AMUSEMENTS.

From light opera to mixed minstrelsy and vaudeville efforts was the leap taken at the Salt Palace last night, with Mr. Coleman instead of Mr. Burton as conductor. As much as Mr. Mulvey has succeeded in pleasing the crowds that have assembled at his amusement hall during the sultry summer nights, it must be said that the jump was entirely for the better. The stage settings and scenery generally were very good, while the change of bill attracted the audience from the opening chorus to the finale of the Black Hussar done by all of the members of the company. There was a demonstrative demand for a repetition of the initial number, but the request was not acceded to for the reason that the program was deemed too long to admit of it. Repeated encores of shorter numbers were, however, freely given. Kohlmeier decided hit and Huff and Abbott did well in their ballad singing, while Melor in the illustrated song act was a marked improvement on what the public has had in this line. Mrs. Taylor in her specialty, "The Black Hussar" and the Florida sextette, and various members of the company in the Little Tin Soldier were given a warm reception.

The bill goes again tonight and for the rest of the week. It does not begin until after the races. Every indication is at present, that the remaining six weeks of the season will be more profitable than the eight that have preceded them. Miss Kirwin is not in this week's opera but is taking a rest for reappearance Monday night.

ELKS' FAIR FEATURES.

The German Village and the Illuminations Will be Amazing.

The Elks' carnival committee has decided on September 21st as traveling men's day. An invitation will be extended to all the commercial traveling men's councils in seven states, Utah, Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, Montana, California and Nevada, to participate in this day's festivities.

The German village will occupy a space of 150,000 feet of ground.

Everything pertaining to the fatherland will be on exhibition in the village. German dancers, Tyrolean singers, have been engaged to do the village especially. F. L. Gardner, chairman of the committee on concessions and privileges, requests all merchants who desire booth space within the carnival enclosure to communicate with him at once, as there are but two hundred booths to let. Dr. W. E. McAllister will act with Dr. W. E. Bee in making traveling men's day a success.

The following Elks have registered at carnival headquarters today:

Fred J. Shering, Helena, Mo. 193.
E. G. Gilbert, Council Bluffs, Mo. 531.
E. Emerson Glafcke, Cheyenne, Wyo., No. 592.

Geo. E. Sherman, Butte, Mont., No. 240.

The ladies' guessing contest for the most appropriate name for the elk, is increasing in guesses each and every day.

It will take twenty-six hundred, sixteen candle power lights and forty arc lights, and loaded to the hilt with two hundred lights to light the carnival enclosure. The arch which is to be erected at West Second South and West Temple, August 15th, will require over 2,000 candles and fifty colored lights to illuminate it.

There will be no carnival game contest. A novel idea has suggested itself pertaining to a selection of a carnival queen, which will be received by the board of public works on Aug. 2.

Under the puzzling caption, "Mormon and Silver," the Denver Post of yesterday prints a choice bit of enterprising journalism. When one considers the fact that the Salt Lake elk has not left this city and the Denver elk has died from the heat, the enterprise of the Post is the more remarkable. Here is the extract:

"Two live elk were centers of attraction at the union depot yesterday afternoon. The Elks' special train over the Rock Island was leaving for Milwaukee and the antlered brotherhood had decided to take along two specimens of their emblem to the beer city of Wisconsin.

Handsome, stately and royally crowned with branching horns were the two creatures of the wilderness. They are well calculated to excite admiration when seen in the streets of Milwaukee. Particular care will be given the big quadrupeds of the eastern trip, and it is expected that they will arrive in Beer town in excellent condition.

At the depot there was much enthusiasm. The Colorado Midland Indian band was greatly applauded, but the elk were the real things. Everybody wanted to see them and crowded around the box car where they stood calmly eating clover hay.

"An attendant will watch over their welfare continually on the journey, and they will not lack water, food or attention. The Salt Lake delegation brought one elk from Utah and Denver Elks furnished the other."

REIGN OF QUEEN ETHELYN BEGINS

Officially Crowned in the Midst of Thousands of Her Admiring Subjects—A Brief and Pretty Ceremony—Features of the Street Fair.

Ornately veiled with myriads of red globes that shone warmly upon thousands of merry-makers, this city in the valley was last evening dedicated to a week of revelry. With cheers of welcome for the new regime, the populace tumbled over its democratic house of cards in one fell swoop. "Queen Ethelyn! Queen Ethelyn!" was on every lip. Never did empress in Rome's fair days enter upon her reign more auspiciously as did her gracious majesty, the queen of the carnival.

And now it is begun. The merchants' free street fair and carnival, which has been in preparation for the last few months, has opened, and will draw its crowds until Saturday night. Queen Ethelyn—a very democratic sovereign, after all, since she was chosen by popular vote—has entered upon her reign of jollity, and will rule her willing subjects with merry sway until comes Rex at the end of the week. Then the festive public will shout with loud acclaim. "The queen is dead! Long live the king!" But now it is Ethelyn—our fair queen. Why not?

In a blaze of electric lights, her majesty was crowned last evening and the golden keys of this fair city were placed in her shapely royal hands. Her coronation, George E. Blair, was dignified and stately, and it is doubtful if a real advisor of royalty ever quite looked the part so well. Of course, some irrepressible small boy had to remark audibly enough for the ears of the subjects to hear. "Have you seen George? He will make you laugh." But, then, that didn't matter. It was too good a ceremony to spoil by a right lark. The coronation, the street wandering up and down, waiting for the big parade to come. Thousands more alighted in and out around the grounds, past the main entrance, and back again, ever percolating. Mob psychology has never been entirely analyzed, but it is a general rule that crowds are good natured. This one was no exception. The queen's coronation, the street wandering up and down, waiting for the big parade to come. Thousands more alighted in and out around the grounds, past the main entrance, and back again, ever percolating. Mob psychology has never been entirely analyzed, but it is a general rule that crowds are good natured. This one was no exception.

Really that was the big sight of the evening. Thousands of people, the street wandering up and down, waiting for the big parade to come. Thousands more alighted in and out around the grounds, past the main entrance, and back again, ever percolating. Mob psychology has never been entirely analyzed, but it is a general rule that crowds are good natured. This one was no exception.

And it was a magnificent crowd. Really that was the big sight of the evening. Thousands of people, the street wandering up and down, waiting for the big parade to come. Thousands more alighted in and out around the grounds, past the main entrance, and back again, ever percolating. Mob psychology has never been entirely analyzed, but it is a general rule that crowds are good natured. This one was no exception.

But then, if it had not been a good natured crowd, there would have been some talk growing over what seemed to be an unnecessary delay in the arrival of the queen. Sovereigns, of course, are not supposed to be late. It wasn't the queen's fault this time. Her courtly train and her regal self were ready and waiting almost an hour before the queen started to move. The queen's foot of her majesty stamped impatiently upon the floor of the royal equipage, and the maids of honor looked as though they could say something to the queen, if it weren't against all rules of court etiquette. But the queen, in Hoyle. However, they all waited and the crowd waited—a long time.

Fully 5,000 people stood in the open space around the throne, and the queen's foot of her majesty stamped impatiently upon the floor of the royal equipage, and the maids of honor looked as though they could say something to the queen, if it weren't against all rules of court etiquette. But the queen, in Hoyle. However, they all waited and the crowd waited—a long time.

Really, the queen was the most disagreeable part of the evening's entertainment. Everything else connected with the coronation of the queen and the presentation of the keys to the city went off splendidly. The queen's foot of her majesty stamped impatiently upon the floor of the royal equipage, and the maids of honor looked as though they could say something to the queen, if it weren't against all rules of court etiquette. But the queen, in Hoyle. However, they all waited and the crowd waited—a long time.

Even before the queen had been crowned and the Landrum ballet had begun, the splendor began to turn loose his discordant bark along the midway. Each wielder of the mighty maceophone tried to outdo the other, and each show was "Mahvelous! Mahvelous!"

And there are one or two really good shows along barker's row. There are also some bad ones—some that are very bad.

"Lunette, the maid of the air" is one of the good ones. She is a comely woman, who performs an optical illusion that is really deserving of patronage. The Ferris wheel also drew its crowds deservedly, and Juno, the Greek goddess, provides series of standard plasticine, and a series of clean. "La Lista" does fair imitations of "La Lole Fuller" in serpentine dancing, but when one has seen Lole the show on the midway will have no attraction.

And now the bad shows. The Oriental Theater drew the biggest crowd of the evening, and the entertainment provided was the worst. The show of the kind ever given with police co-operation in Salt Lake. Music dancing was the feature of the evening and, no doubt, the actors of the performance were disquieting, but several remarks passed between the "ladies" and the spectators that should not have been spoken even in a dive. Four or five noisome were made, but no effort was made to suppress the vulgarity. "Boo, the snake eater" is too disgusting to be discussed. The "Streets of Cairo" people snarled their entertainment by allowing their wife, thrower to use vile language in the hearing of the audience. No respectable people have a right in that show. Why the police permit this kind of disgusting oriental dancers to do business here is only accounted for in the fact that this is a real wide open city.

There are numerous other entertainments that were neither very good nor very bad.

SALT LAKE TEMPLE.

The family paper is pre-eminently the evening paper. Only a small percentage of any family has leisure to do more than to scan the morning paper, which comes into the household when the head of the family is rushing to prepare for work, the children are bustling off to school, and the housewife has her hands full of the usual morning duties. At night the day's events are over, calm broods over the household and the evening paper is taken up when all its contents can be heard, weighed and discussed. The evening paper is decidedly the paper for advertisers.—Common Sense.
