a good time. is too busy having a good time.

Because hundreds have hit upon the plan of visiting the exhibition buildings early to avoid the rush, the concessions open soon after the breakfast hour. It is a noticeable fact that business It is a noticeable fact that business men of this city find it easier and more comfortable to show their families the better class of shows along the midway in the forenoon. The trained animals are a special drawing card among the little folks: the "Baby Incubators"—a really meritorious show—is visited heavily. Pick, the little pony, is another attraction which delights the children. Tomorrow will see these sideshows get the heaviest patronage of the fair week so far, as thousands of schoolchildren will visit the grounds on the admission rate of 10 cents.

schoolchildren will visit the grounds on the admission rate of 10 cents. Among the free attractions the Norrins in their high diving always get a rousing demonstration. The man drops from a tall tower into a shallow tank of water with the grace of a bird. The woman also makes a drop from a platform not so far up on the tower. The acrobatic, wire-walking, juggling and comedy turns are all of a better class than usually seen at a fair and all please.

The man who made the dive into the net performs no more. He came nearly breaking his neck because of his drunken condition, so President McDonald immediately issued an order that he should not appear again.

Held's band concerts in the stand across the race track are held during races, and get applause always brought out by this organization's splendid renditions.

The fair has grown a third since a year ago, but it still well managed and thoroughly enjoyable.

HUGHES ON IMPORTANCE OF COMING ELECTION

St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 8.—Gov. Charles E. Hughes, of New York, arriving here this morning from Hastings, Neb., spoke before a large audience in the opera house. He said in part: "At this point in the campaign we must not make the mistake of considering only proposed legislation. We must not forget that the next president will have an important relation to the judicial branch. In the next few years there will be four vacancies in the United States supreme court out of the nine positions upon that bench. It the United States supreme court out the nine positions upon that bench. It is not at all improbable that the next president will appoint a majority of the judges of that court. It is the court which in a large degree determines the destiny of the country. The patriots are very much dissatlsfied with the tone of the protests of Servia against the occupation of Bosnia and Herzgevonia.
