PHILADELPHIA, June 27. — After weathering the terrific gales, furious snowstorms and mountainous seas, the British bark Salina, Captain Salter, has arrived here from the ice-bound coast of Greenland. His crew met with great hardships from the chilly blasts of the Arctic regions. Such weather was never experienced before by any of the crew.

The Salina left New York March 20th for Greenland and reached there after some little difficulty May 1st. She was loaded and sailed from this port May 13th. For the first few days she experienced ordinary weather and got well to the southward where there arose a terrific gale. Although the wind howled from the south it was intensely cold, and rain, hail and sleet added to the dangers. Every stitch of canvas was taken in and under bare poles the Salina was driven with terrible force through the icy sea. All on board were engaged in making things secure about the decks. It was almost impossible to see a quarter of a mile ahead and in constant dread of striking an ice-berg, Captain Salter spent a week of intense anxiety. Sometimes the bark would scrape alongside some monstrous bergs so thickly was the region studded with the dangerous obstructions. Captain Salter found his vessel was about twenty miles north of the place from where he started. Nothing was heard or seen of the Peary expedition. Captain Salter says that the prevailing southerly winds have rendered the approach to Greenland almost impossible as the sea is environed with huge icebergs. The Salina sustained no damage whatever.

Last night a dispatch was received at this port by Wessenberk & Company, agents for the Norwegian Tank bark Unloner, which sailed from this port June 1 for Dieppe, stating that she had just arrived there almost a complete wreck. To save the vessel from total destruction, Captain Berz had to jettison a large portion of her cargo. The Unloner is a new steam barge and left here laden with 878,000 gallons of crude oil. Her watertight bulkheads were closed and saved the crew from destruction.

PARIS, June 28. — Detectives in Montpellier decided to search the house of a man named Granier, who was heard to remark last Sunday: "By this time Carnot must have received his quietus." When Granier's house was surrounded and the detectives burst in the door, Granier, who was eating supper, sprang to his feet, he picked up a long and sharp knife, plunged it into his abdomen and with a few swift turns disembowelled himself. He expired almost immediately.

The police authorities say they have established beyond a doubt that Santo, Granier and Laborg, who was arrested on Monday, and others not yet in custody, plotted the death of President Carnot in order to avenge the executions of Ravachol, Vaillant and Henri.

Santo will be tried July 23 for parricide instead of murder. The penal code decrees that an attempt against the head of the state be so described and punished. Santo will be conducted to the place of execution in his shirt, barefooted and with his head covered by a black veil.
