THE SYMPHONY CONCERT The twelfth concert of the Salt Lake Symphony orchestra, and the first under the new director, Prof. McClellan, was given yesterday afternoon at the Colonial theater. The event was viewed A fine variety, each as considerable of an experiment for one a splendid quality several reasons: First, it was the first time that a Sunday afternoon concert brush that will give had been tried in the city; second, many of the friends of the organization had deplored the necessity of any Sunday performance whatever; third, the concert was announced for a house given over to the popular grade of attrac-MILITARY

The verdict rendered at the close was The turn-out was The verdict rendered at the close was an enthusiastic one. The turn-out was one of the largest and most brilliant to which the orchestra ever played, and the expressions of gratification were general and genuing. Mr. McClellan raized his baton over 62 musicians, most of them trained mon, but quite a number of advanced students. The usual effect of so many ladles in the string sections was specially pleasing. All continue to show decided advance-ment, and Prof. McClellan is entitled to credit for having trained them especial-ily in precision and attack; the work of the strings was thoroughly notice-able in this regard. He held his players under good control throughout, and they worked with care and taste, and in general, with excellent effect. The the applause accorded "The Rosary" was among the strongest of the after-noon, Indeed It was something of a disappointment not to have it given again. Another feature which was greatly appreciated was the length of the entertainment, which lasted just an hour and a half, and sent the audience away wishing for more instead of wearled with what it had had. The principal interest of the after-noon was probably bestowed on the young planist, Mr. Spencer Clawson Jr., who is just home after an ex-tended course of study in Vienna, under the renoned Leschetsziky. He rendered the first movement of the "Emperor Concerto," by Beethoven, in a fashion which showed his entire mastery of his instrument. The num-ber required 20 minutes in rendering, but was given entirely from memory. Mr. Clawson's playing is distinguished by an ease and delicacy simply as-tonishing, and the difficult work, when the two hands seemed to be running away from each other in opposite difficult runs and thrills were dashed off as if they were so many triffes. Throughout the entire number, Mr. off as if they were so many trifles. Throughout the entire number, Mr. Clawson held his audience with a tension which showed how thoroughly tension which showed how thoroughly his work was understood and appre-ciated. He was called back twice and made to yield an encore, an ex-tuilsite waitz by the Russian com-poser Sopelinikoff, which was also listened to with breathless attention and vociferously applauded. In ac-companying the difficult concerto, the erchecture acain did beautiful Work companying the difficult concerto, the orchestra again did beautiful work. Of the other numbers as a whole, it is difficult to specialize, all were so evenly good. The work of the strings in the eight parts of the "Lohengrin" Prelude was simply ex-quisite, even though there was a slight quavering in the gossamer like notes at the finish. The "Madam Butterfly" selection was effectively rendered, the brasses doing good work, and the jar of only one false note being noticeable in the entire rendition.

The "Traumerei," though very familiar, was exquisite as ever. Some nuslelates were inclined to think the movement a little slow; as others thought the march from Tannhauser a little rapid, but there are always differences of inter-pretation on the part of conductors. The Mendelssohn movement from the Italian symphony was charmingly done. Among the lighter numbers "The Ro-sary" struck the fancy of the audience most strongly, even though there was occasionally a lack of proper balance in the parts. Book Announcement.

Each Christmas season finds us with a larger, more varied and n better selected stock of books. We are encouraged each year by the growing taste for good books and we are compelled to buy heavily to meet the increasing demand.

Our purchases were made early, so we are ready for the early buyer who likes a large and complete stock to select from.

There are thousands of things which are sold for holiday giftwhose value is dimited. Many of them hardly last through the holiday season. But a book is more likely to be cherished and to be read and reread long after Christmas has become a memory. For this season the giving of books is becoming increasingly popular. This demand has en

Mrs. Tuttle presided at the harp in her usual artistic fashion, and made her last appearance with the orchestra for the present, as she and her husband are about to leave on a tour of the far east. It is to be hoped she will resume her place next season. Manager Spencer was greatly grati-fied at the size of the audience; though the receipts were hardly equal to the expenses, owing to the tremendous outexpenses, owing to the tremendous out-lay for rehearsals and the paying of so many men, yet the loss will be con-siderably less than it has been in the past. The analytical notes prepared by Prof. Lund and Prof. Brines made an appreciated feature.
